CORN BELT SAFE FOR HOOVER, IS WORD TO G. O. P.

Crops' Work for Him, Leaders Report.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Tammany farmers are making the corn belt safe for Hoover. Nature with bountiful crops is working for the Republican ticket and November will bring victory for Hoover and Curtis. Such was the burden of the tidings brought to yesterday's conference of western Republicans at the Drake hotel.

Eighty party workers from 27 states delivered all the doubtful states to the Hoover-Curtis ticket. They claimed the zone where agricultural unrest has displayed itself, and they chalked up Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, North Dakota, Missouri, Wyoming, and Nebraska in the Republican column.

Claim Far Western States.

The party leaders claimed the coast states and the Rocky mountain states would be safe for Hoover. They delivered border states. They saw rosy prospects in Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee, Oklahoma. Invading the solid south, they annexed North Carolina and Texas.

They didn't seem to leave much for Al Smith. Wisconsin and South Dakota were the only states that were subjects of pessimistic reports.

Hubert Work, Republican national chairman, at the close of the day's conferences issued the statement that he was both "refreshed and reassured."

And Eastern Seaboard, Too.

"During the day," said Dr. Work, "we had assurances that Hoover will carry every seaboard state along the Atlantic; that the Republican ticket will sweep across the northern tier of states, clear to and down the Pacific coast.

"On the basis of what we have learned, we now list North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Oklahoma, border states, among those giving promise of showing up in the Hoover column in November."

But many of the party leaders said there is plenty of work to be done in the vineyard. Especially in the corn, wheat, hog, and dairy zone. Farmers who now are for Al Smith, some maintained, will change the tune in November. Dr. Work dwelt on the fight.

Work Warns of Hard Fight.

"While reports from all quarters were reassuring," he said, "we realize that the Republican party is starting on the greatest fight in its history.

"The opposition party is better organized than ever before. I have no doubt it will have more funds at its disposal than ever. All this is warning that we must put into the campaign more energy, we must perfect our organization in each state and county and carry through the precinct.

"Hoover will be the choice of the country in November. Our task in the immediate future is to better acquaint the people with the record and achievements of Hoover and Curtis.

No Letup, His Program.

"In my long political career I do not recall a time when men and women everywhere were on their toes at the very outset of the campaign, ready and willing to contribute their bit. This early enthusiasm is impressive, but it must be maintained from now until election day.

"We are in this campaign to win; we will win, but persistent effort must be put forth; there must be no letup."

Mr. Work leaves this afternoon for Palo Alto, Cal., to attend the Hoover notification ceremonies. He is to hold a western conference at San Francisco on Aug. 13.

Women Play Important Rôle.

The campaign will lean more heavily than usual on the women. Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, national chairwoman, held conferences to perfect the plans for women's organization.

"In this campaign," remarked Chairman Work, "Republican men and women are working for the first time on a fifty-fifty basis. We had assurance from more than one of the ladies that the women's vote will turn the tide to Hoover in what normally are close or doubtful states."

Wisconsin Fight Postponed.

The Wisconsin controversy between the regulars and the Blaine-La Follettites did not come up. Mr. Work said the contest is in the hands of the executive committee.

It is considered more than probable that it may not be decided until after the election, unless meanwhile the La

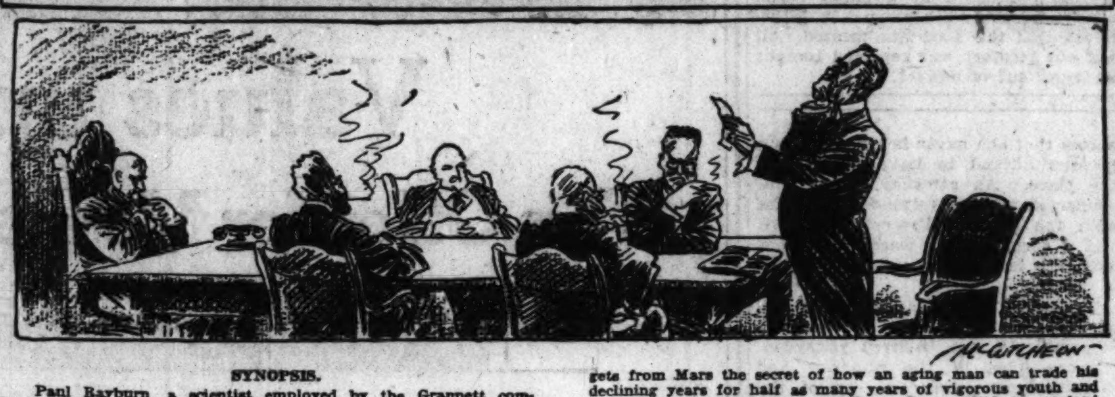
THE MASTER OF THE WORLD



SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, a scientist employed by the Grannett company, discovers a method by which he thinks he can talk with Mars. He loses his job, but continues his experiments, and, after financial difficulties, in which he is aided by Theodora Downs, the rather plain cousin of his former employer's daughter, Eleanor Grannett, he gets into communication with Mars, learning, among other things, how to change gold into platinum and how to make women beautiful.

Rayburn is waited upon by a group of eminent financiers, who have arrived to offer him $1,000,000 for his inventions, while admitting among themselves that they are worth five billions, but, reading their minds, he laughs at them and leaves them astounded. For his next experiment Rayburn selects Fay Thornton, known on the stage as the world's homeliest woman, and announces that he will make her beautiful.

The success achieved by Rayburn in this experiment created more of a sensation than any of his other discoveries, but despite his announcement that he will conduct no more beautifying experiments, one persistent dowager connives with Grannett, his former employer, to meet the young man socially.

Rayburn discovers that the Grannett company is using questionable methods to obtain use of his discoveries and decides to chastise Grannett, his former employer, some more. He gets from Mars the secret of how an aging man can trade his declining years for half as many years of vigorous youth and then makes arrangements with Uncle Jim, an elderly employé of the Grannett companies, and tries the experiment on him. While his experiments in rejuvenation are in progress some one tries to kill Rayburn, but he miraculously escapes.

The President of the United States sends for him and he learns that several nations are plotting to take his life. He assures the President and his cabinet that his discoveries are at the disposal of his country, but hopes that they will be used to prevent rather than carry on war.

While the matter is being discussed representatives of five world powers ask for and receive an appointment with the President, and Rayburn is taken to the home of the secretary of the treasury, where he is introduced to the family as Mr. Margate, a librarian. He meets the secretary's daughter, who invites him to a social affair to which a number of foreign ambassadors have been invited. Masquerading as Mr. Margate Rayburn attracts little attention at the affair, but suddenly he is recognized by the dowager whom he had refused to make beautiful and the room is soon in an uproar.

The next day the President meets the ambassadors from the European countries, the spokesman warning him that if their nations are not allowed to benefit from the Rayburn discoveries an economic boycott will be declared.

CHAPTER XXXX.

A tense silence followed the ambassador's statement.

It was a serious threat. Of all weapons, the economic boycott is one of the most powerful as well as one of the most difficult to combat and this was what the European Economic union was proposing to use against the United States.

The President gravely regarded the speaker.

"Am I to understand, Mr. Ambassador, that the nations represented by you five gentlemen will boycott all American goods unless they are permitted to share the benefits of the Rayburn discoveries?"

"Self-preservation demands it," answered the spokesman of the ambassadors. "Otherwise our industries are crushed. We could not hope to compete with you."

He glanced at his colleagues and as they nodded acquiescence, he continued:

"It is necessary to speak plainly. The United States is the most formidable reality in the world today. In an economic sense it is an organization of whose power and wealth we, in the Old World, have only a dim conception."

He consulted a slip of paper which he took from a black leather portfolio.

"However, here are some figures we are able to grasp. With barely six per cent of the world's population, you have more railways than all the rest of the world. You use more power, steam, oil, and electricity than the rest of the world. You have four-fifths of all the motor vehicles, two-thirds of the telephones; you consume nearly three-fourths of the world's production of rubber and oil and two-thirds of the world's silk. So I could go on, Mr. President, a dreary recital of your economic dominance."

Abruptly changing the trend, he said: "Your whole organization is on a different plane to that of Europe. It is a plane of immense mass production enabling great wealth to be achieved by the individual, enabling the worker to earn wages far in excess of those earned in the Old World, enabling the whole mechanism of industry to revolve at a greater pace than in any of our narrow and circumscribed areas. And now"—here his voice tightened with intense feeling—"and now, on top of all this, your dominance is immeasurably magnified by these new Rayburn discoveries which will revolutionize all industrial methods."

He shrugged his shoulders—a gesture of helplessness. He glanced at his gloomy confrères and a note of defiance sprang into his voice.

"We must either be allowed to share those discoveries or else we must oppose you with all the economic means in our power. Your nation, Mr. President, is the leading partner in the great economic empire of North and South America, a unit of 200,000,000 people. Opposed to you will be the European Economic union with its colonies, representing 400,000,000 people. At the back of this lies Russia with its 150,000,000 and China with 400,000,000, the former possibly becoming an annex of Europe, the latter perhaps guided and influenced in large measure by Japan. Added to these vast populations is Pan-Britannia with 450,000,000."

With voice rising and eyes blazing, he thus summarized the forces to be employed in the economic boycott.

The President's face flushed at the threat. His lips compressed grimly, but when he spoke his voice was steady.

"I should regret most deeply the employment of the reprisals you propose," he said slowly. "It would strain our relations to a point where continued friendship would be seriously menaced. I would go far to prevent such a calamity."

There was an eager stir as the ambassadors leaned forward.

"Then you are favorably disposed towards sharing those discoveries—in the interest of peace and good feeling?"

"That would be my personal inclination. If I could be convinced that the Rayburn discoveries were used only in the arts of commerce, I should unhesitatingly advocate their free use by all nations. The United States has more to gain by living in a friendly world than in a resentful and hostile world. It is the possibility that some nation, once possessed of these secrets, might be tempted to employ them as aggressive instrumentalities of warfare, that I hesitate."

"But we would solemnly covenant not to use them in such way," eagerly exclaimed one of the ambassadors, his eyes shining. He looked about him for confirmation and there was a vigorous nodding of heads.

The President studied them. How much could he rely upon such assurances? Experience had made him wary and, to his regret, suspicious. If only he could read the unspoken thoughts that lay deep behind those inscrutable faces! He wondered if Rayburn, with that uncanny intuition he had demonstrated only the day before, could sound those elusive depths. He found himself half wishing that he were now here.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Legal force was applied today by the United State government to bring back to this country Henry M. Blackmer, capitalist, oil magnate and missing key witness in the Teapot Dome oil case, from his refuge of self imposed exile in France.

A presidential warrant was issued empowering U. S. Attorney George Stephan to send an officer to Europe to arrest Blackmer and return him to Denver, where indictments are pending charging the oil man with perjury in connection with his alleged failure to make proper income tax return.

Coolidge Signs Warrant.

The warrant was signed by President Coolidge and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg.

"You are hereby authorized and empowered," declares the warrant, "to take and hold him [Blackmer] in your custody and conduct him from such place of delivery in France by the most direct and convenient means of transportation to and into the United States, there to surrender the said Henry M. Blackmer to the proper authorities of the United States of America."

Extradition of Blackmer is authorized under the provisions of existing treaty relations between this government and France. The charges against him were contained in indictments after federal tax liens for a total of $8,498,935.78 were filed against his property in Denver and New York on June 4.

France Already Notified.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The French foreign office has been requested by the state department to turn Henry M. Blackmer over to the custody of the United States.

Application for the extradition proceedings was made at the state department by the department of justice about three weeks ago. Officers from the department of justice were sent to France a week later.

Under the treaty France can decide whether she thinks that Blackmer should be extradited.

The penalty for the offense charged against Blackmer is five years' imprisonment.

Soon after the Teapot Dome investigation started Blackmer went to Europe and there he stayed despite repeated attempts to persuade him to return to testiy. Shortly after the senate began its investigation it learned of the Continental Trading Company, Ltd., an oil purchasing company incorporated in Canada. Blackmer was one of the organizers.

Eventually the government traced $736,000 in bonds, alleged to have been Blackmer's share of profits from a single oil transaction for which the Continental company was formed, to a New York safety deposit box.

Home of Polls Quiz Witness Is Bomb Target

William C. Woods, colored, 5000 South State street, one of the witnesses before the special grand jury investigating terrorism and frauds at the last primary election was the target of a bomb early this morning. The bomb, constructed of a piece of iron pipe filled with powder and iron slugs, and set with a time arrangement to explode at 4 o'clock was placed in front of the door to Wood's home on the second floor of the apartment building. It did little damage and no one was injured.

Woods told Lieut. Klatzco at the Wabash avenue station that he was called twice before the grand jury to testify concerning election conditions in the 14th ward. The last time he testified, he said, was last Thursday, when he was asked about the activities of Howard Reddy, a candidate for ward committeeman at the primary against James Breen, the Thompson candidate, and at present first assistant corporation counsel. He said he told the grand jury of an altercation he had on primary election day with Reddy. Woods is a real estate dealer.

GUARDS RESCUE TWO DRIFTING IN BOAT FIVE HOURS

Coast guards under the command of Chief Boatswain's Mate C. E. Howell early last evening went to the rescue of two occupants of a 22 foot gasoline boat that had been drifting helplessly in the lake off Howard street for nearly five hours. The craft was towed to the Lincoln park lagoon.

Milo G. Beman, 224 Florimond street, a part owner of the boat, and Paul Ott were on board. Their engine had gone dead.

POLISH FLYERS MISSING AS TIME LIMIT IS ENDING

Atlantic Fogs Hold Secret of Fate.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Paris, Aug. 4.—It is believed that the Polish flyers, Majs. Kasimir Kubala and Louis Idzikowski, may have turned back in mid-ocean and landed tonight in some desolate spot on the coast of Brittany, whence they would be unable to communicate immediately. The flyers had sufficient gas to return to the French coast when they were sighted by the British steamer Amakura.

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The fate of another westbound air venture is hidden in the fog wastes of the Atlantic tonight.

At midnight eastern standard time [the same as Chicago daylight time] tonight, Maj. Louis Ijzikowski and Maj. Kasimir Kubala had been in the air slightly more than 48 hours since they had left Le Bourget field in France on a flight to New York.

Their single motored biplane, named by the Polish flyers Marshal Pilsudski, carried gas sufficient for 50 hours high speed flying. At low speed they could remain in the air 56 hours if no storm was met.

Two meager messages from ships at sea—each closer to the European coast than to America—suggested that the flyers may have turned back toward Europe. The first report came from the Aztec, a small freighter. At 10:40 last night, eastern standard time, she sighted a plane flying in a "northwesterly direction," its motor apparently functioning perfectly.

Vanishes in Darkness.

No signals were exchanged, the message stated, and the plane vanished in the darkness. The Aztec at the time was about 200 miles north of the Azores.

The British steamship Amakura, steaming along 200 miles north of the Aztec in 46.20 north latitude, 20.40 west longitude, sighted a plane two hours later. The Amakura wireless operator sent the following message: "An airplane approached us from the westward, encircled the ship at a height of 500 feet, and disappeared northward, flying very fast. The plane gave us no signal."

It was daylight when the second ship sighted the trans-Atlantic plane and the visibility was clear. The report specifically states that the plane came down to within 500 feet of the ship. At that time the flyers were about 700 miles from England and 1,100 from France. They had ample fuel to carry them back, but if the Pilsudski still was in the eastern Atlantic at dawn, flying men here declare, it never could reach the American mainland before its gasoline gave out.

Hopeful Crowd Waits.

Nothing had been heard of the scudding plane since dawn, but a hopeful crowd began to gather at Mitchel field shortly after noon to welcome the Polish pair.

Preparations were made at all of the city's flying fields to receive the Poles. Scout planes went out to guide the visitors in, but they returned with discouraging reports. The visibility was poor.

The Polish minister and a delegation of fellow countrymen waited through the long, hot afternoon at Mitchel field.

But late tonight the hopes of the most optimistic were exhausted and the crowds went home.

Fog Covers Atlantic.

Forecasts over the Atlantic told of fog and haze. But there had been a strong tail wind on the first part of the flight that must have sent the swift Pilsudski along like a bullet. The plane had a maximum speed of 130 miles an hour, and the flyers had hoped to make the trip in 36 hours.

The two Poles had planned to fly directly over the Azores and then on to Nova Scotia and down the coast line to New York, making the trip in approximately 36 hours. This would have put thtm at Mitchel field early this afternoon as they left Le Bourget field in Paris at 11:40 a. m., Friday, eastern standard time.

The two former war enemies—for Kubala flew with the Austrians—are fatalists. They were warned of thick weather over the Atlantic, but Idzikowski, according to cabled reports, smiled and answered, "Nitchevo"—which is to say in the Russian language, "What does it matter?"

There was no radio on the graceful

Lowden Still a Republican; Will Not Bolt

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—There is no prospect that former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, foremost among public men of prominence as a champion of farm relief, will desert the Republican party or shift his allegiance in the present campaign to Gov. Smith as a candidate for President.

That much may be stated on authority. When questioned at his summer home in the Thousand Islands today as to whether he plans to take an active part in the campaign, he said:

"I have made no statement to any one since that I made to the Republican national convention, in which I clearly set forth my position with regard to the agricultural plank in the Republican national platform and my own attitude with regard to the nomination. I am not prepared to make any statement now."

Zeal for Farmer Unabated.

One thing, however, former Gov. Lowden made perfectly clear. Regardless of what part he may or may not play in the campaign, there has been no abatement of his zeal for the cause of the farmer.

While disappointed in the Republican platform's plank on agriculture, Mr. Lowden sees no occasion for despair. With the farmer forming the backbone of the Republican party in the west, he believes there is yet time for his party to grant to American agriculture the sympathetic understanding and consideration which, he says, it has so freely extended to other industries, even though this should involve a somewhat "forced" construction of the platform declaration on agriculture and a deviation from the stand taken by President Coolidge.

Mr. Lowden would not comment on the developments in New York City during the last few days, including the meeting between Gov. Smith and George N. Peek, out of which came a suggestion that Smith might have Lowden's support.

Will Coöperate if Asked.

When his attention was called to the assurance given by Gov. Smith that, in the event of his election he would at once call together the best minds enlisted in the agrarian cause, including ex-Gov. Lowden, to help him formulate his plan for farm relief, Mr. Lowden said, the governor could count on him. He declared:

"I will whole heartedly coöperate with the next President of the United States, whoever he may be, provided my coöperation is wanted, for the solution of this problem in which I am more deeply interested than in any other."

Mr. Lowden listened in silence when his attention was called to a recent statement of Gov. Smith's in which he rejected the method of application of the equalization fee provided for in the McNary-Haugen bill. He would make no comment.

Leans to Equalization Fee.

It is recalled, however, that Mr. Lowden pronounced the equalization fee the central feature of that measure, he declared that without this provision it would be very much like a tariff measure without any schedules.

He has stated repeatedly that if a better method of farm relief could be devised, he would be heartily in favor of it.

Mr. Lowden said he had at this time no new message for the American farmer. He believes that the farmers are anxiously awaiting the acceptance speeches of the candidates. He carried with him from Kansas City no personal regrets, but has felt keenly that, in a position which has rendered it impossible for him to be an active figure without going back on principles and policies which he has been advocating for years, his aloofness should have been construed in some quarters as due to pique over his failure to receive more consideration from the Republican national convention.

Organizes Own "Tag Day;" Is Tagged by the Police

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 4.—(AP)—A "Dandelion Tag day" in Springfield landed Walter Grey, who says his home is in Cincinnati, in jail tonight under $2,000 bond. Representing himself as connected with a women's relief corps, Grey drove into Springfield this morning accompanied by his wife and small child and enlisted the aid of fifteen or twenty girls to sell poppies. No poppies were available so artificial dandelions were substituted. One of the girls became suspicious, police investigated and his arrest followed. The girls collected between $150 and $200.

Brennan's Improvement Marked, Hospital Reports

George E. Brennan, Democratic leader, was reported to have passed an easy day at the John B. Murphy Memorial hospital yesterday. Hospital authorities said that while it is too early to say that all danger is over, his improvement in the last two days has been marked.

TRANSFERS 19 CAPTAINS IN HIS FIRST SHAKEUP

New Force Put In at Maxwell Street.

William F. Russell, Chicago's new commissioner of police, in a general order yesterday affecting nearly every police district began what is expected to result in a reorganization of the department.

The three outstanding features of the order are the promotions of Captains John Stege and John Egan and the complete obliteration of the Maxwell street police organization as it has existed since the retirement of Mayor Dever. Capt. Stege's promotion makes the deputy commissioner in command of the detective division, his reinstatement to the rolls having already been announced. Capt. Egan becomes chief of detectives.

Capt. Wm. E. O'Connor, whom Stege supplants, is retired to an outlying station. And so is Capt. Michael Grady, who is replaced by Capt. Egan.

Shakeup Hits Eller Ward.

The transfer of the entire personnel of Maxwell street station was regarded in police and political circles as of the deepest significance. This station is the police headquarters of the Bloody Twentieth ward. And it is this ward over which Morris Eller, who was indicted by the Loesch special grand jury last Friday, publicly claimed political mastery. Eller's son, Judge Emmanuel Eller, was indicted on the same counts as his father. And among the counts in the indictment are specific accusations of fostering houses of prostitution and gambling places.

Commissoner Russell's order transfers from the station every person in the command of Capt. Daniel Lynch down to the police stenographer. The new commander will be Capt. Matthew Zimmer, who was a deputy chief of police under the Dever administration.

Zimmer Is Given Command.

Zimmer has become known as a grim police commander, tight lipped as to conversation and uncompromising in applying the law. During former Commissioner Hughes' incumbency he was kept sitting on a bench in the detective bureau, technically a captain, but practically debarred from contributing to police work.

Along with Capt. Zimmer there will go into Maxwell street 142 patrolmen and officers selected to Zimmer's purposes. When the police order takes effect at 8 o'clock this morning a general exodus is expected in the Bloody Twentieth.

A total of 328 policemen were affected by the Russell order, 19 of them captains, 13 lieutenants, 26 sergeants, and 270 patrolmen.

The Captains Transferred.

Captain.	From.	To.
James Allman	Brighton Par.	New City
M. Zimmer	Deputy's roll	Maxwell street
D. A. Lynch	Maxwell street	Irving Park
G. Moran	New City	Detective Bur.
Chas. Larkin	Detective Bur.	Sheffield
W. E. O'Connor	Detective Bur.	Brighton Park
Michael Grady	Detective Bur.	Kensington
P. Kelliher	Canalport	Detective Bur.
J. P. Horan	Deering	Warren avenue
Wm. Killeen	Austin	Detective Bur.
D. Fitzgerald	Irving Park	Austin
M. Delaney	Burnside	Deering
W. Malone	Warren Ave.	Canalport
P. Gallery	Rogers Park	Detective Bur.
A. Christiansen	Deputy's roll	Rogers Park
L. Garrick	Town Hall	Desplaines St.
H. McCarthy	Sheffield	Town Hall
J. Prendergast	Kensington	Hyde Park
J. M. Johnson	Deputy's roll	Burnside

It was announced briefly from police headquarters in the city hall that this is the first of a series of reorganization changes. Commissioner Russell and Deputy Stege applied themselves continuously from Friday noon until 3 o'clock yesterday preparing the transfer orders.

Many Changes Expected.

The situation as displayed before the new police administration on taking office developed too many ills for immediate remedy, it was reported. Thus the detective bureau and Maxwell street invited first attention.

Among the functions established by former Commissioner Hughes which may next expect attention are those of "special police attorney" and "police criminologist." The former attachment to the pay roll is enjoyed by John Tyrrell. And this office of special police attorney was established by Huges in spite of the fact that the corporation counsel's office is the statutory bureau for the examination of the city's legal business and contains dozens of lawyers. Tyrrell travels in a large police department automobile driven by a police chauffeur at taxpayers' expense. He is paid $10,000 a year out of the contingent fund of the commissioner of police.

17 Months of Police Attorney.

Tyrrell's outstanding exploit in seventeen months of the Thompson administration was to gather, prepare and present the evidence upon which Capts. Stege, Dennis Carroll, and Daniel Murphy were dismissed from the service.

The occupation of "police criminologist" is allotted to Dr. Joseph Springer, formerly a coroner's physician. He also receives $10,000 a year out of the contingent fund of the commissioner and he likewise enjoys a seat in the tonneau of a police automobile driven by a police chauffeur, all paid for by the police department. Prior to the employment of Dr. Springer it has been considered the business of the coroner's office to supply technical and medical aid in the detection of criminals.

Scrutinize Detective Bureau.

These are two of the super-thief-catching methods devised by former Commissioner Hughes. Others, it is said, will receive appropriate attention as the reorganization of the department proceeds.

When the Persian horde attacked the Greeks and sought a passage at Thermopylae they were held at bay for an exasperatingly long time by 300 Spartans. But under Hughes it has been found that the Chicago detective bureau sheltered 700 assorted policemen, detectives and officials, more than twice as many as held off the entire Persian army. Ten police captains have been sitting gloomily on the benches tilting their hats first one way and then another.

Bodyguarding Saps Force.

In the Maxwell street district, now to be reorganized, there were assigned a captain, three lieutenants, thirteen sergeants, and 143 patrolmen, of which number only two sergeants performed any direct police duty and two patrolmen walked their beats. The others were on special assignment to guard homes of bomb threatened politicians—three, for example, assigned to Edward Moore, Morris Eller's colleague-candidate for sanitary district—and to public and semi-public special duty elsewhere. They were on the Maxwell street pay roll but never went near there.

It is computed that with the special details of 1,400 men and with sick leaves and days off the department has been operating at about one-half efficiency. Christian P. Paschen is another to have a city paid bodyguard of two policemen. A list of these is expected to be made public soon. It has been repeatedly rumored that the special detail racket has extended to the protection of well known gangsters.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 4.—(AP)—For the first time since the Roosevelt movement in 1912, plans are being laid for a vigorous Republican party presidential campaign in Georgia. The state Hoover campaign committee today enlarged itself from five to twenty-one members and called a meeting of the whole committee for next Wednesday to draft plans to take the campaign for the Republican ticket into every county.

At the same time a committee of Democrats issued a call for a statewide rally here next Wednesday to organize a Young Men's Democratic League of Georgia. The purpose of the organization will be to carry the Smith-Robinson campaign into every county.

The Hoover committee said it counted on adding to the normal Republican vote the ballots of all Democrats who do not wish to vote for Gov. Smith.

VARE SLIGHTLY IMPROVED, HIS DOCTOR REPORTS

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The condition of Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, seriously ill here, was reported as showing slight improvement tonight over what it had been this afternoon when physicians said the patient was "practically in a state of stupor."

A bulletin issued late tonight by Dr. Elwood J. Kirby, Mr. Vare's personal physician, said:

"There is not much change in the senator's condition. His temperature is down a trifle. He is resting quietly. He has not lost any ground—neither has he gained any. His temperature is down from 103 to 101."

Later Dr. Kirby said: "The mere fact that Mr. Vare has not lost any ground and that his temperature is down is very favorable. He is expected to live through the night and may hold out two or three days. His reflexes are back again and he is also talking pretty rationally now."

13 CONGRESSMEN BEGIN TOUR OF BORDER LAKES

The six day trip is being made to study the region involved in the controversy over the construction of dams along the Canadian border lakes and the proposed bill creating an international boundary park out of the Superior national and Quetico national forest.

Woman and Husband Burned in Naphtha Blast

Mrs. Frances Bond, 22, of 105 South Lotus avenue, was seriously burned early this morning when naphtha in which she was cleaning a suit for her husband, John, became ignited and set fire to her clothing. Bond rushed to her aid and was severely burned. Their screams brought Bond's mother, Mrs. Carrie Weiss, 45, who was wrapping the couple in blankets when firemen arrived. She was slightly burned. At the Frances Willard hospital it was said Mrs. Bond may die.

3 KILLED WHEN STORM BREAKS N. Y. HOT SPELL

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—A violent thunderstorm breaking in Coney island, Rockaway beach, and Sheepshead bay at 7:30 o'clock tonight brought partial relief from the heat which had enveloped this city for the last three days. The storm, which resulted in the deaths of three persons, broke almost without warning and caused a stampede of 800,000 or more persons at the Coney island beaches.

Patrolman Arthur Fach was killed when he tried to move a dangling electric power wire with his wet night stick. Gertrude Neidenberg, 16, was killed when she was shoved from the platform of the Ocean parkway station of the B. M. T. and came in contact with the third rail. Mrs. Edna Conners, 37, of Coney island, was killed by lightning while swimming at Gravesend beach.

The mercury in New York City climbed to 91 degrees, equaling the record mark for Aug. 4, established in 1888.

PANAMA ELECTS PRESIDENT TODAY AS TROOPS GUARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, Aug. 4.—Deserted by American canal employés, soldiers and sailors and with the American and other clubs empty, Panama awaits tomorrow's presidential election. Panama is quiet. Interest in the interior towns is lacking.

All roads to the Panama Canal Zone are guarded by American sentries. The troops are ready to enter the republic should any emergency arise. Despite the opposition's decision to abstain from voting, the national electoral jury has ruled that all votes cast will be counted and recorded.

It is apparent that Florencio Harmodia Arosemena will be elected, witn almost all the members of the chambei of deputies supoprting him.

DAVIS INDICATES U. S. MAY DOUBLE BRITAIN'S QUOTA

[Copyright: 1928: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Great interest has been aroused in Scotland by a statement made here recently by J. J. Davis, United States secretary of labor, that congress probably will pass a bill which Mr. Davis supports almost doubling the annual quota of 34,000 emigrants from Great Britain and northern Ireland to America. United States consulates in Scotland now have more than 50,000 applicants for visés on their waiting lists, and the number is being increased by sixty every day. Even if Scotland's present quota of 12,300 is doubled, it will take two years to wipe out this list, which is largely composed of the wives and children of men already settled in America.

Boy and Girl Bitten by Dogs of Neighbors

Two children were bitten by neighbors' dogs yesterday and were given emergency treatment to protect them from rabic infection. Thomas Mulcahey, 12, of 8806 South Michigan avenue, suffered a bite on the right arm. Pearl Odette, 3, of 3318 North Robey street, was bitten about the face as she ran down the back stairs of her home. Both dogs were taken to the city pound for observation.

ELLER TRUE BILLS START RUSH FOR IMMUNITY BATHS

Polls Terrorists Ready to Talk, Says Stege.

The indictment of Morris Eller, self-styled boss of the 20th ward, his son, Judge Emanuel Eller, and 17 of their henchmen, is reported by the Loesch special investigators to have worried some of the valley gang hoodlums and election day terrorists. Confessions from several of them are imminent, according to reports at the headquarters of Special Assistant Attorney General Frank J. Loesch yesterday.

In fact, one policeman involved in the primary day operations in the 25th and 20th wards, is said to have given considerable information to First Special Assistant Attorney General David D. Stansbury during a six hour grilling on Friday. He will be taken before the new special grand jury when it is impaneled on Aug. 10 and given an opportunity to repeat his story to the jurors.

Gangster Asks to Talk.

A gangster now under indictment has communicated with the prosecutors, it was learned, and has asked to be given an opportunity to talk next week. He will be welcomed by Prosecutor Stansbury and Capt. John Stege at a secret meeting tomorrow.

Sergt. Anthony Gentile, formerly attached to the staff of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, is the man grilled by Prosecutor Stansbury. He with three other policemen were assigned to watch over conditions as a roving squad in the 25th ward, which is under the leadership of Attorney Joseph Savage, former Crowe aid and now attorney for many of the villages in the county.

Sergt. Gentile, according to information obtained, said that he and his brother officers, one of them Sergt. Peter Pacelli, named in the same indictment with the Ellers, were given a privately owned expensive automobile to cover the 25th ward territory.

Force Bar Watcher Out.

The police squad, it is reported, went over into the Eller territory for a brief time to dispose of a troublesome Chicago Bar association watcher. The policeman on duty, it is said, was intimidated, the watcher virtually kidnaped and told to leave the ward before he was hurt.

The activity of policemen in behalf of political leaders of the Thompson-Crowe America First ticket is to be the subject of intensive investigation next week. A letter was sent to Commissioner William F. Russell yesterday asking him to send to the prosecutor's office in groups of 25 each day the 200 policemen who were assigned on special duty to political leaders on primary day. The first batch is to appear tomorrow.

"The hoodlums realize by the indictment of the Ellers and other leaders that the investigation is in earnest and cannot be headed off," said Capt. Stege. "A scramble for immunity baths by the lesser lights in the conspiracy is about to begin. We have, since the indictment, received considerable valuable information about the tactics used on primary day."

Raid Rooming House.

An important raid by the investigators under the leadership of Sheridan A. Bruseaux was staged on the supposed rooming house of Max Wagman on West Monroe street. From this place 162 votes were cast.

Wagman was ill and could not be questioned, but his wife told the prosecutors that she never heard of various persons alleged to have voted from the place. An attorney, either now connected with or formerly connected with the staff of Prosecutor Crowe, and a former river ward committeeman are involved in this violation, it is reported.

The trial of the Ellers probably will not take place until the middle of September, it was believed yesterday, because most of the Superior and Circuit court judges are out of the city on vacation. Judge John M. O'Connor of the Appellate bench, who was agreed upon by both sides, was reported out of the city. Whether he would agree to hear the case is a matter of speculation and attorneys tried without success yesterday to find him.

Bar Delays Probe.

The Chicago Bar association probably will not take up the unprecedented situation of Judge Eller, under indictment himself, continuing to hold court and pass on the guilt or innocence of other defendants. The return of Sidney Gorham, president of the association, is being awaited by the bar managers to take up the question.

"The situation of Judge Eller is unprecedented," Francis X. Busch, first vice president, said. "The policy of the bar, when a lawyer is indicted, is to wait the outcome of the trial. If he is convicted, disbarment proceedings start immediately. In some cases proceedings are started when an acquittal is obtained when the evidence shows the lawyer to be guilty of unprofessional conduct.

"The Eller matter would of course have to be taken up in a meeting of the Bar association managers. No meeting has been called and nothing will be done until the return of Mr. Gorham early next week."

GUARDSMEN DROP IN STREET FROM HEAT AND TAINTED FOOD

Erie, Pa., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Thirty-six members of Company E, 112th infantry, 28th regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, were in hospitals here tonight recovering from what physicians said was a combination attack of ptomaine poisoning and heat prostration.

Others of the sixty-eight members in the outfit, which returned at noon from training camp at Mount Gretna, were being treated in their homes.

The illness first was noticed when the Erie battalion, after parading sun-baked streets, lined up for review. Members of Company E began keeling over and were sprawled out on the street. The flag bearer dropped as if struck by a bullet.

Maj. Kenneth Momeyer, commanding the battalion, learned that members of Company E had eaten sandwiches purchased at a small stand outside of the state camp. It is believed that this food was tainted. All but one member was reported tonight as being out of danger.

YOU MAY VISIT CITY IN SAFETY, SURVEY SHOWS

Our Reputation as Battle Field Is Unjustified.

People may visit Chicago without fear of being killed and remain here under ordinary conditions of safety, the world is assured by the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice. In fact, a report issued yesterday by the association asserts Chicago's reputation as a murder center is unmerited.

In the years 1926 and 1927 there were only two murders in the downtown district, according to a study made for the association by Arthur V. Lashly, a former Missouri prosecutor. The body of a gangster was found in the loop and a newly born baby was the other victim.

Gangsters Kill Each Other.

"As advertised to the world, the citizens of Chicago going about their daily tasks and visitors coming to the city are actually in danger of being killed by gangsters' bullets, Lashly's report stated. "Nothing could be more absurdly untrue. In the last two years only two innocent bystanders were killed in this county and neither was killed by gangsters. When gangsters kill, they kill each other."

Murders in Chicago have been a never failing source of news, jokes, movie plots and plays, all to the detriment of the city, the report said, and the bad name of Chicago has traveled around the world. Mr. Lashly undertook to show that this is unjust. Bombs have been thrown here to intimidate but no one was killed by a bomb, he stated.

The murder records of the past, he says, have been improperly portrayed. He distinguishes between homicides and murders, saying that heretofore the impression has been that every homicide was a case of a death by gunshot, which is not so, he found.

Analysis of Deaths.

In his analysis, he reports as follows:

In 1926, out of a total of 739 homicides, there were but 242 persons shot to death—out of a population of 3,000,000; in 1927 the figures were 235 shot to death out of a total of 699 homicides.

Twenty-four per cent of gun murders in 1927, and 30.6 per cent in 1926, are classified as gang killings.

In 1926 there came before coroner's juries a total of 889 cases of death by automobile, of which 598 were found to be accidental, 144 open verdicts and the remainder were classified as murder or manslaughter. In 1927 there were 987 such cases.

Infanticides helped swell the total of cases reported as murders. There were no Negro infanticide cases reported.

Negro Murders High.

A table shows that 217 whites were murdered in 1926, as compared with 84 colored; in 1927 the figures were 214 whites, 84 colored. The colored population of Cook county is approximately 5 per cent of the total, yet in murder cases in the two years 28 per cent involved Negroes.

Italians	39	35
Americans	19	8
Colored	2	0
Chinese	0	3
Others	14	10
Total	74	56

In 1926 nine husbands were killed by wives, and 23 wives were slain by husbands. In 1927 four husbands and 19 wives were the victims of their mates.

The decline of gang deaths in 1927 is explained as follows:

"The cessation of hostilities in August, as a result of an agreement reported to have been made between the predominant rival gangs and the controlling politicians, marked a decisive decline in the number of such deaths."

Danger in Certain Spots.

As to certain neighborhoods, there is submitted the following:

"There are in every large city certain localities that are recognized as places to be shunned because of the character of the neighborhood. The chances of a stranger being slugged or robbed are greatly enhanced in such localities. This is true in Chicago."

On a map of the city, every murder in the two years was represented by a dot showing where it happened. The loop had but two dots. Most of the dots were in the territories known as river wards and black belts.

Gun murders of white men were unsolved in a little less than half of the cases of 1926 and in 40 per cent of the cases in 1927. Thirty-two per cent of all gun murders of the two years was unsolved.

Of 376 cases listed by the police as murders, 401 persons were accused and later exonerated; 384 were freed in the Municipal court, 12 went to the grand jury and received no bills, one was dismissed for want of prosecution, one was sent to the Juvenile court for a mental test, and one pleaded guilty to assault with a deadly weapon and was placed on probation.

Insanity for Whites Only.

In 1926 of all persons charged with murder 24.37 per cent were found guilty of some offense as against 19.24 per cent in 1927. The statement was made that insanity as a defense to murder was exclusively for the white man, no colored man successfully advancing it.

There were nine death sentences for murder in 1926 and one in 1927, and there were eight hangings in Cook county in 1926 and three in 1927. But the record of punishment for gang murders in the two years was zero, not one person being convicted.

Mr. Lashly found fault with the system of holding inquests and of using regular jurymen, termed by him "Fridays." He said the verdicts are directed by politically appointed deputies and a verdict of exoneration by a coroner's jury is usually accepted as final by police and prosecutor. He believes a prosecutor should attend all inquests where there is a possibility of a murder charge arising.

W. C. T. U. SEEKS TO DISCIPLINE DEFIANT JUDGE

Reported He Tore Up Recommendations.

Lebanon, O., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—A new question of judicial procedure has been raised here by the refusal of a judge to abide by the recommendations of a "court hearing committee" appointed by the W. C. T. U. to investigate liquor violation cases.

W. C. T. U. leaders in the state say that it is the first time any judge has failed to follow, or at least agree with, the report made by the committee of women since the W. C. T. U. adopted the system more than a year ago.

The temperance union leaders declare they will demand an investigation into the failure of the judge to act in accordance with their wishes.

The case came up in a Lebanon court. Several alleged bootleggers were on trial. The regular occupant of the bench requested Judge Charles G. White of Batavia to preside to insure a fair trial.

Judge Criticizes Evidence.

During the course of the hearing Judge White declared that the evidence was not conclusive and attachés of the court said one of the main witnesses for the prosecution had failed to aid the state's case.

Then there was passed to the bench a note from the committee of women, of which the leader was the head of the Lebanon W. C. T. U. The note, court attachés said, read:

"We are here and convictions are expected."

Judge White tore the note to pieces and dismissed the cases "for lack of evidence." Later he put the shreds together and showed them to attachés.

The action of Judge White so angered the W. C. T. U. membership that the southwestern Ohio section of the body, meeting in Cincinnati, put the incident on the program for consideration by the Ohio state W. C. T. U. A meeting was called in Cincinnati to protest on "Judge White's indifference of action." The protest will be sent to all parts of the state of Ohio in an endeavor to secure action by the Anti-Saloon league and various other reform bodies.

Breaks a Precedent.

The W. C. T. U. leaders said the Lebanon case was the first time any Ohio judge has ignored the W. C. T. U. official committees regularly present in all Ohio courts when liquor cases are heard.

These committees communicated their wishes to the judge presiding either verbally in the judge's private chambers or by writing either before the cases were called for trial or during the procedure of liquor trials without protest on the part of any judge or court official until Judge White acted.

DRYS, CHANTING A HALLELUJAH, POUR OUT RUM

Marion, Ind., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Jacob Campbell, sheriff, invited the executive committee of the W. C. T. U. to preside at special ceremonies at the jail today. The committee, forty in number, led by Mrs. Ella Gard, president of the W. C. T. U., poured liquor valued at more than $3,000 into the sewer. The liquor included every grade and quality from Canadian Scotch to ordinary home brew. Songs of hallelujah followed, including "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

DRY AGENTS MOBBED WHEN THEY TAKE 7 MEN OFF BOAT

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Twenty-five prohibition and customs board patrol officers joined in fighting off a mob of 200 after the capture early today of seven alleged rum runners and several thousand dollars worth of whisky in a boat house at the foot of Hogan's alley, Ecorse.

Shots were fired over the heads of the mob which fled. During the encounter emery powder was placed in the gasoline tank of one of the dry agents' automobiles.

Custom inspectors had trailed the boat from the Canadian shore. On the shore at Ecorse was another group of customs inspectors and 10 prohibition agents.

As the boat ran into the boat house, the building was surrounded. Shots were fired as several of the runners attempted to escape.

During the attack by the mob which gathered when the seven prisoners were taken from the boat house, one of the prohibition agents was cut about the face by a rock hurled through the windshield of the car in which he was riding.

ROBBER HOLDS UP BIG RESTAURANT IN LOOP; CAUGHT

Joseph Murray of Detroit, who had just held up and robbed the North American restaurant, Monroe and State streets, was captured in a thrilling chase among State street crowds yesterday afternoon by Traffic Policeman Martin Doyle.

After finishing a meal in the restaurant, Murray threatened two young women cashiers and forced them to hand over between $800 and $1,000 in cash. The screams of Alice Arndt, cigar counter attendant, attracted the attention of Fred Wittenbord, manager of the restaurant. Murray started up the stairs to State street with Wittenbord after him. On the way Murray encountered G. W. Hatch, 3923 Frontier avenue, and menaced him with his gun.

Hatch joined Wittenbord in the chase.

DENIES LOSS OF $3,000,000 IN LIFE SECURITIES

Roy C. Toombs Charges Plot by Rivals.

It was announced in St. Louis yesterday that $3,000,000 of securities were missing from the vaults of the International Life Insurance company, and that an audit of the company's accounts was in progress under the direction of examiners representing the insurance departments of Missouri and seven other states. There was reported to be no clew to the way in which the securities had vanished.

Control of the International company was purchased a year ago by Roy C. Toombs of Chicago for a price variously stated at $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. Mr. Toombs, whose residence is at Downers Grove, borrowed in the east the money to make the purchase, giving as collateral stock in the International Holding company and securities of a Chicago mortgage firm with which he is connected.

Nothing Missing, Says Toombs.

Mr. Toombs said last night that neither $3,000,000 nor any other sum is missing from the vaults of the insurance company in St. Louis. Also, he said, the company is solvent. He said he was in the offices in St. Louis last Wednesday.

The audit of the company's books has been under way since June. Yesterday it was said the insurance examiners, failing to find the three million of securities, they believed should be in the company's vaults, had sent for Attorney General Stratton Shartel of Missouri.

The International company had $309,115,719 of insurance in force, with 118,000 policy holders, as of Jan. 1, and in its statement of that date gave its assets as $43,186,431. Dispatches from St. Louis said the Missouri State Life Insurance company was negotiating to purchase that company.

Says He Won't Sell.

The Missouri State Co. had offered to pay stockholders $107 a share, it was reported, the market value being $75 a share of $25 par value.

Toombs, who is a member of the firm of Toombs and Dailey, investment securities, at 208 South La Salle street, said further:

"I own 20,000 of the 37,500 shares of the International Life Insurance company. I have been threatend with everything unless I would sign over the business to the Missouri State Co. Blackmail has been tried on me. When I bought the International company I carried the deal through myself and I have since paid off my indebtedness of $2,000,000, which I borrowed from the Central Trust company of New York.

"I have been president of the company since last October and since then the business has increased 50 per cent a month. It was so good others were trying to force me out of it. I am going to meet some of my associates and talk this thing over, and perhaps I shall see James Bruce, vice president of the National Park bank of New York, whom I expect in Chicago tonight or tomorrow.

"If there had been anything wrong with the finances of the company, the thing to have been done was for the examiner to have notified me, which is customary, but no such thing was done. They are saying in St. Louis that I have been missing for several weeks. I was there last Wednesday."

Manager Grantges Talks.

In St. Louis, W. F. Grantges, vice president and manager of the International, said:

"The insurance examiners representing eight states have not made their report to the insurance commissioners. We understand it is to be ready by Aug. 10, at which time opportunity will be given the officers to see whether there are any inaccuracies.

"Until we see that report and ascertain what, if any, shortages they are claiming, we cannot make any statement about it. There is no cause for alarm on the part of the policy holders or the stockholders."

They, with Thompson, were held at the Chicago avenue police station for an hour and released.

PEEK PUT FARM BODY IN POLITICS, HAMMILL SAYS

Iowan Asserts He Has No Apologies to Make.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—In a letter to George N. Peek, chairman of the committee of twenty-two, Gov. John Hammill of Iowa today answered Peek's challenge to reconcile his support of Herbert Hoover with his work for agricultural equality, saying he had no apologies to make.

Neither, said Mr. Hammill, did he have any criticism of Peek as a private citizen in supporting Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York for President, but he did offer criticism of Peek's action in bringing the committee into politics by publicly approving as chairman of the committee, the Democratic farm relief policy and in pledging farm votes to the Democrats.

Says He Violated Trust.

"When you assume to act for the entire committee of twenty-two," Mr. Hammill wrote, "you violate the trust it has reposed in you as its chairman. You have no right to publicly claim your personal views are the views of the committee when no action of the committee as such ever has been taken."

The governor pointed out that the committee of twenty-two is a nonpolitical organization, having for its purpose the advancement of agriculture in legislative channels. He charged Peek, who had first rebuked the governor for deserting the principles of the committee and the McNary-Haugen bill, with "injecting your dislike for the individual [Hoover] into the cause of agriculture," and by so doing, failing "to serve the cause which you are supposed to represent."

Charges Committee in Politics.

"You suggest," said the letter, "that I call another conference of governors to redefine their position, particularly on the question of leadership. I assume you desire another conference to decide whether the committee will go into politics as you have clearly done by your recent action.

"The function of the committee is not to conduct political campaigns or even to enter into them. The committee was formed to further the legislative function of farm relief.

"If you, as chairman, desire to take the committee into politics along with yourself, it is within your authority to call its members together and submit the question to them; but to assume to act for the entire committee on your own motion is a violation of the trust it has reposed in you as chairman."

YOU MAY VISIT CITY IN SAFETY, SURVEY SHOWS

Our Reputation as Battle Field Is Unjustified.

People may visit Chicago without fear of being killed and remain here under ordinary conditions of safety, the world is assured by the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice. In fact, a report issued yesterday by the association asserts Chicago's reputation as a murder center is unmerited.

In the years 1926 and 1927 there were only two murders in the downtown district, according to a study made for the association by Arthur V. Lashly, a former Missouri prosecutor. The body of a gangster was found in the loop and a newly born baby was the other victim.

Gangsters Kill Each Other.

"As advertised to the world, the citizens of Chicago going about their daily tasks and visitors coming to the city are actually in danger of being killed by gangsters' bullets, Lashly's report stated. "Nothing could be more absurdly untrue. In the last two years only two innocent bystanders were killed in this county and neither was killed by gangsters. When gangsters kill, they kill each other."

Murders in Chicago have been a never failing source of news, jokes, movie plots and plays, all to the detriment of the city, the report said, and the bad name of Chicago has traveled around the world. Mr. Lashly undertook to show that this is unjust. Bombs have been thrown here to intimidate but no one was killed by a bomb, he stated.

The murder records of the past, he says, have been improperly portrayed. He distinguishes between homicides and murders, saying that heretofore the impression has been that every homicide was a case of a death by gunshot, which is not so, he found.

Analysis of Deaths.

In his analysis, he reports as follows:

In 1926, out of a total of 739 homicides, there were but 242 persons shot to death—out of a population of 3,000,000; in 1927 the figures were 235 shot to death out of a total of 699 homicides.

Twenty-four per cent of gun murders in 1927, and 30.6 per cent in 1926, are classified as gang killings.

In 1926 there came before coroner's juries a total of 889 cases of death by automobile, of which 598 were found to be accidental, 144 open verdicts and the remainder were classified as murder or manslaughter. In 1927 there were 987 such cases.

Infanticides helped swell the total of cases reported as murders. There were no Negro infanticide cases reported.

Negro Murders High.

A table shows that 217 whites were murdered in 1926, as compared with 84 colored; in 1927 the figures were 214 whites, 84 colored. The colored population of Cook county is approximately 5 per cent of the total, yet in murder cases in the two years 28 per cent involved Negroes.

	1926.	1927.
Italians	39	35
Americans	19	8
Colored	2	0
Chinese	0	3
Others	14	10
Total	74	56

In 1926 nine husbands were killed by wives, and 23 wives were slain by husbands. In 1927 four husbands and 19 wives were the victims of their mates.

The decline of gang deaths in 1927 is explained as follows:

"The cessation of hostilities in August, as a result of an agreement reported to have been made between the predominant rival gangs and the controlling politicians, marked a decisive decline in the number of such deaths."

Danger in Certain Spots.

As to certain neighborhoods, there is submitted the following:

"There are in every large city certain localities that are recognized as places to be shunned because of the character of the neighborhood. The chances of a stranger being slugged or robbed are greatly enhanced in such localities. This is true in Chicago."

On a map of the city, every murder in the two years was represented by a dot showing where it happened. The loop had but two dots. Most of the dots were in the territories known as river wards and black belts.

Gun murders of white men were unsolved in a little less than half of the cases of 1926 and in 40 per cent of the cases in 1927. Thirty-two per cent of all gun murders of the two years was unsolved.

Of 376 cases listed by the police as murders, 401 persons were accused and later exonerated; 384 were freed in the Municipal court, 12 went to the grand jury and received no bills, one was dismissed for want of prosecution, one was sent to the Juvenile court for a mental test, and one pleaded guilty to assault with a deadly weapon and was placed on probation.

Insanity for Whites Only.

In 1926 of all persons charged with murder 24.37 per cent were found guilty of some offense as against 19.24 per cent in 1927. The statement was made that insanity as a defense to murder was exclusively for the white man, no colored man successfully advancing it.

There were nine death sentences for murder in 1926 and one in 1927, and there were eight hangings in Cook county in 1926 and three in 1927. But the record of punishment for gang murders in the two years was zero, not one person being convicted.

Mr. Lashly found fault with the system of holding inquests and of using regular jurymen, termed by him "Fridays." He said the verdicts are directed by politically appointed deputies and a verdict of exoneration by a coroner's jury is usually accepted as final by police and prosecutor. He believes a prosecutor should attend all inquests where there is a possibility of a murder charge arising.

W. C. T. U. SEEKS TO DISCIPLINE DEFIANT JUDGE

Reported He Tore Up Recommendations.

Lebanon, O., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—A new question of judicial procedure has been raised here by the refusal of a judge to abide by the recommendations of a "court hearing committee" appointed by the W. C. T. U. to investigate liquor violation cases.

W. C. T. U. leaders in the state say that it is the first time any judge has failed to follow, or at least agree with, the report made by the committee of women since the W. C. T. U. adopted the system more than a year ago.

The temperance union leaders declare they will demand an investigation into the failure of the judge to act in accordance with their wishes.

The case came up in a Lebanon court. Several alleged bootleggers were on trial. The regular occupant of the bench requested Judge Charles G. White of Batavia to preside to insure a fair trial.

Judge Criticizes Evidence.

During the course of the hearing Judge White declared that the evidence was not conclusive and attachés of the court said one of the main witnesses for the prosecution had failed to aid the state's case.

Then there was passed to the bench a note from the committee of women, of which the leader was the head of the Lebanon W. C. T. U. The note, court attachés said, read:

"We are here and convictions are expected."

Judge White tore the note to pieces and dismissed the cases "for lack of evidence." Later he put the shreds together and showed them to attachés.

The action of Judge White so angered the W. C. T. U. membership that the southwestern Ohio section of the body, meeting in Cincinnati, put the incident on the program for consideration by the Ohio state W. C. T. U. A meeting was called in Cincinnati to protest on "Judge White's indifference of action." The protest will be sent to all parts of the state of Ohio in an endeavor to secure action by the Anti-Saloon league and various other reform bodies.

Breaks a Precedent.

The W. C. T. U. leaders said the Lebanon case was the first time any Ohio judge has ignored the W. C. T. U. official committees regularly present in all Ohio courts when liquor cases are heard.

These committees communicated their wishes to the judge presiding either verbally in the judge's private chambers or by writing either before the cases were called for trial or during the procedure of liquor trials without protest on the part of any judge or court official until Judge White acted.

He charged Peek, who had first rebuked the governor for deserting the principles of the committee and the McNary-Haugen bill, with "injecting your dislike for the individual [Hoover] into the cause of agriculture," and by so doing, failing "to serve the cause which you are supposed to represent."

Charges Committee in Politics.

"You suggest," said the letter, "that I call another conference of governors to redefine their position, particularly on the question of leadership. I assume you desire another conference to decide whether the committee will go into politics as you have clearly done by your recent action.

"The function of the committee is not to conduct political campaigns or even to enter into them. The committee was formed to further the legislative function of farm relief.

"If you, as chairman, desire to take the committee into politics along with yourself, it is within your authority to call its members together and submit the question to them; but to assume to act for the entire committee on your own motion is a violation of the trust it has reposed in you as chairman."

EUROPE RECALLS START OF WORLD WAR 14 YRS. AGO

Thousands of Vets Visit Graves of Dead Buddies

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A great pilgrimage was in progress tonight with the migration of 11,000 British men and women to the battlefields of northern France, where the British legions fought in the world war. The pilgrimage was begun on the fourteenth anniversary of Great Britain's entry into the struggle, Aug. 4, 1914.

The veterans will march along the familiar roads of the war days and through fields of blood red poppies, singing the same old songs as of yore. On this occasion they will not see blackened ruins of war torn villages. Instead of the angry thunder of gunfire along a shell swept front, the legionaires will be greeted only with salvos of friendly salutes. Instead of unspeakable hardships of muddy trenches along battle lines in the valleys of death, the only discomfort they have in prospect is a stormy channel crossing.

Prince of Wales to Join Pilgrims.

The prince of Wales, who served in France with the royal guards, will join the pilgrims. Lady Haig, widow of the commander who led the British army to victory, and many other distinguished war figures will accompany them to the other side of the channel, where they will remain four days.

The culminating feature of the visit will be a solemn ceremony at Ypres. The 11,000 will reassemble from various points at this historic town, where the famous salient was held at such heavy cost to save a precious portion of Belgian soil.

In spite of their thousands, the legionnaires will be outnumbered five to one by the dead whom they are honoring. The unknown fallen in the salient alone total some 55,000.

Arrive in France.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The British legion of ex-service men today began its memorial pilgrimage of 11,000 veterans to the battlefields of the world war.

The legion's staff was received by President Doumergue and Gen. Gouraud, governor of Paris, and tonight they will officially relight the perpetual flame at the tomb of the unknown soldier. Meanwhile special boats and trains are carrying the legionnaires to the places where they fought.

Belgium Remembers.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The fourteenth anniversary of the invasion of Belgium by the Germans was commemorated today by a salvo of 21 shots fired by all garrisons. Bells were rung and steam whistles blown throughout the country.

Berlin Reds Celebrate.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—One hundred and twenty thousand men, women, and children took part in anti-war demonstrations organized by communists before the former kaiser's palace tonight in commemoration of the outbreak of the world war. Six hundred red flags flanked the palace and were dipped when the crowd sang "International" and took an oath to boycott war. Scores were arrested in minor clashes between communists and police.

Paris "Revolt" Fizzles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The "revolution" which Paris communists have been threatening to launch tomorrow ended at midnight with police herding 200 prospective revolutionists into jail after the much heralded mass meeting in the Cirque de Paris. Despite the frantic appeals of communist organs, the incendiary speakers proved a complete washout.

HIS EX-STUDENTS HERE HONOR IRISH LATIN PROFESSOR

Prof. Maurice O'Connell of St. Michael's college, County Kerry, Ireland, world famous Latinist, was honored last night at the Morrison hotel by his former students who are now in Chicago. Prof. O'Connell, 74 years old, and still active in his profession after 50 years, is touring the United States.

At present in America it is estimated there are 400 clergymen who received their Latin instruction from Prof. O'Connell, in addition to many physicians, lawyers, and other professional men.

His former students last night presented him with a silver loving cup on which is inscribed a verse from Ovid.

SOO TRAFFIC IS 13 MILLION TONS IN JULY

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Freight traffic totaling 13,246,901 tons, or almost the maximum capacity of the vessels engaged in upper lakes transportation, passed the government locks at this port during July. Although the July tonnage was almost two million tons greater than that of July, 1927 and showed a nice increase over the month of June this year, the total for the season to date is considerably less than for the corresponding period last year. The total up to Aug. 1 this year was 35,178,158 tons as compared to 41,544,526 tons to Aug. 1, 1927.

LEVINE, ACOSTA BUY TRANS-OCEAN JUNKERS PLANE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The trans-Atlantic flyers, Charles Levine and Bert Acosta, accompanied by Mabel Boll, the diamond queen, today signed a purchasing contract for a Junkers trans-Atlantic airplane.

Levine, who is endeavoring to keep the transaction a secret, said he is without definite plans.

CHICAGO DEATH RATE IS HIGHER, KEGEL REPORTS

Heart and Lung Diseases' Toll Increases.

Chicago's death rate, after a steady decline for the last three years, has mounted swiftly during the first half of 1928, according to vital statistics compiled yesterday by Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. Meanwhile the birth rate has fallen.

Due chiefly to the ravages of heart disease, pneumonia, and influenza, the mortality rate for the period of January to July, inclusive, has jumped to 12.65 for each thousand population, from 11.73 for the corresponding period of 1927, an increase of 7.8 per cent. At the same time the birth rate has dropped from 18.8 to 17.8 or about one less baby per thousand population.

Plans Health Campaign.

Coincident with announcement of the figures, Dr. Kegel made public plans for a city-wide campaign this fall and winter against pneumonia and influenza. The campaign will include the treatment of every school child with anti-toxin through the coöperation of practically all physicians in the city. Special attention also will be paid by the health department to the prevention of organic diseases, he said.

Dr. Kegel revealed that the death rate of babies under one year of age is decreasing.

Between January and July, 1928, only 2,248 babies died, compared with 2,362 in the same period last year, a decrease of 114. This is a rate of 67.7 a thousand births, compared with 68.8 in 1927. As shown by the mortality figures, the chances for babies in Chicago to be born safely have improved continually since 1923 when the death rate was 87 out of each 1,000 births.

40 to 50 Is Worst Period.

There were 58 fewer deaths of children between the ages of one and two thus far this year. The greatest increase, relative to age, was in the 40 to 50 year old group.

Comparative summaries of January to July deaths in 1927 and 1928, classified by causes in their respective order, follow:

	Deaths, 1928.	Deaths, 1927.	Increase.
Heart disease	4,331	3,801	530
Pneumonia	2,930	1,952	978
Chronic nephritis	2,693	2,337	356
Cancer	1,980	1,977	3
Tuberculosis	1,367	1,328	39
Accidental violence	1,349	1,273	76
Congenital debility	1,147	1,210	*63
Cerebral hemorrhage	982	819	163
Diabetes	473	440	33
Appendicitis	362	372	*10
Suicide	339	296	43
Influenza	320	192	128

*Decrease.

The total number of deaths from all causes since Jan. 1, 1928, has been 22,715, compared to 21,433 in the same period of 1927.

Urges New Viewpoint.

"The comparison of the various causes of deaths points a moral in public health administration," Dr. Kegel said. "The time has come for a different viewpoint, if the death rate is to be lowered further.

"The first great battles in public health were in the field of communicable disease. Today these are almost completely won. Next was infant welfare and the tide has very definitely turned in our favor here as evidenced by the greater number of babies living each year in proportion to the births.

"Respiratory diseases and degenerative ills of middle age, on the other hand, are increasing and we can do much toward their reduction by educating people in their prevention.

"Pneumonia, for example, is the chief cause of the increase in the death rate this year. Although heart disease still leads in the total number of deaths, pneumonia is a close second. Moreover, with an increase of 978 deaths, pneumonia shows an actual rate increase of 48 per cent as compared to 11.9 per cent increase in heart disease mortality, which caused 530 more deaths in the first seven months this year than in 1927.

"Influenza, second in importance as a respiratory disease, shows a rate increase of 64 per cent, and chronic bronchitis a rate increase of 78 per cent. These large increases are significant even though the total number of deaths from these two diseases is relatively small."

Plans No-Cold Club.

A great percentage of respiratory diseases originate in the common cold, Dr. Kegel explained, which ordinarily is preventable. In order to focus greater public attention on the danger of colds, the commissioner explained, a part of his fall and winter campaign will be the formation of a No-Cold club.

"I expect to achieve two objects," he continued. "First, reduction in the number of colds through dissemination of knowledge about treatment and prevention and, second, collection of a vast amount of clinical knowledge about colds through questionnaires which members of the club will be asked to fill out.

"There are some differences of opinion among physicians as to the nature and treatment of colds. Recently some new theories, particularly treatment by alkalinization of the body have attracted wide attention."

Injuries May End Fred Stone's Stage Work

SLIM CHANCE FOR FRED STONE EVER DANCING AGAIN

New London, Conn., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Fred Stone, dancing comedian, who entertained thousands by his antics in more than a score of Broadway theatrical productions, may never be able to dance again. He has only a fifty-fifty chance.

Physicians at the Lawrence and Memorial hospital here made the announcement today. The actor's right thigh, left wrist, and both legs had been fractured in an airplane accident yesterday.

Mr. Stone's condition was reported today as "satisfactory." Doctors said at this stage it is impossible to predict accurately what the permanent injury will be. The patient may be on his feet again in a few months, but again, he may not be for a year, they said.

The airplane crashed into Trumbull field near here. Paula Stone, a daughter of the actor, witnesses the accident. He was piloting the plane.

Mr. Stone had been taking flying lessons preparatory to applying for a license. It is understood that when the plane dropped he was "stunting" for the entertainment of his daughter.

Italy Signs Friendship Pact with Abyssinia

ROME, Aug. 4.—The Italian government announces today the signature, at Addia Ababa, Abyssinia, of a pact of friendship between Italy and that country.

CITY HALL GIVES 15% SERVICE FOR ITS DAILY BREAD

19 Officials Away, 3 on Job, Checkup Shows.

Mayor Thompson's staff of department and bureau heads functioned yesterday at an efficiency of less than 15 per cent, it was indicated by a check of the city hall. Out of 22 major officials only three appeared for work.

To test the accuracy of current reports that Mr. Thompson's official family has adopted the British week end, starting Thursday and ending Tuesday, investigators visited the offices between 11 and 11:15 a. m. This time was chosen as late enough to catch belated arrivals and early enough to find officials before they had gone to lunch.

Three on Job; Others Away.

The three officials on the job were Acting Police Commissioner William F. Russell, appointed a week ago; City Collector Morris Eller, just indicted by the grand jury, and Thomas J. Houston, chairman of the civil service commission. Mr. Houston was not in his office at 11 a. m., but was discovered later in another part of the city hall.

All of the others were fishing, vacationing, or, like the mayor, were absent and their whereabouts unrevealed.

Although said to be somewhere in Wisconsin, Mayor Thompson's exact whereabouts has been a mystery for nearly a month. Like the magician's rabbit he vanishes periodically, and, anon, reappears unexpectedly at a new pleasure resort. Where he was yesterday, only Corporation Counsel Ettelson knew and Mr. Ettelton was on a vacation.

Where They Are or Aren't.

A tabulation of the checkup, together with the daily salaries received by each official for his services, follows:

ON DUTY.
Thomas J. Houston, civil service chairman	$25
William F. Russell, police commissioner	33
Morris Eller, city collector	20
NOT ON DUTY—WHEREABOUTS KNOWN.
Christian Paschen, building commissioner [at summer home, Antioch, Ill.]	$27
Samuel A. Ettelson, corporation counsel [at summer home, Green Lake, Wis.]	33
Richard A. Wolfe, commissioner of public works [at summer home, Sawyer Mich.]	33
George Nye, chief boiler inspector [vacationing at Eagle River, Wis.]	20
Charles C. Fitzmorris, city controller [resigned; in Europe]	33
Albert W. Goodrich, fire commissioner [in Europe]	27
Frederick Rex, municipal librarian [home on regular vacation]	17
NOT ON DUTY—WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN.
Michael J. Faherty, president board of local improvements	$20
Arnold H. Kegel, health commissioner	33
Michael Kennedy, commissioner of gas and electricity	27
Frank Peska, prosecuting attorney	20
William D. Saltiel, city attorney	20
W. J. Balmer, commissioner of public welfare	20
William Garrison, city purchasing agent	20
Daniel Serritella, superintendent weights and measures	17
Mrs. Eva Hamilton, chairman of zoning board	23
Loren D. Gayton, city engineer	20
Thomas Byrne, superintendent of streets	23

Daily salaries used in the foregoing table were compiled from yearly salaries on a basis of 300 working days in a year. On this basis the mayor's daily salary is $60.

Arithmetic Put to Work.

Simple arithmetic, figured on this basis, shows that officials theoretically worth $78 a day to the city were earning their salaries yesterday while officials theoretically worth $493 a day were not at work. Stated still more simply, the taxpayers yesterday were paying to Mayor Thompson and his appointees for approximately six times as much work as they were found to be performing.

U. S. Splits Alcohol Into Pints to Suit Druggists

Washngton, D. C., Aug. 4.—(AP)—For the first time since prohibition went into effect druggists in the near future will be able to obtain alcohol in pint bottles instead of being forced to obtain it in five gallon cans and bottle it themselves. Prohibition officials announced today that effective Aug. 15 alcohol could be purchased in pint and gallon quantities.

STREET CAR HITS TRUCK; RUNS OFF TRACK; 20 SHAKEN

A street car, after a collision with a motor truck yesterday, left the rails, pounded over the curbing and came to a stop in the yard of the Farren school, East 51st street and South Wabash avenue. NEUTRAL SWEDEN ASKS ONLY PEACE WITH NEIGHBORS

Not Interested in Baltic Union Scheme.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 4.—Sweden's only desire is to live at peace with all its neighbors. It is a loyal member of the league of nations, and will join no union or pact directed against any particular nation. It is sympathetic with the freedom aspirations of the new Baltic states, but so far as it is concerned is not interested in any scheme for a Baltic union. With Russia Sweden maintains correct relations.

This is a summing up of the impression I gained in an interview with Eliel Lofgren, Swedish minister of foreign affairs, who received me in the foreign office and talked frankly of Sweden's domestic and international problems.

"Unlike the new states on the other side of the Baltic sea, Sweden has few international problems. One of the oldest, most solid and richest states of Europe, it has nothing to fear from its neighbors, and suffers from no jealousies or territorial ambitions. Feeling confident in its ability to uphold its position against aggression, Sweden does not desire to attack any one.

Wants to Remain Neutral.

Minister Lofgren, who is one of Sweden's leading lawyers and one of the leaders of the Liberals, now in power, gives the impression that the country's international position is one of great strength and absolute certainty.

"We are truly neutral," he said. "We are for peace treaties with a view to outlawing war, but there is no inducement for us to enter any alliance outside the league of nations. Why should we? We sympathize with the new Baltic states, but should any state commit an act of aggression against the new states, that is a matter for the league of nations, and we, of course, will carry out our obligations to the league loyally.

"As regards Russia, our national policy is opposed to provoking any rupture. We have some communist movements, as in England and all the other European states, and there is no doubt that they are financed to some extent by the third international. There is a small group of communists in close touch with Moscow, but the greater part of our communists are home products.

Labor Keeps Communists Out.

"In Sweden, owing to the close organization of labor and the control exercised over the trade unions by the old Social Democrat labor leaders, there has been little control of the labor movement on the industrial side by communists. The Swedish communists are therefore forced into a political movement. They have five members in parliament.

"We know, of course, that Russia has contributed to the miners' strike. It is estimated that it sent the striking iron miners about 600,000 to 700,000 kroner (about $150,000 to $175,000). The strike itself, however, was not of communist origin, but purely industrial, as was the paper pulp strike which recently was settled."

Mayor Walker Here

MAYOR JAMES WALKER.

Mayor James Walker of New York City is going back to his home town to get some rest and do some work. He arrived in Chicago from St. Paul yesterday.

Mayor Walker said he had been in the Canadian Rockies for an outing, and was going back to his big town to recuperate. He was asleep when the Soo line train pulled into the Grand Central station at 11:25 a. m. After his private car had been switched into the coach yards, Mayor Walker obligingly responded to the requests of reporters and photographers for an interview and pictures.

He refused to talk about politics.

FINED FOR INCITING RIOT.

FLIVVER JAUNT FAILS TO SHOW POLES IN ARMS

Correspondent Finds 3 Men to Kilometer.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune].

VILNA, Aug. 4.—Over fifty miles of the Polish-Lithuanian no man's land that half encircles Vilna I rattled today in a rusty relic of American pre-war industry. I saw no sign of the impending military operations said to be directed against Lithuania.

From Kerjhenely to Lejpuny I found Polish frontier guards under direct civil authorities the only armed occupants. They are running a five to ten mile stretch behind the border where technically, and sometimes actually, a state of war has prevailed since 1921. They average about three men to each kilometer, in a country that is hilly, wooded, and dotted with lakes and rivers.

Only One Brigade on Line.

There is only one brigade of 1,600 men on the entire frontier, and one guard corps that is in charge of the northern border from Russia to East Prussia. Outside of the plentiful Vilna garrison there is no regular Polish army unit to be seen fifteen miles from the frontier to Osmany, which is almost as close to Lithuania as to the soviet frontier. There one division of Poles engaged in maneuvers, which M. Rashkewitz, the vice premier of Poland, and the civil governor qualified as mere "exercises," a regular event.

If Poland has decided to lance the seventy year old boil of Vilna by starting a war, as Kovno has convinced the terrified border population, the Polish general staff is keeping it secret. Premier Augustinas Waldemaras of Lithuania complains of heavy detachments of Polish infantry and artillery at Swianancy, which is explained on the ground that every year Vilna holds artillery practice there.

Vilna Has Only One Road.

Almost unique in the world, Vilna, a city of 200,000 persons, has only one single navigable road leading in and out. The Germans came in 1915 and repaired short stretches of the road, but the Poles did not bother because it leads to nowhere, now that Lithuania has hermetically sealed its frontier. This direct road is Kovno's barrier. The Poles could only seize it with an army fifteen times the size of the Lithuanian forces. The railroad to Kovno runs parallel with this road, along which my venerable lizzie bounced.

The only excitement was furnished by the shaggy little ponies which the Polish peasants drive, yoked to little four wheeled carts. Apparently the historical road which goes nowhere has not seen gasoline buggies in years, because the horses shied and reared at the sight.

The Polish gentry was out in force in this idle vacation region, apparently not believeing that Marshal Josef Pilsudski would loose his war dogs against Lithuania on the eve of what Poland believes will be a drastic league of nations session against its neighbor.

AUTO FINANCER IS GIVEN REBUKE BY JUDGE CURRAN

Judge George A. Curran in the South Clark Street court yesterday rebuked W. G. Tennant, head of the Tennant Finance corporation, 2447 South Michigan avenue, for having threatened to "get the job" of Detective Lieutenant Joseph Farrell.

Tennant, according to Lieut. Farrell, made the threat when the officer went to Tennant's place to search for an automobile taken by one of Tennant's collectors from Joseph Lombardo. Gene La Rue, 7556 Coles avenue, the collector, was held to the grand jury on a charge of larceny for taking the automobile.

"Lieut. Farrell went there at my order," Judge Curran said. "Lombardo's testimony showed that his automobile was unjustly seized, and that its seizure was larceny. Lombardo owed no money to you or your company, and so I held your man to the grand jury. Automobile finance companies are taking altogether too many liberties these days. Many persons' automobiles are taken from them without cause, but their ignorance of law prevents prosecution."

10 Shots Fired at Allen A Worker and Girl in Auto

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The third ambuscade this week in the Allen A labor war in Kenosha, occurred today when Nicholas Winter, 23, an employé of the Allen A company, was fired upon from ambush while on his way home from the factory. With him in his car was a girl he was escorting to her home.

About ten shots were fired, Winter said, from a sedan parked in an alley. No one was injured.

Winter obtained the license number of the car, police said, and they found it was issued to a striker. Orders were issued to pick him up immediately.

Cab Driver Tied to Pole.

Early today a cab driver employed by a company under contract to take Allen A employés to and from the factory, reported that two men held him up on the Tobin road five miles south of Kenosha, tied him to a telephone pole, and then demolished his cab.

There were three carloads of men in the group, he said, some of whom he recognized as strikers. Another cab went through a barrage of bullets while it was taking two workers home from the plant last night.

Union Calls It Frameup.

The warfare during the last few weeks "bears all the earmarks of a frame-up against the locked out workers," according to a statement issued by the general strike committee of the knitters' union today.

The union is sponsoring a mass meeting for the night of Aug. 11. It also announced today that members had accepted an invitation to join the amalgamated clothing workers union of Milwaukee in a pilgrimage to Chicago where the workers would join with the Chicago workers mass meeting "in honor of arbitration in labor disputes."

EVANSTON BOYS STEAL DISHES.

Six boys, each burdened with an armful of dishes, were arrested yesterday by the Evanston police and admitted they had stolen the ware from the Hayloft, a restaurant at Grove street and Sherman avenue.

CHAS. G. DAWES PAYS PERSONAL TAX ON $50,000

Personal property assessment for 1928 against Vice President Charles G. Dawes is on $50,000. This is one of the highest valuations revealed yesterday in a cursory inspection of the assessors' books for the north shore suburbs. It is the same figure on which the Vice President paid last year's taxes.

William R. Dawes, head of the Chicago Association of Commerce and a cousin of the Vice President, has a personal property assessment on $300.

One of Two Highest.

Only two $50,000 valuations were discovered in the assessment lists. The second was against W. L. Brown, 221 Dempster street, Evanston. Oscar G. Foreman, banker, 51 Beach road, Glencoe, shows $7,500 and the books report the personal property of Louis Eckstein, merchant and owner of Ravinia, at $3,000.

Paul H. Wiedel, chief clerk of the assessors' office, said the valuations as given are supposed to represent a fair value for taxation purposes of the stocks, bonds, automobiles, jewelry, furniture, money in the bank and other possessions of the individuals.

Individuals are not liable for the personal property taxes of their businesses, the chief clerk added, and many securities are tax exempt. The valuations as made public are called full value, but the system is to make an equitable adjustment between the realty and personal property, he explained. Most of the figures are the owners' own statements of value.

Neighbors' Valuations.

In the general neighborhood of Vice President Dawes' home at 225 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston, the assessors' books includes the following entries:

LINDBERGH HERE PLANNING NEW AIR-RAIL LINE

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from the municipal airport, 63d street and Cicero avenue, at 2:15 yesterday afternoon for Lansing, Mich., after a conference here to perfect details of the Transcontinental Air Transport's projected air-rail service from New York to the Pacific coast. Col. Lindbergh is chairman of the Transcontinental's technical committee.

The location of airports, the type of plane to be used in the service, and time schedules occupied the conference. It was attended by Col. Paul Henderson, vice president of the Transcontinental; L. D. Seymour, assistant general manager; E. P. Lott, chief pilot, and Col. L. A. Brittin, vice president of the Northwest Airways.

Col. Lindbergh was accompanied on his takeoff for Lansing by Pilot Lott. The two planned to leave Lansing immediately for Detroit.

500 METHODISTS DEDICATE NEW SWIMMING POOL

Over 500 Methodists gathered at the Des Plaines camp yesterday to witness the formal dedication of the new swimming pool. Addresses were given by Charles S. Stewart, mayor of the village of Des Plaines, and the Rev. Charles Draper, camp manager.

Following a religious ritual and prayer, roses were cast on the pool and "the water was broken" by young men and women athletes, the diving directed by Coach Tom Robinson of Northwestern university. "A Pool Romance," directed by Supervisor F. A. Pribbenow and races and contests completed the afternoon program.

A jubilation supper was followed by an open evening at the pool. Raymond G. Kimball, president of the board of trustees of the camp, and Dr. J. Hastie Odgers, a district superintendent of the Chicago area, were in charge of the dedication.

Scoffs at Tammany as Farm Benefactor.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Although insisting he wouldn't make any political speeches until Herbert Hoover sets the course next Saturday, Louis L. Emmerson, Republican nominee for governor, took a jab at Tammany yesterday. He talked at a luncheon of the Illinois Press association at the Hotel La Salle.

His indirect thrust at Al Smith was made in the course of a brief discussion of the general lines of the campaign as he thinks they will develop.

"Place the two platforms side by side," he said, "and you will find them almost identical. Therefore you editors are not going to talk about the Democratic platform in your papers this year. You're going to talk about the precedents of the Republican party, the history of the Republican party, the great things Republican administrations have given the nation. And you're going to compare them with the records of Democratic administrations.

Personalities Make Issue.

"You are going, also, to give more thought and more consideration to the personalities in the campaign. You are going to discuss Al Smith and Tammany and the things he stands for and represents. And you will talk about the great economist, Herbert Hoover, and the things he stands for and represents. These are the subjects that are going to be fought out.

"The Republicans are going to settle this agricultural problem. It is an experimental subject and the question is not what legislation can be passed to aid in its solution or whether you can enact some legislation that will accomplish it.

"It's simply a question whether you want Tammany, that thinks corn grows in cans instead of in the fields, to enact that legislation or whether you want it settled by the friends of the farmer."

Glenn Praises Hoover.

Other Republican candidates called on were even more noncommittal on political issues. Otis F. Glenn, nominee for United States senator, however, did refer to Secretary Hoover as "the best equipped man" to settle the farmer's problem. The other nominees present included Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling, State Auditor Oscar Nelson, and William J. Stratton, nominee for secretary of state. Following the luncheon the association members and their guests attended the rodeo.

The Republican state group will get into action immediately after Secretary Hoover's speech of acceptance. A downstate tour will open on Aug. 13 with an organization meeting at Carbondale, a similar meeting at Harrisburg the following day, and then a large massmeeting at Mount Vernon, Emmerson's home, on Aug. 15. It is expected Secretary Emmerson will open his real battle at that time.

Downstate G. O. P. Meetings.

Other organization meetings this month will be held as follows: Aug. 16, East St. Louis at night; Aug. 17, Jacksonville at noon, and Springfield at night; Aug. 20, Danville at noon and Decatur at night; Aug. 21, Bloomington at noon and Peoria at night; Aug. 27, Galesburg at noon and Monmouth at night; Aug. 28, Nixon at noon and De Kalb at night; Aug. 29, Elgin at noon and Waukegan at night.

Today is to be a day of picnics for both parties in Chicago. The largest affair is John E. Conroy's Democratic picnic in Ryan's woods, in the forest preserve at 87th street and Western avenue. Starting as a Town of Lake reunion, this event has grown by the participation of German organizations until it is said that 30,000 or more will be present. United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, a close friend of Gov. Al Smith, is to be the principal speaker. Justice Floyd E. Thompson and other state nominees also will speak.

The Democratic candidates also are to attend a picnic at Shernoukas' grove near Lyons, arranged by the Thomas Jefferson club of Proviso.

The Republican picnic is a Deneen group affair arranged by United States Marshal H. C. W. Laubenheimer, committeeman of the 49th ward. It is to be held in the Harms Woods section of the county preserve near Glen View. Senator Deneen is on the program and James W. Good, western manager of the Hoover campaign, has been asked to speak. All the state and county nominees have been invited.

G. O. P. ADOPTS OFFICIAL BUTTON FOR CAMPAIGN

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Signs of an active campaign are seen by the Republican national committee in the demands for the time honored campaign buttons, the pictures of candidates, and the volunteer offerings of slogans, poems and songs.

A button bearing the single word, "Hoover," has been adopted as the official lapel tag and several million have been ordered. In response to numerous requests lithographic pictures of Herbert Hoover and Senator Curtis have been ordered, running into many millions. Demand for pictures was reported as unprecedented.

Quantities of automobile tags and stickers announcing for the Republican candidates are in the making. As for campaign songs, slogans and poems, the committee reports plenty of offerings but no selections.

LIFE MERRY IN NEW SARAJEVO, CRADLE OF WAR

Mixture of Races Adds Color to City.

(This is the third of a series of articles on a trip through Jugo-Slavia and the Dalmatian coast.)

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SARAJEVO, Aug. 4.—As the capital of Bosnia and Herzegovina under the old Austro-Hungarian régime Sarajevo was a flourishing city. It was the intention of old Austria to make this a model city for the Balkans.

Sarajevo is a happy combination of Balkan characteristics. Its population is a varied mixture of races. So tolerant was old Austria of the individual characteristics of the various peoples that lived here, that one finds even today the best models of both oriental and occidental civilizations.

It has a total population of 60,000, of which 20,000 are Turks, 7,000 Jews, and the rest a mixture of Serb, Croat, Slovene, and other Balkan races.

Numerous Minarets.

It is a picturesque city, with its numerous minarets towering above mosques and beautiful houses standing in gardens. It is scattered for the size of its population, but it has a modern business district only three blocks from a Turkish bazaar—a labyrinth of more than fifty lanes, flanked with wooden stalls. In these booths is done all kind of handiwork. There are tailors selling Turkish costumes or modern frock suits, leather workers making American style shoes, or sandals, coppersmiths making tea kettles, oriental trays, cigaret holders, candlesticks, coffee services, jewelry and silver filigree work, carpet makers interweaving their wares, and saddlers working on harnesses. There are dealers in second hand goods of all kinds.

On display is much beautiful embroidery done by Turkish women, who, prohibited the liberty of their Occidental sisters, express their spirit of romance in the execution of colorful, romantic and rich designs on drab linen.

Population Colorful.

The population itself in some places is as colorful as an American stage representation of an oriental scene; and other places as dull as a Chicago street paving crew. There are Slav women who frankly, without coquetting, look one in the eye, and Moslem women peeping from behind silk veils.

This description of Sarajevo and its population was true before the war, as it is today.

So far, one observes no change; but those who know Sarajevo before the war will tell you there has been a change and one wherein the prosperity of this community has suffered.

POLISH FLYERS MISSING ON ATLANTIC HOP

cream and blue biplane. It was dumped out at the start in order that the ship might have a cruising radius of 150 miles more.

Many Ships in Path.

The ships in the path of the plane are the Thuringia, Yorke, the Nieuw Amsterdam, the Franconia, the Cedric, and the Cameronia, all eastbound; the Minnekhada, the Hamburg, and the Bergensfjord, due at British and Norwegian ports on Monday, and the Paris, the Volendam and the Olympic.

The telegraph brought word that flying fields all along the Atlantic coast were keeping watch for the overdue aviators. Tonight the beacon lights were turned on at Long Island and New Jersey fields and officials settled down to a long wait through the night. St. Johns, N. F., was also keeping an all night vigil.

There was speculation at Mitchel field as to whether something had happened to the compass on the Pilsudski. It was feared the Poles might be completely lost, bewildered and wandering in the skies. If the plane continued in the direction it was headed when last seen it would miss Europe and plunge into the far North sea.

AN OCEAN MYSTERY.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The flight of the Polish trans-Atlantic plane Marszalek Pilsudski entered the mystery phase tonight.

As the long hop entered the fortieth hour, meager dispatches received from two vessels at sea telling of the sighting of a plane, presumably the Polish one, suggested the possibility that the machine may have turned back toward Europe or have lost its way en route to the United States.

If the Polish flyers turned their course back toward Europe, they should have reached the European coast at least by noon, eastern standard time, today. No word was received concerning them during the day and this led to the added belief that their compass may have failed them and that they were flying in a great circle.

Another possibility was that the flyers turned in a northeasterly direction in order to skirt an extensive storm area.

London's Hopes Fades.

London's Sunday morning newspapers are not optimistic. The fear is widely expressed that the flyers lost their way in the mists of the Atlantic and perhaps met disaster.

Underneath this pessimistic viewpoint there is reflected the hope that the plane came down safely at some remote spot on the European coast. As the hours passed, however, without word of any kind this possibility was thought to be more and more untenable.

But pilot friends of the two airmen refused to abandon hope. They emphasized that both the Aztec and the Amakura reported that the plane was in no apparent difficulty. It was argued that if the flyers had been in trouble or in doubt about their ability to reach port they would have come down near one of the ships.

Might Float on Ocean.

Even if the pilots lost their way and came down when their fuel gave out, it is emphasized that they still would have several good chances of rescue. Their reservoirs are equipped with valves which are supposed to discharge all tanks within forty seconds. Theoretically this would enable the plane to float although many pilots are inclined to discredit this possibility. They say that the weight of the motor would tip the cockpit in such a way that the craft's floating qualities would be greatly diminished.

In addition, for any last emergency, the flyers carried two small rubber boats.

Italians Continue Trip.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAHIA, Brazil, Aug. 4.—The Italian trans-Atlantic flyers, Capt. Arturo Ferrarin, and Maj. Carlo del Prete, hopped off from Bahia for Victoria, Brazil, at 10:40 a. m. today.

PROHIBITION: AN IRREPRESSIBLE ISSUE.

We quoted the other day from a pronouncement of four bishops of a church organized to defend the slave traffic notifying "the defenders and advocates of the liquor traffic that the moral forces of the country will not be driven from the field," etc.

The picture of the prohibition controversy thus presented is one in which the prohibitionists—identified as "the moral forces of the country"—are arrayed against the opponents of prohibition or Volstead—identified as "defenders and advocates of the liquor traffic."

This picture is drawn for the sake of terrorizing opposition and is as palpably dishonest in its implications as any partisan tirade produced in the practical politics of the worldly laymen. The phrase "liquor traffic" has an important place in the prohibition movement. It gave the objective against which the maximum moral force of the nation could be rallied. It unified the whole temperance movement for an attack upon a selfish, ruthless, stupid, and mischievous industry. It distracted attention from the sweeping intentions of the prohibitionists, whose proposal was to abolish the undeniable, notorious, and intolerable evils of the liquor traffic, but who were really bent upon abolishing not merely the abuses but all use of alcoholic beverages.

As to the notorious evils of the organized commerce in alcohol, there was and could be no difference of opinion. The American saloon was an institution which was defended or condoned by some social idealists as the poor man's club, but it was in practice a focus of evil which required the strictest checks and perhaps could not be satisfactorily dealt with save by complete abolition. It fostered the most foolish and intemperate customs in drinking and there is no reputable opinion among the opponents of prohibition favorable to its return.

Back of the saloon was the manufacturing industry which employed it as its chief agency of distribution. This industry—distilling and brewing both—was undoubtedly the most callous, socially irresponsible, and purblind of any great business in our history. It made itself an offense in the nostrils. It entered and corrupted politics to protect its freedom to do as it pleased regardless of public morals or private happiness. It fought the most reasonable regulations with an unscrupulousness and a stupidity which insured its own destruction.

When the very small minority in the opposition to prohibition which represents what may remain of financial in a restored traffic in liquor berates prohibition as fanatical and excessive, it deserves no hearing from any sensible man. The liquor traffic put itself out of court. It committed suicide and, so far as its selfish interest is concerned, it deserves no pity.

So stupid and so vicious was the stubborn resistance of this powerful traffic that the conscience and good sense of the American people were steadily mobilizing against it, to shackle it and bring it within the bounds of permissible activity. Following constitutional lines of control, through local option, not only was the dry area spreading, but under the influence of private conscience and education the intemperate use of alcohol was decreasing steadily. Propaganda of health and of business efficiency were producing habits of self-control, true temperance. We were rapidly becoming a temperate people.

But this sound and hopeful process was not satisfying to the zealots of total abstinence. It did not promise or even contemplate the miracle of a nation suddenly bone dry and meekly obedient. It promised the gradual elimination of the general abuses of drink and the proper regulation of the commercial methods of the industry.

This fell far short of a total abstinence zealot's demand, and under the peculiar conditions in which the war involved us, with its intense but temporary preoccupations, the project for empowering the national government to enforce total abstinence upon all the people was adopted. This experiment never had any adequate discussion. Prohibitionists assert it had, but the years of propaganda against the saloon and against the liquor traffic did not include any general consideration by the American people of the issues involved in national prohibition. The fundamental importance of these issues is now being realized and prohibitionist zealots are trying to prevent their consideration and discussion. They are aware that when prohibition is given calm and free consideration, in these normal times, and in the light of the deplorable consequences which such an ill conceived experiment has brought upon us, its unwisdom in morals, in political and social expediency, in constitutional right will appear.

The heedless thrusting into the fundamental law of the nation of a total abstinence mandate produces a political problem of the most deplorable difficulty. It was a revolutionary act inconsiderately done and it divided the people of the nation on an issue of principle as serious as that of Negro slavery. The effort to apply this mandate by rigid and excessive federal law and administration has demoralized the whole system of law enforcement throughout the country. The rebellion of the individual against what millions of our people regard as an unjustifiable invasion of private conscience has involved excesses of private habit and a spirit of distrust of and disrespect for public law which more than offset such economic and social benefits as can be responsibly credited to the experiment.

To brush these considerations and these consequences aside, to pretend that their discussion is merely an expression of voluptuous self-indulgence or of organized economic interest in the liquor traffic, that it is founded in bad morals and irreligion, is the resort of fanaticism and cannot be tolerated in a nation of freemen.

The term wet is applied as an epithet of moral condemnation to all who do not accept prohibition as a successful and permanent scheme of dealing with the abuses of the liquor traffic or of private habit. It is intended to classify, contrary to the truth, all dissentients from law imposed teetotalism as "defenders and advocates of the liquor traffic." THE TRIBUNE is so classified, but THE TRIBUNE was one of the first of American newspapers to exclude all advertisements of liquor from its columns on grounds of public policy, and cooperated for the extension of local prohibition in the belief that a local community, in the exercise of the police power, may properly take such action as the community's conscience approves for the regulation or suppression of the traffic in liquor. That is still our policy, a policy regardful of the wise distribution of powers and responsibilities under our constitutional system. We and the overwhelming majority of opponents of the prohibition fiasco are as little defenders and advocates of the evils of the liquor traffic as Bishop Cannon or the Rev. Clarence True Wilson. We hold our opinions on as high a moral plane and propose to do what is possible to bring about a more effectual and less demoralizing system of dealing with the problem of intemperance than prohibition.

Meanwhile no American in or out of public life, with regard to his duty as a citizen or his self-respect as a free man, can permit himself to be bullied into silence and acquiescence in the evils of prohibition by the accusations or implications of organized zealots, professional propagandists, or clericals seeking power and publicity through politics.

TITLES FOR AMERICANS.

James Watson Gerard, ambassador to Germany under Woodrow Wilson, is irritated at being addressed by a mere New York reporter as Sir James. He is Sir James in England, having received the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath which now carries the honor of the sir address—that is, the honor of knighthood.

If Mr. Gerard was willing to receive the honor, we do not think he should blush at even a mere reporter's or, as the British would say, pressman's recognition of it. Gen. Pershing is Sir John to the British, having received the same honor. Sir James is in good company.

On the other hand, we suspect, he may be struggling with a sense of discomfort rather well founded. These honors for diplomatic service to a foreign country have ironic implications. Especially our American diplomacy is, with considerable reason, suspected of being unduly susceptible to the glamour of old world courts and not always as keen in avoiding the complications of old world diplomacy as a shrewd concentration upon American interests would permit. The tendency of a certain familiar type of American diplomatic representative to forget he is a representative of the country that sends him forth and to surrender to the extraordinary illusion that he represents the country he is sent to has been illustrated in conspicuous instances. It is humiliating to American self-respect and capable of being seriously compromising to American interest.

We hope a time is coming when foreign honors will be refused by all American citizens and we think this might be preceded by a strict policy of refusal by our diplomats. It would be a sacrifice of personal gratification in the interest of zealous and reliable representation which it is not unreasonable to require of them. The young republic abolished titles of nobility for its citizens and the principle should be respected. If it is un-American and inadvisable for the republic to bestow them, it seems to us it is even more so to receive them from a foreign power. Tuft hunting is an offensive weakness in the private American, but it is worse in the official representative of a republic which has eschewed aristocracy and its trappings.

Editorial of the Day

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD.

[Hugh Walpole in the London Graphic.]

America is undisputedly on the top of the world, and all the signs are that she will remain there. England was once—and for a very long period—on the top of the world and, partly because she threw a great deal more than she possessed into the war and got nothing at all out of it, she is there no longer. A very good thing, too.

And because America is on top of the world she is disliked by a number of persons. She is disliked, let it be said, by those who know her least; by visitors of a week or two, unsuccessful lecturers or victims of the more self-confident type of American tourist. We, too, were loathed when we were on top of the world by every one who wasn't.

But America is disliked in Europe not only because she is on the top, owns most of the world's gold, has amost no income tax and gives every one of her workmen a motor car (this last is said every day somewhere by some Englishman and is quite untrue), but also because her influence is said to be spreading disastrously in Europe and especially in England.

In what does this influence consist? What are the fine qualities of modern America's character? They are, I think, vitality, opportunity, warmth of heart, scorn of tradition, equal opportunities for every one, openness of mind, courage. And what are the bad qualities? False values, absence of esthetic standards, restlessness, shallowness, too much common denominator, provincialism, too little depth of knowledge, arrogance, ignorance.

I feel that America is suffering from a false standard of values, and that there is a danger that she will influence Europe unfortunately in this.

A second dangerous direction of influence is toward superficiality; and with this are connected questions of culture, physical restlessness, and peace of mind. Herein, I think, lies America's real danger to Europe.

THE GOLDEN RULE

BY ALBERT W. HARRIS.

[President of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank and member of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church.]

Those who have given consideration to the great strides our country has made in everything that has contributed to the national advancement in all lines of endeavor, those who have noted the position the United States has attained among the nations of the world and by comparison have realized the advantages and opportunities open to every individual, if they have been looking for the cause would no doubt claim that this condition is due to the abundance of our natural resources, the character of our citizens, and our form of government.

Without minimizing these advantages it might be well to consider that other countries have citizens equally capable—in any event, many who come over to this country show as much ability in the various lines of endeavor they take up as any of our native sons; other countries have natural resources and forms of government under which they should be able to take advantage of the ability of their citizens and their resources to develop a better and more prosperous condition for their people. To whatever extent this is true, the question which immediately presents itself is, Why have they failed? What vital thing is it they lack which we have? If we have it, can we keep it?

The human race has inhabited the world for untold ages and there have been various forms of government and many degrees of advancement in the civilized countries, but history fails to give us any account of new countries being settled save for conquest or for the purpose of despoiling the conquered except by the original settlers of this country. Surviving all the vicissitudes and trials out of which came our present government was the one idea which has slowly grown and developed, that every one should have the same opportunity, the same privilege of religious belief as any other; in other words, while all the people did not think alike, the great underlying principle was to believe in and follow the Golden Rule, really to "do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

As the years went by, built upon this foundation, the business conscience of the nation adopted it as its slogan, but called it "approved business methods," and under it the youth of the nation accepted and assimilated it into its sports under the slogan "play the game." For various reasons millions of people were drawn to take up their residence here where this ideal, based upon the Golden Rule, had taken such a hold upon the country that liberty, equality, and fraternity was the rock upon which the government rested. As this sentiment grew and strengthened, it made itself felt in the way business was done, the way the games were played, and while the large majority do not go so far as to say that if you do not believe in the Golden Rule and are not trying to live up to it you are not a good citizen, nevertheless as a substitute they do say, "You must employ approved business methods in your business, and outside of business, in your sports and intercourse with your associates, you must play the game." It has been these approved business methods which have enabled business to make the strides it has, which have expedited in various ways the building up of the country to take advantage of these resources, and which through confidence in the integrity of others have developed a system of credit that has no equal.

No other country has the facilities for doing business that we have, because their methods do not rest upon the same foundation. They do not grasp the great basic principle of the Golden Rule under which this country is carrying on, based upon liberty, equality, and fraternity, demonstrated in approved business methods and the slogan, "play the game." To whatever extent any line of business has failed, it will be discovered that the foundations were not laid upon these principles, or they had refused to adopt them. Experience has shown that the more nearly business can bring itself up to the approved standards the more secure will our prosperity be. This I think is the basis of the prosperity that has come to us and which is lacking elsewhere. England and perhaps Holland are the only other countries that approach this ideal or would understand the idea back of the expression, "playing the game."

The chamber of commerce of the United States, the federation of American business, is our greatest exponent of approved business methods founded upon the Golden Rule and under its leadership business is gradually being brought under the unwritten law. This is the vital thing; this unwritten law, which has come to be accepted by such a large percentage of our people, is the great basic principle upon which our prosperity has been built. To keep it is of the utmost importance. Those who have the welfare of the country at heart should see to it that the principle is fostered and strengthened. Let the churches abandon much of their creed for a more unified presentation of the Golden Rule, to the end that an even greater number will come to a realization of the principle that the Golden Rule is the proper basis of all sound business and good sportsmanship, that to be a Christian is no bar to being a business man, a sportsman, or any worth while man.

There is nothing, we believe, which distinguishes this age from past generations or America from most of Europe more than this same conception which makes religion contribute to life in all its phases. We are not to be taken out of the world, but to be kept from the evil that is in the world.

To show how simple religion is, we may cite Christ's dealing with men as examples. On one occasion a lawyer asked Jesus, "Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus said, "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' On these two commandments hang all the law and prophets."

When the question was asked, "Who is my neighbor?" Jesus replied by telling the story of the man who fell among thieves on the Jericho road and was rescued by the Good Samaritan. The wounded man no doubt was a Jew and all Samaritans were supposed to hate the Jews. So the kindness and service rendered the Jew by the Samaritan was an illustration of the Golden Rule.

We would have less trouble with religion if we gladly obeyed the clearly understood commandments of God instead of seeking to solve the mysterious riddles of the universe. The Golden Rule is one of those plain, unmistakable sayings of Christ which if obeyed will bring to the world the era about which the angels sang at Christ's birth, "Peace on earth, good will to men."

FAVORITE HYMNS

19.

BY THE REV. ROBERT ROBINSON.

Come, thou fount of every blessing,
  Tune my heart to sing thy grace;
Streams of mercy, never ceasing,
  Call for songs of loudest praise.
Teach me some melodious sonnet,
  Sung by flaming tongues above;
Praise the mount—I'm fixed upon it—
  Mount of thy redeeming love.

Here I raise my Ebenezer;
  Hither by thy help I'm come;
And I hope, by thy good pleasure,
  Safely to arrive at home.
Jesus sought me when a stranger,
  Wandering from the fold of God;
He, to rescue me from danger,
  Interposed his precious blood.

O to grace how great a debtor
  Daily I'm constrained to be!
Let thy goodness, like a fetter,
  Bind my wandering heart to thee.
Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it,
  Prone to leave the God I love;
Here's my heart, O take and seal it;
  Seal it for thy souls above.

(Clip this hymn and paste it in your Tribune scrap book and listen to it tonight on W-G-N from 6:00 to 6:20 during the Million Sing.)

METHODS OF AVOIDING HAY FEVER.

LAST summer I met a judge from a town in what is called the rural districts. He told me his method of avoiding hay fever, to which in former years he was a devotee. In recent years he comes to Chicago, where he has been commissioned to sit as a judge. He holds court in the center of the city, miles away from any large number of trees and weeds. He sticks close to the paved streets and the center of things. He loves his chickens and plant life, too, but when his passion for the rural threatens to choke him he remembers hay fever and, restraining his emotions, he sticks to the paving. He told me that he is one of a group that gathers each summer in the area of roofs and rocks, thus avoiding all flowering plants and the hay fever they cause.

Dr. E. V. Hill tells in the Aërologist of a lady whose son had hay fever. He advised her to install an electrically driven fan, drawing air through a very fine mesh muslin cloth. This would filter the pollen out and discharge into the house air free from the cause of hay fever. The advice was followed, and the boy now stays inside the house during the hay fever season and escapes the disease in its very uncomfortable forms.

In the same number of the same magazine Dr. M. B. Cohen tells of his experience along the same line. At the beginning of the hay fever season he has the living room thoroughly cleaned and renovated. All rugs and draperies are removed and the floor is oiled and waxed. The furniture is reduced to a bed, a table, and a few chairs. The mattress and pillows are covered with rubber. Cats, birds, and rats are allowed to go on a vacation. Air is brought into this room by an electric fan. It is drawn through a duct which perforates a board set in the window. In this duct there is a set of cloth filters with a fine mesh. He says he has kept the air over 99 per cent free from dust and pollen.

Some health departments are now making daily pollen accounts of the air. In places there are weed cutting ordinances. In Tallahassee, Fla., the city cuts the weeds on the streets and in public places as a part of its duty. Weeds on private property also are cut, for which the city makes a charge. The notice in the paper reads:

NOTICE.

The city will cut and remove weeds from lots of 50 foot frontage by 170 feet for $2. Apply to city office to make payment and get work order, which will be executed immediately.

The Aërologist tells of a Mr. Durham who collects pollen and sells it. He gets from $40 to $300 an ounce. If we can only look on pollen as valuable, in time we may kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

"BURNING" IN MOUTH.

Mrs. J. B. writes: I have a burning, scalding sensation in my mouth constantly and feel weak. What is the cause of this?

REPLY.

You should be examined especially for pellagra, pernicious anemia and septic anemia.

SMOKING GROUND COFFEE.

S. M. writes: I know several boys between the ages of 12 and 17 years who smoke ground coffee in pipes and inhale the smoke.

Will you please advise the effect the smoke has on the smokers?

REPLY.

Such smoke contains no nicotine. It does contain as much carbon monoxide and acrolein as tobacco smoke. These products cause smoker's cough and smoker's throat.

The principal objection to it is that it is a stepping stone to tobacco smoking.

CARRYING FIRE ARMS.

Chicago, July 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise me about carrying a gun through Iowa, Nebraska, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, California, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, and Illinois. We are making a trip of the western states by automobile. The gun will be carried in a half holster tied to the hand brake lever, where it can be seen by all. F. G. S.

The 1925 Illinois statute provides: "No person shall carry concealed on or about his person a pistol, revolver or other firearms." In 322 Illinois at page 52, our Supreme court held "about his person" means sufficiently close to the person to be readily accessible for immediate use. A firearm is concealed about the person when it is pushed down behind the cushion of an automobile on which the accused is sitting. But not when it is lying on the floor. We know of no difference in the ruling of the other states that you mention.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT OBLIGATORY.

Chicago, July 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Some time ago I bought stock in a company. I have asked them for a list of the other stockholders but they say they haven't the time to give me such a list.

1. Shall I ask them once more?
2. Shall I employ an attorney to get a list for me?
3. If I do employ a lawyer, who has to pay him? H. S.

1. They are under no obligation to furnish such information to you but you are entitled to examine their books for the purpose of securing such information.
2. Yes, if you so desire.
3. You do.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

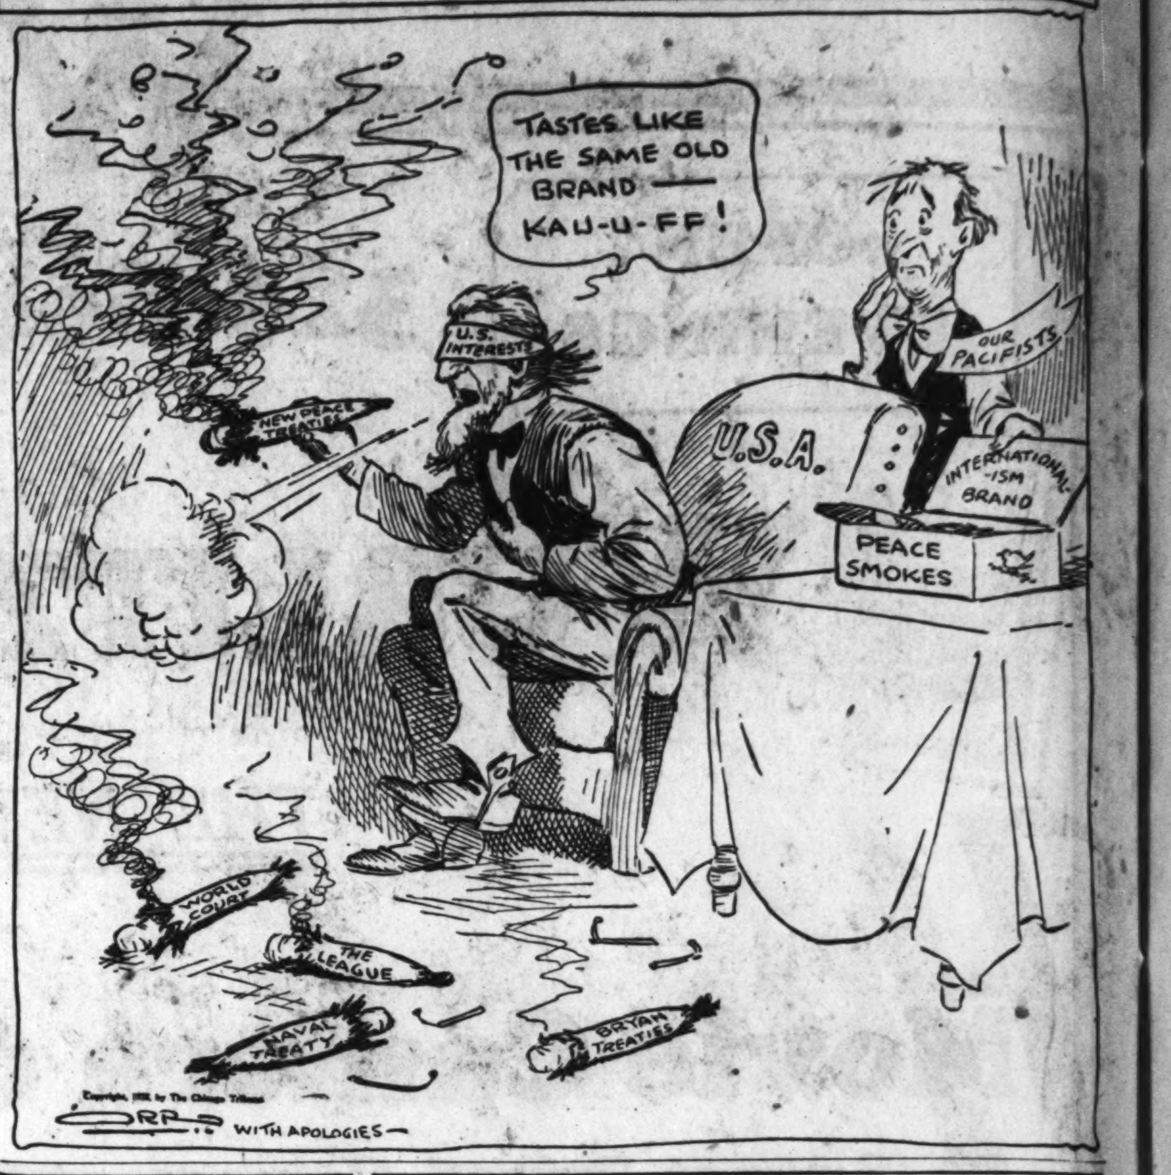
BEARS INVESTIGATION.

Chicago, July 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—We are three brothers. Our father died leaving no will. He had a farm of 160 acres which he signed over to my oldest brother. 1. Have we two remaining brothers any chance to get something out of that farm? 2. What steps should we take? J. M.

1. Depends upon the proof that you can make that your brother was understood to take the title as trustee and not under an absolute gift.
2. Go over the facts in a personal interview with an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ANOTHER BLINDFOLD TEST



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY.

AUGUST 5, 1863.

VICKSBURG.—In the late advance on Jackson, Miss., letters were captured confirming the treason of James Buchanan. Letters from Jeff Davis to Buchanan, in copy, and replies from the Old Public Functionary confirm Gen. Scott's accusation.

VICKSBURG.—Maj. Gen. John S. Bowen of the rebel army died of dysentery a few days ago.

BALTIMORE.—The Richmond Whig, under date of Montgomery, Ala., July 29, says: "The funeral of William Lowndes Yancey, the southern leader and orator, took place this afternoon." The Whig also says that John B. Floyd is very ill and is not expected to recover.

WASHINGTON.—Among those hit by the draft are Deputy Commissioner McPherson of the internal revenue bureau; John G. Nicolay, one of President Lincoln's private secretaries; Return J. Meigs, clerk of the District Supreme court, and a large number of department clerks.

CHICAGO.—Archibald Clybourn celebrated the anniversary of his 40th year in Chicago, having arrived here on Aug. 5, 1823. Then there were about twenty white inhabitants at Fort Dearborn and perhaps 5,000 Indians. Only four of the twenty are now known to be living, and none of those is a resident of Chicago.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY.

AUGUST 5, 1898.

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Alger has made public the correspondence between himself and Col. Theodore Roosevelt in which the latter asks to have his regiment of Rough Riders sent to Porto Rico. He makes reflections on the state troops as a whole and states: "We could land at Porto Rico, in this cavalry division, close to 4,000 men who would be worth easy any 10,000 National Guards armed with black powder Springfields or other archaic weapons." Alger's reply is curt, and cautions Roosevelt against making invidious comparisons. He says: "The Rough Riders are no better than other volunteers. They had an advantage in their arms for which they should be grateful."

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Shafter and his subordinate officers have joined in a startling appeal to the government to remove the American army from Cuba. They show it is in peril from yellow fever. The action follows a letter from Col. Theodore Roosevelt to Gen. Shafter in which the Rough Riders' commander wrote: "To keep us here will simply involve the destruction of thousands." He cited the many cases of malarial fever in the division and continued: "The whole command is so weakened and shattered as to be ripe for dying like rotten sheep when a real yellow fever epidemic, instead of a fake epidemic like the present, strikes us, as it is bound to if we stay here at the height of the sickness season." After Col. Roosevelt took the initiative all the American general officers united in a "round robin" to Gen. Shafter.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY.

AUGUST 5, 1918.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Our troops have taken Fismes by assault and hold the south bank of the Vesle in this section," says Gen. Pershing's report on the day's fighting.

PARIS.—Both flanks of the German forces between Reims and Soissons appear to have been turned. The French have forced a crossing of the Vesle west of Reims. German reinforcements are reported arriving in the Soissons sector from the north. The number of prisoners captured by the allies during the last two days will thrill the allied world when announced.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE.—It is reported that Albert is entirely evacuated and the town ruined and smashed to pieces. The enemy before retiring blew up all the dugouts along the railway embankment north of Dernancourt. The Germans have withdrawn between Montdidier and Moreuil, a distance of 10 miles.

CHICAGO.—Out of the many who have gone from THE TRIBUNE it was a "cub" reporter who took the first sting of death. He was Lieut. Robert M. Lovett, only son of Dean Robert M. Lovett of the University of Chicago. He went to France a year ago and was assigned to a New England regiment.

THE PRICE OF WHEAT IN WAR TIME.

Helena, Mont., July 24.—Isn't it about time that the truth were told about who set the price of $2.20 on wheat during the war?

In view of the usual Tammany hokum that is being sent out of New York daily, on every possible subject, it seems to me a little leaven of truth would be refreshing.

As my memory serves me we had a Democratic President and a congress Democratic in both house and senate during the war, and our every act was under the domination of that President and congress. Mr. Hoover was made food administrator by Wilson and ordered to Europe. A commission was appointed, held various and sundry meetings in Washington under the eyes of the Democratic administration and finally set a price of $2.20 for American wheat.

Mr. Hoover was not a member of that commission, did not advise with it or have any more to do with its decision than the man in the street. Yet Tammany spokesmen, everywhere, with their usual disregard for truth, have seen fit to spread the idea that Hoover is the author of $2.20 wheat.

Since when has the Democratic party, or, more properly speaking, that little clique of New York City slickers, ever shown any regard for the man in the country? It is to laugh. Most of them think corn grows in a bottle and that egg plants are gathered in chicken houses. On the contrary, the New Yorker has always been arrogant and overbearing toward the "hick," as he calls any one from any point in the United States outside of Manhattan island.

L. O. MARBURY.

THE SYMPHONY CRISIS.

Chicago, July 27.—Bully for "Gallery," he has the right idea. It's about time some one else took a hand in this symphony fight, some one with influence enough to force the matter to a definite issue.

Why can't the leaders in art, science and literature get together with the newspapers and impose their will on these two factions that are at loggerheads with each other? There has been too much apathy in this matter on the part of the general public, too much taking for granted that things would right themselves in time. Perhaps, if those who are genuinely interested in maintaining the symphony will give free reign to their feelings and allow their smoldering wrath to burst forth into chastening flames, the warring combatants might heed the danger signal and unbend from their stiff necked attitude.

Even one winter with silence—unbroken silence—holding forth in Orchestra hall, that temple of art where the world's greatest musicians have strutted, is too awful to contemplate.

ORPHEUS.

GOV. SMITH PASSES THE CIGARS.

Rockford, Ill., July 26.—Is or is not James O'Donnell Bennett correctly reporting Gov. Smith's activities at Albany? I refer to the story in today's TRIBUNE regarding the governor's query of one of his admirers, if he could pass cigars like a bartender. The admirer not being successful, Gov. Smith proceeded to show how it was done.

If this is true, what manner of person is this Smith that he should imitate or glorify a barkeep? Is that the kind of a man who aspires to be President of the United States? Is the imitator of bartenders to sit in the same chair in which Jefferson, Cleveland, and Wilson sat?

C. W. MUNNS.

AN IOWAN FOR HOOVER.

Chicago, July 27.—I think the following extract from a letter received from a brother in Iowa, who was very sore and said a few weeks ago that he would never support Hoover, explains the true situation politically in the corn belt.

"I note what you say regarding politics. Of course, there is a great deal of resentment among the farmers, but when it comes to voting they will think a long time before they support a wet Tammany man.

"I will not vote for Smith. I did say that I would not vote at all, but better judgment impels me to vote for Hoover. I think I am like thousands of other Republicans who have said and now say they will vote for Smith. Smith will never carry Iowa nor any of the other western agricultural states unless it be Illinois. If he carries your state it will be the city of Chicago that will give it to him. Hoover need not fear losing the farmer states, but he does need to fear what these big cities will do to him."

I think this brother of mine has hit the nail right on the head. He is absolutely right.

FORMER IOWAN.

THE PLAGUE OF MOSQUITOES.

Chicago, July 27.—The plague of mosquitoes that has been bothering us since July 3 is not due to the failure of the Chicago mosquito eradication campaign nor to the rainy season, although the latter has aggravated the condition. The real cause is the storm that swept down on us from the northwest on July 1, bringing in hordes of the pests from the lakes and rivers to the northwest of us where eradication work is not carried on. Before this storm we were not bothered, but after it they were here in swarms. They do not breed that fast.

R. W. BEAUCHER.

HUMBOLDT PARK.

Chicago, July 26.—Wednesday night, in Humboldt park, a young man with a few friends met his sister and a girl friend and stopped to talk to them. A self-important policeman, whose number I unfortunately failed to get, but whom I will not fail to recognize again, walked up and snarled out a curt "break it up." Naturally, as they were doing nothing wrong, the brother of the girl protested at the insult. At the time the policeman was about 15 feet away and called out, "You, with the straw hat, come here." The young man walked up to the policeman, who doubled his fist and with all his force punched him between the eyes. Then, "Now will you get out of here?"

And we recoil at stories of Cossack liberties and atrocities.

In his letter to Senator Steiwer [Rep., Ore.], chairman of the senate committee, and Representative Lehlbach [Rep., N. J.], chairman of the house committee, Mr. Nutt said that complete records were open to their inspection at any time, and that he would be glad to answer any questions relative to the various items.

Four Chicagoans Listed.

Contributions from four Chicagoans were included in the statement. They were $5,000 each from Noble Brandon Judah, American ambassador to Cuba, and William Wrigley Jr.; $2,500 from James A. Patten, and $1,200 from Henry J. Patten.

Announcement was made today that the address of Herbert Hoover at the notification exercises at Palo Alto, Cal., next Saturday will be heard over the air on the largest hook-up in the history of broadcasting. Prediction that New Jersey will go heavily Republican in November was made by Senator Edge [Rep., N. J.], in a statement made public by Representative Fort [Rep., N. J.], secretary of the Republican national committee who talked with the senator just before he sailed for Europe a few days ago. This prediction was in conflict with the claims of Democrats, who seem confident that Gov. Smith's popularity in the neighbor state of New Jersey will be sufficient to carry it for the minority party.

E. L. COOLEY DIES; WIDELY KNOWN AS CIVIL ENGINEER

Ernest L. Cooley, member of an old Chicago family of civil engineers and for thirty years a hydraulic engineer in the employ of the sanitary district of Chicago, died yesterday at the Canandaigua, N. Y., summer home of his brother, Mortimer E. Cooley, for many years dean of the college of engineering of the University of Michigan.

Ernest Cooley, who left Chicago a number of years ago, was 72 years old. He was also the brother of the late Lyman E. Cooley, nationally famous engineer and known as one of the progenitors of the Chicago drainage canal.

In 1903 the French government awarded Ernest Cooley a gold medal at the Paris exposition for his design of a dam used in controlling high water. He lived in Evanston for a number of years. He was known as a most extensive reader, widely informed on all manner of subjects.

RE-STEPS PATH OF LOVE THAT ENDED IN GIRL'S DEATH

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The trail of love, anger, and alleged murder, along which pretty Barbara Mauger went to a grewsome death, was restepped today by Russell S. Beitzel in company with officers, who charge he slew the girl after a season of illicit companionship.

Weary from the hours of questioning that preceded the placing of a murder charge against him yesterday, Beitzel denied he was responsible for the death of Miss Mauger, whose body was found in a mountain thicket north of here Thursday.

Evidence at the scene indicated the girl, who came to California from Philadelphia with Beitzel, had been shot through the head and pushed from a cliff where she was left to die.

Beitzel was taken today to the office of a friend from whom he said he borrowed a revolver to practice shooting at a spot only 200 yards from where the body was found. That was two days before he said Miss Mauger left him at the same spot after a quarrel.

From there the accused man was taken to the address where he and the young woman lived unwed to be confronted by neighbors to whom police say he told conflicting stories regarding his "wife's" disappearance.

DAVID O'CONNELL RETIRED CAPTAIN OF FIREMEN, DIES

Capt. David O'Connell, retired fireman who was known as "Big Dave" because of his size, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Farley, at 2543 North California avenue. He was 80 years old.

After serving in the 32d Illinois infantry during the civil war, Capt. O'Connell reinlisted and campaigned against the Indians in the west. In 1877 he became a truckman of the fire department in Chicago, in 1883 he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant, and in 1855 he was made a captain. He had several honorable mentions to his credit for meritorious work in saving lives.

At the World's Fair in 1893 Capt. O'Connell was awarded a prize for being the biggest man in any fire department in the country. He was six feet four and one-half inches tall and weighed 275 pounds. Besides Mrs. Farley, he is survived by a daughter and a son. Funeral services will be held at St. Sylvester's church at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, and burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Death was caused by bronchial pneumonia. Allison became ill while spending his honeymoon at his summer home at Port Washington, N. Y. He was married only recently to Miss Lucille Massett of Miami, Fla., his secretary.

INQUIRY STARTED INTO LOANS TO BANK EXAMINER

C. H. Meyer Ousted After Borrowing $414,000.

Investigation was under way yesterday of the financial affairs of Charles H. Meyer, recently ousted as head of the bank examination department of the Chicago Clearing House association. He borrowed $414,000 from Chicago banks on his own notes.

Steps were being considered yesterday for the appointment of a committee of bankers to receive an assignment of Mr. Meyer's assets and realize on them for the payment of the notes.

George M. Reynolds, chairman of the board of directors of the Continental and Commercial National bank, and head of the clearing house committee, said he was satisfied there was nothing wrong in any of the banks from which Meyer obtained loans. Mr. Reynolds said he believed Meyer extended no favors in return for the loans, but that whereas Meyer always had been severe and exacting in regard to examination "he might have been a little easier" with the banks that favored him.

H. W. Sims Takes Job.

The one bank that loaned Meyer $149,000 was not a national bank, Mr. Reynolds said, in reply to a query as to why Howard W. Sims, formerly chief examiner of national banks, had not noticed this loan and made inquiry. Sims took Meyer's place when Meyer was forced to resign the position said to pay $30,000 a year salary.

As to the possibility of any action against Meyer, beyond demanding his resignation from the clearing house job, one report was that he had made a written statement to a bank that he and his wife were worth in excess of $500,000. Any action at law will depend on the results of the inquiry.

The banks had information that 85 per cent of Meyer's stocks are in the hands of a brokerage house, and that Meyer had done considerable speculation in stocks.

Banks' Position Secure.

"No bank is in any danger as a result of Meyer's loans," said State Auditor Oscar Nelson. "If there is no salvage the banks can charge off their losses without impairing their stability."

"The banks are in business to lend money," Auditor Nelson added in response to a question as to the regularity of the transactions. "And occasionally they have losses. No, I do not think any of the examining forces are at fault, as Meyer kept a step ahead of them, switching his loans about from time to time."

At the Belden-Stratford hotel, where Meyer has resided with his wife and son, it was said he had been gone for more than a week and had not given up his rooms. His whereabouts were unknown.

SERBIA HOLDING JUGO-SLAVIA IN GRASP OF IRON

Croats Threaten to Split Kingdom.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Aug. 4.—The kingdom of Jugo-Slavia is threatening to fall apart owing to objections from Croatia, which now are assuming a revolutionary character, against the hegemony Serbia has maintained over the affairs of the nation.

Serbia, according to its own figures, comprises only one-third of the population of the kingdom, but manages to keep a majority in parliament.

Stephan Raditch, the Croatian peasant leader, in the last election polled 532,000 votes, electing 67 deputies. Despite the proportional system, the groups forming the so-called national bloc elected 162 deputies. They polled 1,040,000 votes.

No Free Election in Macedonia.

In territories like Macedonia, occupied by the military, no free elections are held. The government virtually appoints deputies. In districts where the Hungarians are in majority, the Serbian minorities emerge victorious. In several places electors are prevented from going to the polls.

In some provinces only votes for the majority candidate count. For example 40,000 votes were cast in Banat. Of these 22,000 were polled by the government and the other 18,000 were thrown out, although the opposition claims these 18,000 votes entitled them to three deputies.

In Hungarian and German districts, in addition to the terror instilled by the gendarmerie during elections, traffic in streets is stopped, bridges are put under repairs and made impassable and other devices are used to prevent people from voting.

Serbs Control Army.

The control of the government gives Serbia control of the army. Serbia sends its own regiments to Croatia and transfers the Croatian regiments to Macedonia. Prefects of provinces and districts, who have wide powers, are appointed by Belgrade.

Under the Serbian administration all the new territories are suffering from inequalities. Per capita figures show that Serbian taxes over a period of eight years averaged 559 dinars [$9.50] against 783 dinars [$13.31] for Croatia; 694 dinars [$11.79] for Bosnia; 846 dinars [$14.38] for Voyvodina and 1,336 dinars [$22.71] for Slavonia. Serbia paid into the treasury this year only 37 per cent of the total taxes, although more than half the expenditure for public improvements was in Serbia. Forty per cent was spent for national defense and the balance for administration.

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Though Stanley Bocian, 30 years old, died yesterday refusing to tell who fired the shot which resulted in his death, police assert his brother Peter, 23 years old, was his assailant and say they have affidavits of witnesses of the shooting to prove it.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The Red Cross reported today that 120,000 persons have been affected by floods in the Mississippi valley this year and that one-half as many counties have been inundated as during the spectacular disaster a year ago.

The relief organization said the only reason why public attention has not been directed toward conditions this year is because they lack the dramatic features of the 1927 rise.

Robert E. Bondy, manager of the eastern area, reports that twenty-eight relief workers have been stationed in Arkansas, Missouri and Louisiana where tributaries have been flooded since May. There has been no loss of life because the water rose slowly, enabling all to reach safety.

Another staff of relief workers is on duty at points in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia where the Big Sandy, Licking and other rivers have been in flood.

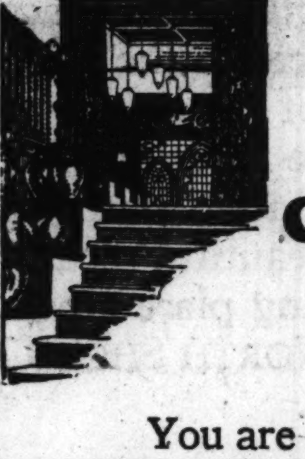
"The economic losses this year have been tremendous," Bondy reported.

Dr. E. G. Clancy Buried with Military Services

Dr. Eugene G. Clancy, Chicago physician, was buried yesterday with full military ceremonies in Mount Carmel cemetery. Funeral services were conducted at St. Mel's church by the Rev. John J. O'Hearn, who was major of the old 7th infantry of which Dr. Clancy was an officer. Verdun post of the American Legion, assisted by state officers of the legion and representatives from other legion posts in Cook county, conducted the military burial. Howard P. Savage, past national commander of the legion, headed the delegation.

STORE IS ROBBED OF $200.

More than $200 in cash and $80 worth of silk shirts were taken by three armed bandits yesterday from the notion store of Louis Berenson, 2201 Wentworth avenue, after they had locked a clerk and a newsboy in a back room.



If the Funeral Is Conducted by "Hursen"

You are absolutely sure of two things: First, that on every "Hursen" funeral there is lavished the utmost elegance, the most generous and highly specialized service, and the most superb automobile equipment ever before supplied at funerals, without any exception, and—

Secondly, you are absolutely sure that however large or small the funeral, you obtain this unmatched elegance at a fraction of the charges ordinarily made elsewhere.

It is this policy, established years ago, of giving the utmost for the least outlay, that has built up "Hursen's" to what it is today—the largest and most favorably known institution of its kind in America! It explains the reason why families in every part of Chicago and its suburbs will call no one but "Hursen."

All Chicago knows that "Hursen" automobile equipment, seen only at "Hursen" funerals, is unequaled in this country in beauty, size, comfort and riding qualities. "Hursen" drivers are subject to unusually strict requirements. Most of them are employes of long standing. They are severely chosen for their manner, appearance, attentiveness and technical ability.

The charge for the use of the "Hursen-Lincolnd" cars is no greater than the charges usually made for much less desirable equipment. Devotion and self-respect demand the best at a funeral. So, call Hursen, of course!

MANAGERS HOPE FOR 100,000 AT HOOVER DEBUT

Nominee's Shyness Frets Folk of Home State.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Palo Alto, Cal., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover's address, accepting the Republican nomination for the presidency and stating the principles on which he will engage the Democratic party in combat, was finished late last night and came from the university printers today for confidential distribution.

His speech will be delivered about 4 p. m. [or 7 p. m., Chicago daylight saving time] next Saturday at the university stadium.

During this week, Mr Hoover will confer with party leaders here, including Secretary of War Davis, who comes Monday, and Chairman Hubert Work. Mr. Hoover is expected to take on his own shoulders much of the strategy and organization of the campaign.

Plans More Seclusion.

A contemplated trip to Bohemian grove on the Russian river, where the Bohemian club is giving its annual open air play under the redwoods, was abandoned today. Instead of this Mr. Hoover and a group of friends will spend 2 or 3 days next week in some secluded meadow in the high Sierras.

Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, floor leader of the house, who has been a guest of Mr. Hoover in this western trip, will leave for the east tomorrow. He will go to New York to open the speakers' bureau and will go into Maine for the campaign there, which ends in September.

Candidate Hoover and his manager are taking a sporting chance of filling the great Stanford oval with a crowd of 100,000. It is to be a California holiday.

Now the question is, Will the crowd come in any such numbers? If the place is not well filled Mr. Hoover's unfriendly critics will say that it was a failure, as they are already characterizing his San Francisco reception.

The candidate has not endeared himself personally to his home state folks since his return here, even though he has brought to them the great distinction of having a presidential candidate spring from the sacred soil of California.

Disappointment to Home Folks.

In his various trips around the state he instinctively avoids crowds and has ridden through many a town where the people were expecting him to stop and smile and shake hands. He has left a wake of disappointment. Even in his home town of Palo Alto there is this feeling. When he came home from San Francisco last week a reception had been prepared for him in the town circle, but he rode through. He has none of the easy grace of the born politician, the magnetism of such a man as Senator Jim Watson, for instance, or his rival Al Smith. Despite this handicap, however, there seems to be no doubt that California will give him a big vote.

Reports to Dean Theodore Hoover of the Stanford School of Engineering, elder brother of the candidate, who is in charge of the stadium arrangements for next Saturday, indicate that the crowd will be of record breaking proportions.

The official notification ceremony will begin not later than 4 o'clock coast time. Gov. C. C. Young will introduce Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, who is to notify Mr. Hoover of his nomination. At 4:30 p. m., if plans do not miscarry, the speech that will play so important a part in Mr. Hoover's campaign will begin."

4 OHIOANS KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS COLORADO TRAIN

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Three women and a man, members of a Dayton, O., family, were killed today when their automobile crashed into the locomotive of a southbound Denver and Rio Grande western passenger train at a grade crossing eleven miles south of here.

The victims were identified as Earl H. Turner, Annie R. Turner, and Mrs. John Edward Turner, all of Dayton.

P. W. Eargle, an eye witness, told authorities the automobile was traveling at a high rate of speed northward on the Colorado Springs highway which parallels the railroad right of way. The driver apparently either did not know a grade crossing was near until too late to stop or failed to notice the speeding train, he said. The crossing is on a sharp turn. The auto was hurled fifty feet.

Two Girls Killed.

Austin, Minn., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Annie Grant, 15, and Nora Grant, 4, were killed and their three brothers were seriously injured when a Great Western passenger train struck their automobile shortly after 1 p. m. today, at a grade crossing here.

SLEEP WALKER FALLS OUT WINDOW.

Whiting, Ind., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Julius Schap-l walked in his sleep early today through his bedroom window and fell to the concrete pavement below. He is not expected to live.

Will Stay Month

Vice President Charles G. Dawes departed yesterday on the Rocky Mountain Limited for a month's vacation that will take him into the fishing streams of three states. Accompanying the Vice President were Mrs. Dawes, his three children, Mrs. Melvin Ericson, and Virginia and Dana Dawes; and Mr. Ericson and Mrs. Henry Dawes.

SMITH ADJOURNS POLITICS UNTIL HEAT MODERATES

Refuses to Comment on Rival Claims.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Al Smith did today what almost everybody else in this desperately hot city is doing.

He quit.

Had he any further views on the equalization fee phase of the farm relief problem?

"It's too hot," he replied, " to be talking problems."

Were there any less intricate political questions on which he would discourse?

"No politics today," he said, adding, as he looked at the limp group draped on his chairs and window ledges, "you lads ought to take a day off. I promise not to talk. Everything will be as quiet as a mouse."

Makes Self a Busy Sunday.

Then came his new slogan:

"The principal issue before this country is how to keep cool!"

Even so, he has taken on a hard, hot job for himself for Sunday.

He will review the Fourteenth and Sixty-ninth regiments ("the Fighting Sixty-ninth") in camp at Peekskill on the Hudson.

Would the review be postponed if this heat continues?

"Any man," he replied, "that ain't got enough soldier spirit in him to want to be reviewed by the commander-in-chief, whatever the weather, belongs in the Boy Scouts.

"Four years ago I reviewed troops with Gen. Dyer and Gen. Berry. I was wearing a panama. The quickest cloud came out of the west that ever I saw. Holy, suffering Mike, how it did rain! The generals asked if I didn't want to postpone the review. 'A good soldier,' I says, 'never quits!' I wish you'd seen my panama!"

"So, I'll take a review of the two regiments tomorrow afternoon, talk to the officers, dine in the mess hall and leave for Albany at 7 o'clock."

Too Hot for High Figures.

Then was imparted to him the prediction of some fantastic prophet that Herbert Hoover "will come down to the Bronx with five hundred thousand majority."

Solemnly wagging his head, the governor said:

"It's too hot to be talking figures as high as that!"

From Newport, Ark., came tidings that Scarvia Bennett, aged 3 years, had sent him a dollar she had won in a beauty contest. The gift was said to be the first action by a Bennett that has thoroughly suited the governor for a month.

Bishop James Cannon Jr. writes to THE TRIBUNE to say he was misquoted in dispatches from Asheville, N. C., dealing with the meetings of the southern anti-Smith Democrats. He says he never admitted the opponents of Smith expected to be financed by the Republican national committee. He said what he means was that contributions would be received from any individual, regardless of party.

Thursday's TRIBUNE reported that a divorce bill against Roy H. Morris alleged that he was a member of the Chicago Stock exchange. This was an error. The bill sets up that he is "a large operator on the stock exchange." But he is not a member.

MEXICO, SOAKED IN RADICALISM, SEEKS STABILITY

Also Forced to Wipe Out Widespread Graft.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 4.—When Gen Alvaro Obregon, who was assassinated recently, became president of Mexico in 1920 behind him were all the most radical elements of the Mexican people, and, radical though they were, their several programs were even more radical than their exponents.

The agrarians swore eternal enmity to owners of ranches, plantations, and landed estates generally. The labor leaders never missed an opportunity to speak heatedly of the crimes of the bourgeoisie, a la Russia. The formidable phalanx of grafters who, under Carranza, had looted the banks and destroyed agrarian, industrial, local, and foreign credit, were eternally howling about the iniquities of capital, and more especially that which resided north of the Rio Grande.

The Red leaders denounced all the decently constituted governments of the earth and accused the leaders of the Mexican federation of having shown notably cold feet in the work of sweeping away the hateful monuments of the past and the establishment of the rule of the proletariat, the destruction of capital at home, and the erection of barriers against the perfidious machinations of Wall street and other centers of capitalistic activities.

Wanted to Bolshevize Mexico.

Socialists, leagued with communists, called for the establishment in Mexico of political and social conditions similar to those in Russia.

The heirs to the extreme radicalism of 1917 who wrote the most radical clauses into the reformed constitution continued to carry on the fight against the Catholic church, the church schools, and clandestine religious orders.

Local political leaders in the various Mexican states and territories, taking advantage of these abnormal conditions, grafted from the public unmercifully and inflicted upon the Mexican people the most egregious and unworkable political and social theories which ultimately brought more than half the state governments to the verge of bankruptcy and social, political, and financial anarchy.

Obregon Holds Radicals in Check.

Into this atmosphere redolent of political and social changes, of intrigue and counter intrigue, came Alvaro Obregon in 1920. As military leader he was then supreme in Mexico; but as statesman and prospective leader of a multiplicity of opposing factions, political, economical, social, and military, he was an unknown factor in the great national equation. It was then predicted of Obregon, as it had been predicted of Porfirio Diaz, in 1876, that he would be soon swept away in the débacle of the inconstant elements of the national life.

But Obregon, like Diaz, rose to the situation and proved himself as noted a leader of men and manipulator of political, social and radical factions as he had of armies. Like Diaz, his continued existence depended upon his keeping the peace and preventing the radically opposed elements of the body politic from rending themselves and the nation. It was an apparently herculean task but he did it.

Not only did anarchy rule in the majority of the state legislatures but many of the governors openly defied the federal authorities and established independent local governments. There was scarcely a provision of the federal constitution and laws which was not violated, at one time or another, by some one or other of the state governors. All this led to uncounted trouble, local uprisings and not infrequent bloodshed. In all these social and political conditions there were incendiary elements enough to have swept the country into a national conflagration.

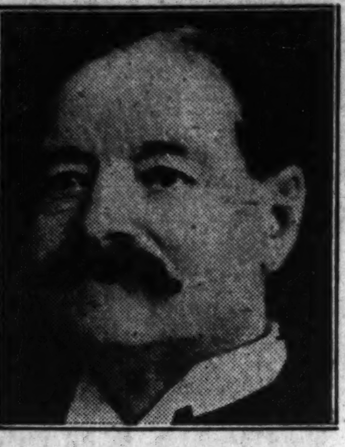
AFTER PRIZE AGAIN



JOSEPH COLLOSKY SR.

OLD SETTLERS MEET TOMORROW IN 54TH REUNION

When old settlers of Chicago and Cook county gather at Riverview Park tomorrow for their fifty-fourth annual reunion, the couple whose years of residence total the most, will be awarded a silver loving cup. The cup will be given through Stuyvesant Peabody as a world's fair celebration trophy.

Other prizes will be awarded to the oldest man and the oldest woman who have lived continuously in Chicago and Cook county the longest; the settler who has been longest in the employ of a Chicago business concern; the man or woman who has resided longest in the same house; the head of the family with the largest number of descendants, and the oldest veteran of the United States army.

Joseph Collosky Sr., 3651 Herndon street, is the holder of the gold medal awarded for being the person longest employed by one concern in Chicago. He has been a regular employé of Marshall Field & Co. for fifty-six years and hopes again to receive the medal. Mr. Collosky has been a resident of Chicago since 1851.

Mrs. John Alm, 94, of 4329 North Spaulding, has entered her family of five generations in the contest. One of the oldest couples entered is Mr. and Mrs. James Jule Hugulet, 1321 Glenlake avenue, whose combined age is 162 years.

MEXICO ELOQUENT IN PRAISING THE WORK OF AMBASSADOR MORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 4.—American Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow's recent speech before the American chamber of commerce has brought forth approbation from the Mexican press. In government centers the speech is taken as opening a new era in diplomacy.

"Ambassador Morrow has taken a long step in his comprehension of the Mexican national attitude and the sensitiveness of the Mexican people," a high representative of the government said. "He believed that the two neighboring nations could be made to understand one another if the proper medium of understanding was secured. He has set himself to be that medium and succeeded in a manner far beyond the expectations of either the United States or Mexico."

The newspaper Excelsior praises Ambassador Morrow's tact, to which it gives the credit for better international relations and "sweeping clean the clouds from the overhung horrizon." Thanks to him, too, the American government has lost its unyielding character and, at times, aggressiveness, it says.

"The words of Ambassador Morrow have recalled to us that we must unite for the regeneration of the country if we would be worthy of the confidence which the nations of the world are now beginning to have in us. Let us believe of ourselves that we merit the confidence which Ambassador Morrow has expressed in us," says Excelsior.

TWO WOMEN ROBBED OF PURSES.

Miss Josephine Kates, 7048 Oglesby avenue, was robbed yesterday by two men who leaped from an automobile and snatched her purse, containing $15. Two other youths seized the purse of Miss Julia Spicer, 824 Edgecomb place, while she was on her way to work.

POLICE ENJOINED FROM STOPPING LEGION CARNIVAL

Superior Judge William Lindsay issued an injunction yesterday restraining the city police from interfering with a carnival being conducted at Lake street and Lockwood avenue by Columbus Park post of the American Legion. The petition for the writ stated that policemen closed the carnival on Friday, its opening day.

A telephone call to the office of the police commissioner brought the information that it has been the department's custom to follow recommendations of aldermen in regard to carnivals in their wards.

Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37th] said he had disapproved of the Legion show because he did not want to make an exception to his rule against carnivals generally.

"The so-called merchandise wheels are a bad influence on children," said the alderman, "and money spent at the carnivals would otherwise go over the counters of the community merchants. There hasn't been a carnival in my ward for five years and I have stopped two so far this year."

The Legion's pleading sets up that its function is to benefit disabled veterans in the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital and to aid unemployed veterans and their families. The carnival was indorsed, according to the bill, by the Lions and the Kiwanis clubs and by the Austin Business Men's association.

DOCTOR HELD FOR FAKING EX-WIFE'S $1,000,000 WILL Accuser Seeks Part of Divorcee's Estate.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Accused of forging a will under which he was made beneficiary of his divorced wife's estate, approximating $1,000,000, Dr. W. C. Fordham, prominent Denver physician, was arrested in Hot Springs, Ark., today.

Dr. Fordham is charged with having written the will after the death of Mrs. Fordham in Hot Springs, on July 7, 1927. It specified he should be sole heir of the estate. The will was probated in Hot Springs.

Pressing their investigation on the story told by Eldridge Price, wealthy Texas oil man, who claims part of the estate, authorities tonight said three other persons are connected with the case, among them J. H. Boucher, a Denver attorney.

Price, recently arrested on a charge of defrauding Mrs. F. A. Montgomery of Memphis, Tenn., of $20,000, said his arrest was part of a conspiracy to keep him from telling what he knew about the will. Dr. Fordham recently recovered from Price a large amount of property owned by his former wife.

An affidavit of W. Rice Elliott of Littleton, Colo., was presented by attorneys for Price, alleging that in the summer of 1926, Dr. Fordham asked him to sign a will, that of Leona H. Fordham, who Dr. Fordham said, was his sister-in-law.

Price declared Dr. Fordham and his wife were divorced nearly 20 years ago. At the physician's home here, the physician's present wife said she had heard nothing from her husband concerning the charges.

Movie Star Pays Chicago Visit

DOLORES DEL RIO HERE; TOURS JAIL FOR FIRST TIME

Dolores Del Rio, screen actress, accompanied by her director, Edwin Carewe, who brought her from the obscurity of a Mexican village to stardom within the last two years, made her first visit to Chicago yesterday. Miss Del Rio's mother, Senora Antonio Asunsolo, also accompanied the party.

In the afternoon Miss Del Rio, for the first time, saw the interior of a jail, being taken through the county bastile by Warden Edward Fogarty. She also visited the jail's hospital, the woman's ward, and the death cell.

Today Miss Del Rio, her mother and Mr. Carewe will depart for New York where they will sail on Aug. 18 for an extended tour of Europe. Neither the screen star nor her director would speak yesterday of their rumored engagement. William D. Saltiel, assistant city attorney, welcomed the party to Chicago at a luncheon given yesterday in the Sherman hotel.

STRICKEN BOERS TO TREK SOUTH TO NEW LANDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Aug. 4.—Preparations are now practically completed for what may prove to be the last great trek in South Africa—that of the Angola Boers, who, after suffering hardship and disappointment in Portuguese West Africa for two generations, are to be allowed to settle in South West Africa.

The trek will involve 1,842 souls consisting of 314 men, 322 women, and 1,206 children. They will take with them 340 wagons and about 15,000 animals.

The 300 families are anxious to make a fresh start and the union government is offering them every facility to make good in a more hospitable land.

The terms and conditions offered for their return to the union were accepted with gratitude by the delegates. A small number may be regarded as well off, but the greater number are needy. Only one farmer holds the transfer deeds of his farm, and one other was about to get his passed after trying hard for fourteen years. The only right these people held over their land was that of occupation, which carries with it the right of selling the buildings.

In order to make it possible for South West Africa to settle these people, the union government will lend the administration $1,750,000 free of interest, and with this the union's share in the undertaking ends. The administration of South West Africa will give every Boer a farm of several hundred acres under the land settlement act of the territory.

The farms on which the Boers will settle are situated in three blocks, a small block in Grootfontein and two big blocks in Gibeon and Gobabis.

The task of settling these families on the land will be very difficult, but to collect them from their widely scattered homes is still more so. Sixty-five families are relatively near Swartbooisdrift, the place of assembly, but 115 families have to travel about 800 miles by ox wagon before they come to the drift, and from the drift to their future farms will be another six or seven hundred miles.

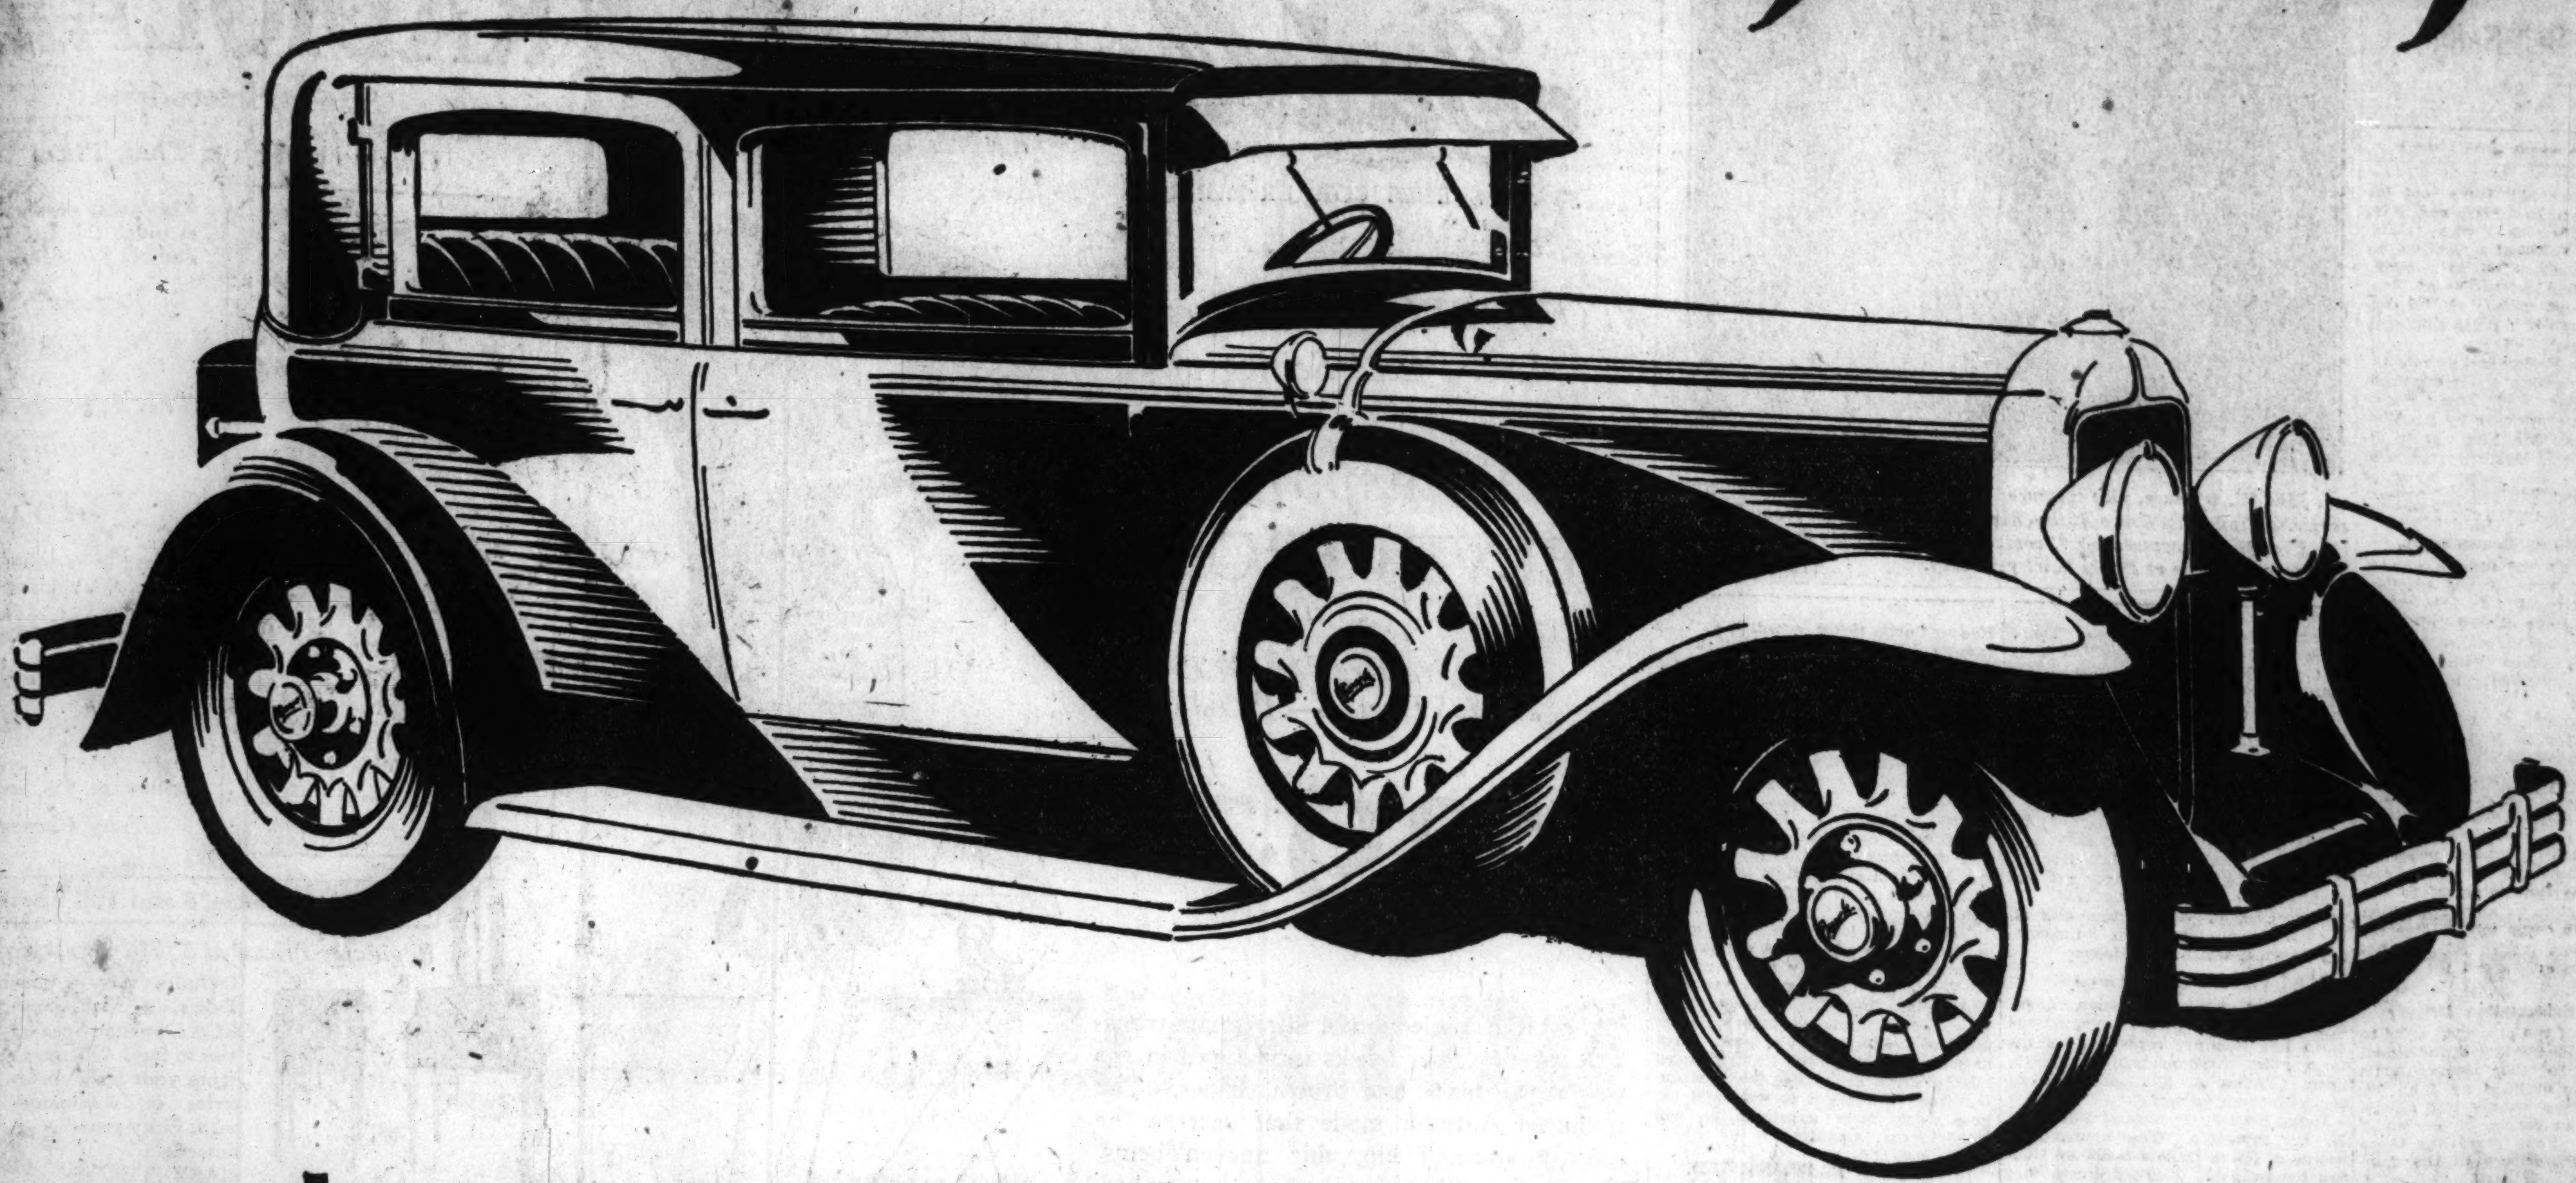
NEW all the way through



•in style••in engineering••in dashing new bodies reflecting the full genius of Fisher Craftsmanship•in every phase of appearance, performance and value

The Silver Anniversary Buick is proving the biggest sensation the automobile industry has known in years. For this new Buick is vastly more than a new Buick. It is a radically new and individual conception of the modern automobile, with elements of style, beauty, speed, acceleration, comfort and reliability unapproached by any other car in the world.

A dazzling new type of motor car beauty unlike anything heretofore known—longer, larger, more luxurious bodies, true masterpieces of Fisher design—new adjustable front seats and full-width rear seats providing plenty of room for three adult passengers—a tremendous increase in power, getaway and flexibility—these are highlight features of this most brilliant of new car creations.

But back of these is a detailed story of improvements and innovations that has won the admiration of automotive engineers and the public alike. The Silver Anniversary Buick sets a new style—a new mode—as surely as it has already broken all sales records for a new quality car.

A new and deeper radiator of novel and distinctive design—striking new chrome-plated headlamps and cowl-lamps—arresting new lines and colors as refreshingly original as a Paris mode—all combine to lend an air of fleetness, poise and distinction utterly new to automotive design.

And in performance, too, the Silver Anniversary Buick outshines all previous achievements. Power, speed, acceleration, flexibility, stamina—all are greatly increased—all are united and co-ordinated to a hitherto unknown degree—all combine to produce a measure of performance-ability that is proving a revelation to drivers of the most expensive European and American cars.

In addition, the Silver Anniversary Buick introduces a host of engineering refinements, including a new high-pressure gas-pump—new carburetor with two high-speed jets—new, easy-action clutch—new and improved steering gear—steel backed main bearings—and many other features of the first importance.

All of Buick's skill—all of Buick's experience—all of Buick's manufacturing ideals—are concentrated in this new creation. It is designed and built to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Buick Motor Company. It is dedicated to the millions of Buick owners and friends who have acclaimed Buick leadership throughout a quarter of a century.

See the Silver Anniversary Buick. Drive it. Make it your car. And rest assured there is none in the world that surpasses it.

CROPS WILL WIN FOR HOOVER, IS WORD TO G. O. P.

Western Leaders Report Corn Belt Safe.

Follette forces should come out for Smith. Herman L. Ekern and Miss Elizabeth McCormick, who claim places on the national committee as the choice of the La Follette majority in the Wisconsin delegation at Kansas City, did not appear at the conference, although Mr. Work said they had been invited.

Mr. Ekern on Friday night wrote another protest against the recognition of George Vits and Mrs. Harry Thomas, who were picked by the Wisconsin regulars. Mr. Vits was in attendance. So was Mrs. Thomas, who said Wisconsin has many kinds of Republicans and "there is, however, danger of a Democratic victory."

Believe 1916 Is Remembered.

Conjectures in the lounge outside the conference were that a recollection of what happened in 1916, when Hughes might have carried California if his managers had arranged for him to swap handshakes with Senator Hiram Johnson, helped sidetrack the Wisconsin case.

Miss McCormick is reported for Hoover. Senator La Follette, who is running for renomination, so far has steered clear of the national ticket, although he is running on the Wisconsin platform and is denouncing the Kansas City platform as filled with "the reactionary Coolidge policies." In the circumstances, te ante-chamber gossip was that it would be unwise and unjust to do anything which the La Follette camp might interpret as shoving them out in the cold before they have announced their position.

Outlines Subscription Drive.

The details of the projected drive to get at least 500,000 small individual subscriptions to the Hoover-Curtis campaign were outlined by John W. O'Leary, Chicago banker and economist, who is in charge of the small contributions. Four years ago there were 90,000 subscribers to the campaign fund.

Senator Charles S. Deneen, speaking for Roy O. West, new secretary of the interior, said: "Illinois will give Hoover a plurality of more than 500,000."

Miss Dorothy Cunningham of Indianapolis testified "Indiana will vote for Hoover. The farmers are recognizing they do not want Tammany."

Former Senator Charles A. Rawson of Des Moines remarked: "The big swing is now toward Hoover. There is plenty of work to be done, but Iowa will give Hoover and Curtis better than 200,000 majority."

Gov. Fred Green of Michigan said the usual Republican majority would be rolled up by rockribbed Michigan.

Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania said his state would be the banner Republican state this year as usual.

Congressman W. E. Evans of California delivered the Pacific coast and Rocky mountain states to Hoover. "California will give Hoover not less than 500,000 majority," he said. "I predict Oregon, Washington, and all the Rocky mountain states, not excepting Arizona, will be for Hoover."

Says Nebraska Is Hoover's.

Nebraska, whose governor, Adam McMullen, talked with Hoover on his train but was not converted on the farm relief question, will be Republican, Charles A. McCloud, national committeeman, asserted.

Judge Fred J. Granam of Ellendale, N. D., reported: "The nonpartisan league of North Dakota is on the Hoover bandwagon. There are two factions in the state, but both are for the national ticket."

For Minnesota, Mrs. Manley L. Fosseen of Minneapolis declared: "Hoover and Curtis will carry the state. The women are perfecting their organization."

Mrs. Bryant B. Brooks of Wyoming said: "The Democrats are stealing the Republican protective tariff. Wyoming, a wool growing state, is for protective tariff. It will go to Hoover."

Oklahoma's admiration for Curtis will help carry that state for the Hoover-Curtis ticket, acording to William G. Skelly of Tulsa. Dr. E. B. Clements of Missouri said Hoover will carry his state.

Congressman J. Will Taylor of Knoxville, Tenn., reported: "Tennessee never had such a pretty chance for the Republicans. It is a border state headed toward the Republican ticket."

Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the Kansas City convention and manager of eastern Hoover headquarters, breezed in with a word on Al Smith and equalization fee.

"The east is looked on as the great battlefield," he said, "and our organization is being rapidly perfected.

"We've got to recognize that Gov. Smith plays safe. He waited until he was safely nominated before he repudiated the Houston platform. Then he waited until George Peek indorsed him before he repudiated the equalization fee. We've got to wait and see how many more gyrations he will make in the campaign."

COOLIDGE IS REASSURED.

Superior, Wis., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Any doubts which President Coolidge may have entertained regarding the prospects for the Republican national ticket in the west have been dissipated. He is now convinced that the west will support the Hoover-Curtis combination, almost solidly, in November. The information about the presidential attitude was obtained from a responsible source, which further credits Mr. Coolidge with now turning his attention to the east and studying the political situation there.

Missouri Women Donate to G. O. P.

EKERN ACCUSES G. O. P. OF DEFYING STATE'S VOTERS

Madison, Wis., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—"Republicans of Wisconsin long have been compelled to fight for their rights within the Republican party, but this is the first time an attempt has been made by those in control of the national organization to defy the will of the Republican voters of any state fairly and honestly registered at the primary."

This was the declaration of Herman L. Ekern in a second letter to Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican national committee. He again protests the recognition, at least temporary, of George Vits and Mrs. Harry Thomas as national committee members.

Mr. Ekern asserts there is no contest of a bona fide nature over Wisconsin committee memberships and points to the election of himself and Miss Elizabeth McCormick over Mr. Vits and Mrs. Thomas.

"A progressive delegation led by Gov. Robert M. La Follette, which Wisconsin in 1904 sent to the Republican national convention, was thrown out, only to have the highest court later declare it had been properly elected by the regular state Republican convention," Mr. Ekern says.

WOMAN IS ASPHYXIATED.

Mrs. Bertha Levin, 46, of 3511 West North avenue, was asphyxiated yesterday when a gas-heater in the bathroom of her home consumed the oxygen in the room.

WORLD'S LARGEST BUILDER OF TRUCKS

PERSONAL RIGHTS ECLIPSED; EAST USING LANTERNS

Dry Drive Likened to Old Colony Rule.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The quality of mercy, despite Mr. Shakespeare's observations to the contrary, sometimes becomes strained. New York, in the eighth year of the Volstead reign, is convinced that "mercy is not dropping from the heavens as gentle rain." To be exact, some of the more outspoken business men of the floundering forties recently have been heard to remark: "There ain't no justice."

This old dutch town has bowed its head before to laws it voted against—but never without a fight. For more than seven years its prohibition lid has been a sieve and its 6,000,000 persons have been happy. Now that dark, lean prohibition days have come at last, there is a tide of discontent flowing in, that has been unmatched since colonial times.

Like Overseas Colony Rule.

In fact, some students of history see a resemblance between these days of prohibition, planes, and politics and the period when governors and judges from overseas ruled the colonies. There was no prohibition law then, but there were other statutes that infringed on personal freedom.

There are dusty books on library shelves that recount how some of these oppressive laws were overthrown long before a revolution brought complete freedom to the colonies.

Even in 1733 when fewer than 15,000 persons lived in New York City, and quails could be shot on Broadway, there was a champion of the people. He was a poor printer and later an editor who never possessed "more than forty pounds." But he fought and went to jail and finally won.

Establishes Freedom of Press.

John Peter Zenger, born in Germany in 1700 and buried in Trinity church yard 60 years later, came to America as a boy and grew to manhood under an arbitrary, despotic government where English governors and the power to convene and dissolve legislatures at will and to rule the courts.

But before his career had ended, he established freedom of the press in North America, wrought sweeping changes in the laws, and molded the beginning of a new era in popular government al through what historians describe as the "most important law suit in American history."

William Crosby was governor and ruled with an iron hand when Peter Zenger first established his New York Journal on Nov. 5, 1733.

People Put Up Funds.

The funds for New York's second newspaper were put up by the people, and the paper became the organ of the "Popular party." It was their belief, which ultimately proved correct, that if the citizenry could see published accounts of how justice was administered, their indignation would bring relief.

Louis Morris was chief justice of the New York court and his two fellow bench mates were James Delancey and Frederick Philipse. But Justice Morris gave an opinion unfavorable to Gov. Crosby. It concerned the collection of the governor's salary and soon there were only two justices.

Justice Delancey was described as an "educated man," but of Justice Philipse it was said he had 'no pretension of learning of any kind."

Zenger, the printer-editor, was firing away at all parties. His paper attacked the governor and his two justices in poetry, songs, fables, and facts. A letter published in 1733 illustrates the feeling of the colonists.

Fight for Liberty.

"The people of this province," reads the letter, "are easily governed and generally industrious. The greatest number of them are Dutch and seldom trouble their heads with politics, but such people are most violent when they apprehend their liberties and properties are in danger. Indeed, we are lately afraid of their breaking out in open violence."

Twice Justice Delancey charged a Dutch jury to indict Zenger as a libeler of the crown and twice the Dutch jury refused. Then the editor published a page of ballads which were highly distasteful to those of the king's men in New York. One verse concerned the summary dismissal of Justice Morris, it read:

"Our judges they would chop and change
For those that serve their turn,
And will not surely think it strange
If they for this should mourn."

The governor and his two justices were greatly incensed. They offered £500 as a reward for the name of the author, Zenger denying authorship. This reward never was collected, but Delancey turned to the legislature and succeeded in having the "highly scandalous" papers publicly burned by the hangman. A few days later the same legislative council had Zenger thrown in jail for "tending to raise friction and tumult among the people."

Truth Wins Over Libel.

The trial that established truth as a defense against libel came after Zenger had passed eight months in jail. His two lawyers—James Alexander and William Smith—were disbarred by Delancey and Philipse when they offered exceptions attacking the right of the two English jurists to occupy the bench.

"They had to go or we had to go," said Delancey. "So out they go."

Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia, the foremost lawyer of the period, came to the aid of Zenger. The trial began on Aug. 4, 1735, in the city hall in Wall street, which then was the finest building in the city. Zenger was described to the jury as a "seditious person and frequent printer and publisher of false news."

Point to English Custom.

To teach respect the jurors were reminded that "in England so great is the regard and reverence for the judges that if any man strike another in Westminster hall while the judges are sitting he shall lose his right hand and forfeit his lands and goods."

But Hamilton soon swayed the jury to Zenger's side.

"Where the matter of law is complicated with the matter of fact the jury has a right to determine both," he contended. "We do not deny publication of the accounts described, but we offer support of their truth. By a little countenance almost anything which a man writes may, with the help of that useful term of art called innuendo, be construed to be libel."

The two justices insisted that truth was no basis for defense of libel or slander charges, but the stolid Dutch jury for the third time refused to support the English judges and found Zenger not guilty.

Gouverneur Morris says, "The trial of Zenger was the germ of American freedom, the morning star of that liberty which subsequently revolutionized America."

But the New York of the Volstead era, with judges of the federal court imported from the south hearing prohibition cases, sees the star of personal freedom in eclipse and its town criers are out with their lanterns looking for some one to fight prohibition with the zeal Zenger showed in his fight for freedom.

Mistake Muriatic Acid for Rum; Three Men Dead

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Muriatic acid, drank in the belief that it was liquor, ended the lives of three men today when they gulped it down at a saloon known ironically as Liberty Hall. A fourth man is in the Elizabeth general hospital, but his condition is not believed serious. The men killed were William Martin, the bartender; John Masules, and Walter Peaska.

RAVINIA HAILS TITO SCHIPA AGAIN IN OPERA

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It must have been something like getting home for Tito Schipa last night when he appeared at Ravinia for the first time in three years. The Ravinia patrons gave Tito a great welcome. Thereupon he and the rest of the company gave a performance of the same kind as the greeting. It was Donizetti's comic opera, "The Elixir of Love," an elderly work as far as years go but containing lots of lively fun and good music for those who know how to reveal them.

These revealers were a band of experts, Mr. Schipa, the finest Nemcrino in the world today; Florence Macbeth with a perfectly wrought performance of Adina; that superb comedian, Vittorio Trevisan, as Dr Dulcamara; the original of all traveling medicine shows, Mario Basiola, splendid in voice and demeanor as Sergeant Belcore; Margery Maxwell in the smaller part of Gianetta, which she managed to make vital.

It is possible that the soldiers were unconscious comedians in their first act demonstration of how the manual of arms should not be executed, but they got one of the most sincere and approving laughs of the evening.

Don't fool yourself:

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

One reason why marriages are not happier

IF your husband, or your wife, has halitosis (unpleasant breath), it's your duty to call attention to it and suggest the effective remedy—Listerine.

A great many people fool themselves in thinking they never have halitosis.

What a presumption! Because nobody knows when he or she is a victim. It doesn't announce itself to you. But it does to others. And that offends.

Listerine ends halitosis because it is a powerful deodorant. If you doubt this, rub a bit of onion on your hand. Then apply Listerine clear. Immediately the odor disappears.

Use Listerine morning and night, and between times, before meeting others. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

READ THE FACTS

1/3 had halitosis

80 street car conductors, meeting the public at close range every day of the year, said that about one person out of three offends by halitosis. Who should know better than they?

LITERARY LIGHTS SPARKLE GAYLY AT INDIANA FETE

Award Annual Prizes to Young Aspirants.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Culver, Ind., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—If any one ever doubted the fact that Indiana is God's country he had proof of the Almighty's interest today. A downpour, directly out of the deepest vats, drenched the Indiana Literary field day, but not until after the events had all been run off. And that, since rain was hovering over the celebrities like Mr. Damocles' sword, was proof to those who needed it of the cosmic importance of the event.

This was the fourth annual literary field day held at Culver Military academy under the efficient fostering of Gen. Gignilliat, who had an idea that boys and girls who wanted to write might have a sort of field day. With the aid of Indiana's large and always flourishing crop of writers, the events have taken on a national importance, and usually the literary mazdas burn bright on the Wabash or the Maxinkuckee.

Late Date a Handicap.

This year, instead of having it in June, when all of the literary plutocrats are still around home, August was chosen, with the result that most of the dazzling literary names are gracing boat lists or foreign hotel registers. But a grand time was had by all.

The chief events were held in a beautiful natural hall, overtopped with trees, and where there were ships' funnels, a ship's horn, a captain, and assorted young girl jackies. The ship was called "Hoosier Hooey." It overhauled a private ship upon which were the young winners of the finals in the literary contests. Norman Imrie of the Culver faculty, as president of the shipping board, introduced Admiral Hugh Rodman, who wrote, he said, a book called "Yarcts of a Kentucky Admiral" or "Nips That Pass in the Night." Hooey Rodman, as Mr. Imrie called him, was the grand admiral of a new order which was created on the spot, called the Order of Literary Admirals, or Literary Admirables.

Ade Is Initiated.

Into the order was initiated—with a large red streamer across the breast and a middy cap with a feather to give it jaunt, George Ade, looking, with a face which is essentially New England, hiding behind glasses, more like Ed Wynne than the literary idol of Indiana.

Others initiated were Bill Herschell, who is, now that Riley is no more, the Indiana poet laureate; Kin Hubbard, whose Abe Martin is a national institution; our own Gaar Williams, whose "How to Keep from Growing Old" was responsible, so the interlocutor said, for the presence of William Forsythe, Indiana's favorite painter son; McCready Huston, a short story writer of South Bend; Boyd Gurley, who received the Pulitzer prize for journalism for 1928; L. M. Hines, president of the State Normal school, and Albert R. Erskine of Studebaker fame.

Immediately the last bit of Hoosier hooey—and it was really clever hooey—was over, down plopped the rain. In the evening, dinner was followed by a pageant.

See Inside of Barracks.

One of the most amusing things about the field day was the quartering of the guests in the officers' barracks. Many of us had never seen inside a barracks and to be bunked in a suite, including a shower, was a real experience.

The winners of the events were:

The Albert R. Erskine prize for drawing was won by F. L. Bond of Richmond. The first prize for the one act play, called after its donator, a Chicagoan, the Edward F. Carry prize, was won by Miss Lewis Lee Shaffer, aged 19, of Delphi. The first Maxwell Aley-Culver prize for short stories written by college students was taken by George C. Lloyd of Indianapolis, who is 19. The high school short story contest was won by George Beaudway, aged 19, of South Bend. Roland J. Leich, aged 17, of Evansville won the first prize in piano composition. The first Wilbur D. Nesbit memorial prize for poetry went to Miss Nola A. Smith of Sandford, who is 21.

Russell Potter, 17, of Indianapolis won the first prize in descriptive composition, and the first prize for a theme, offered by Meredith Nicholson for essays on citizenship, was won by Ruth McKillip, 18, of Omaha, Neb., who qualified for entrance in the contests by being a student at an Indiana school, St. Mary's academy in Notre Dame.

Typhoid Cases in London Increase; Milk Suspected

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The number of typhoid cases in London now totals 120, with nine new cases reported today in a single district. Suspicions of the authorities are directed at the milk supply.

Dorothy Marston Becomes Bride of Thomas B. Osgood

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Marston, daughter of Mrs. Thomas B. Marston, to Thomas Harris Osgood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Osgood of Inverness, Scotland, took place at 4:30 yesterday afternoon at the Marston residence in Lake Forest. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Herbert W. Prince of the Church of the Holy Spirit, was attended by a small group of relatives and friends.

The bride wore a dress of ivory satin and a lace veil which has served brides of the family for several generations. Lilies of the valley mingled with gardenias in her bouquet.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Orville Davies of New York, wore peach colored chiffon, with a wide-brimmed hat of the same shade. Miss Marion Clow, who acted as maid of honor, was dressed in a flame-colored frock and matched hat. Both attendants carried gladioli.

The bride's brother, Thomas Ewart Marston, served as best man, and Orville Davies of New York, William Dana Ewart of Paris, and Charles L' Hommedieu of Detroit were ushers. George and Harry Russell of Detroit, and Hayward Ewart and Robert Woodman of Cambridge, Mass., were ribbon boys.

Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the customary reception was omitted after the ceremony. Mr. Osgood and his bride left immediately for Pittsburgh, where he is to become a member of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh to do research work in physics.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 4.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist generalissimo, arrived here today to confer with the Cantonese faction of the Kuomintang and try to induce them to attend the fifth plenary session of the executive committee of the Kuomintang at Nanking, which was unable to function today owing to the refusal of the Cantonese members to attend.

Recently we announced that an Auburn model 115 strictly stock car, in an official American Automobile Association controlled test, had broken all stock car records from 1 to 24 hours and from 1 mile to 2,000 miles.

Beating the former record by over 9 m. p. h.

That sensational performance was Auburn's conclusive answer to all questions concerning performance, endurance and reliability.

For any manufacturer to have one car achieve this wide margin of proven superiority it would be irrefutable proof that that manufacturer had a better designed, a better engineered and a better built car of greater value.

Auburn furnished this proof.

Then doubled it.

We had two cars in this contest.

Both of them were strictly stock cars taken directly off the production line at the factory and driven to the Atlantic City Speedway. Both of them were dismantled by the Examining Technical Committee of the A. A. A. and carefully checked against the specifications of the factory and found to be absolutely stock.

And both of them broke all stock car records for 24 hours.

The most amazing part of this demonstration of built-in stamina and dependability is the fact that during these 24 hours of continuous grind not one mechanical adjustment was necessary on either car.

The performance of both of these stock cars, both of which averaged over 84 m. p. h. for the 24 hours, both of which broke the former record, both of which survived this merciless punishment unimpaired without mechanical attention, precludes all doubt as to Auburn's leadership and value.

Never before have stock cars gone so far so fast.

Never before has a manufacturer furnished the public with such overwhelming proof of merit, efficiency and durability.

The public does not want to drive 100 m. p. h. but it does want a car with a capacity and the reserve and the ability to do what Auburn does. Such cars are so correctly designed and strongly built that they can meet all ordinary requirements and maintain their peak of efficiency indefinitely.

It is because Auburn builds this kind of a motor car that Auburn says, "Compare and drive the new Auburn and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy."

ANGLO-FRENCH NAVAL PLAN PUT UP TO PRESIDENT

Washington Sees Scheme to Limit U. S.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Interest in the mysterious Anglo-French compromise plan for naval disarmament was redoubled today when Secretary of State Kellogg disclosed that the proposal has been submitted to President Coolidge at the summer White House.

Inquiries at the state department regarding the American position revealed that Mr. Kellogg considers the matter of such great importance that he will have nothing to say until President Coolidge has expressed an opinion.

Copies of the important documents in the case, together with the views of American naval experts as to the possible effect of the proposals on the American fleet, will be forwarded to the President. It was also learned that the British government will be asked to clarify the summary of its naval limitation proposal.

Rumors that there is much more to the Anglo-French compromise than was reported at first and that, in effect, it will result in a pooling of the French and British navies caused a stir in official circles but Secretary Kellogg flatly refused to discuss this phase of the situation. Heretofore, the secretary has discussed the plan guardedly but, in deference to the British desire to keep the subject matter of her note to the United States secret, the lid was clamped down tightly today on all discussion.

Present United Front.

An analysis of press comment from abroad and revelations of the British foreign office and in Washington make it apparent that the Anglo-French plan, if adopted, would have a very adverse effect on American national security on the high seas. It is also growing more and more apparent that, regardless of whether a secret security agreement has been reached between France and England, the mere fact they have been able to agree upon a limitation formula indicates they will present a united front against the United States in any future limitation conference.

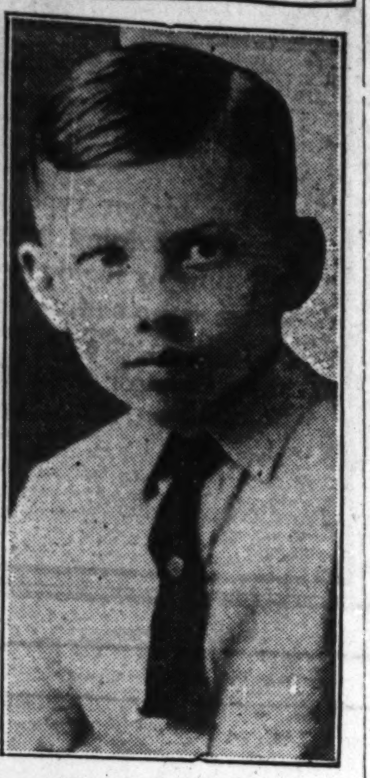
As the Anglo-French plan is now interpreted, it will call for tonnage limitations in all classes of warships of 10,000 tons or less, which are of value to the United States, but will not affect certain of the smaller craft which can be used to great advantage by Great Britain and France.

Would Limit U. S.

While the subject of just what vessels would be limited is not clearly understood by Washington naval experts, the impression is that the compromise would leave the nations free to build small cruisers carrying six inch guns and submarines of 600 tons displacement or less. A definite limitation would be placed on submarines of above 600 tons displacement and upon cruisers of the 10,000 ton class mounting 8 inch guns. Whether vessels carrying 8 inch guns which are below the 10,000 ton class would be limited is a matter that must be clarified.

The effect of the adoption of such a plan as described above would be to sharply limit the United States in naval building. American naval officials and experts have repeatedly asserted that cruisers, to be of value to the United States, must weigh close to 10,000 tons and must be equipped with 8 inch guns. This country's lack of coaling bases makes it imperative that her fighting ships have the ability to travel long distances without refueling.

Escapes Kidnaper



WALTER COLLINS.

BOY IDENTIFIED AS LOS ANGELES KIDNAP VICTIM

A 9 year old boy deserted in De Kalb six weeks ago was identified yesterday as Walter Collins, Los Angeles kidnaping victim, according to De Kalb police. He has been sought since he was taken from a school in the California city by a former convict almost four months ago. Los Angeles police notified the De Kalb authorities that they would send for the boy.

Dispatches from California said that young Collins' father is a prisoner in Folsom penitentiary and has not seen his son for six years. The Los Angeles police believe the boy was kidnaped by an ex-convict, named Hutchison to revenge himself on the father for reporting infractions of prison rules.

Maintaining that his name was Arthur Kent and that he had come from New York with his father, young Collins did not admit his identity until he was confronted with his photograph, sent out by the Los Angeles police. De Kalb authorities believe his story that a man claiming to be his father took him from the school and coached him on what he should say if he fell into the hands of police.

PLANS SAHARA SEAS TO CHANGE AFRICA CLIMATE

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A plan to change the climate of Northern Africa by creating inland seas in the Sahara desert is being considered by France.

Dwight Braman of New York is the engineer who presented the plan and undertook to raise in America $50,000,000 to further the project. He formulated plans to cut three ship canals forty feet deep and two hundred feet wide connecting the Mediterranean seat at Gabes with three dry saline lake beds called "schotts."

It is estimated that Mediterranean waters by means of these canals would flood permanently some 10,000 square miles. This would mean a water route of about 250 miles for seagoing ships through a part of Tunis and deep into Algeria. The main purpose, however, is to affect climatic conditions and increase rainfall.

FIGHT SEIZURE OF RUM SHIP IN SUPREME COURT

British, French Owners Sue U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Seizure of British and French vessels by coast guard rum chasers is resisted in appeals filed with the Supreme court of the United States today.

The cases involve a British ship, the Rosie M. B., and a French vessel, the Mistinquette, both of which were seized off the New York coast within the three mile limit. Both claimed the Bahamas as their destination.

The United States government met defeat in the federal District court in New York in an attempt to libel the ships, but the Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the government's right to seize them.

The positions filed with the Supreme court today were applications for writs of certiorari with a view to the lifting of the libels against both the ships and their cargoes.

The British vessel carried a cargo of 63 kegs of malt. The French ship had on board 416 cases of G. T. whisky, 290 cases of H. L. whisky, 90 cases of Old Durham, 43 cases of Burke's Irish whisky, 76 cases of Murphy's Irish whisky, 162 cases of Lawson whisky, 1,922 cases of Ambassador whisky, 10 cases of benedictine, 10 cases of cognac and five cases of champagne.

In protesting the libel of the ships, it was contended that they were not bound for the United States and were not subject to seizure under provisions of the tariff act of 1922.

HITS DRY PERSECUTION

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Representative Fiorello H. La Guardia today revealed his plan of campaign against what he termed "the dry persecution of New York."

He is preparing to attack the use of prohibition agents' wives in assembling evidence against Broadway's harassed night clubs through the law which forbids any officer of the government to accept the service of volunteers without pay.

"Let them try to put any of those women on the stand to testify and I shall move immediately for indictment and removal from office of the officer responsible for their use in the raids," said the congressman.

Mr. La Guardia read from a section of the statutes at large, which in part is as follows: ". . . Nor shall any department or any officer of the government accept volunteer service gratis for the government. Any person violating this section shall be removed summarily from office, subjected to a fine of $100 or imprisonment for not less than one month."

"Secretary Mellon and Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt are not above that statute, and I shall invoke it if need be. This is a republic and I mean to see that the law is obeyed even by prohibition enforcement officers."

MISSING AVIATOR RETURNS; DENIES STEALING PLANE

Jose Carreon, 28, of 1717 Warren avenue, who disappeared on Friday in a Waco plane owned jointly by himself and seven other young Mexicans, appeared at the detective bureau yesterday on learning that he was being sought by the police.

Carreon was employed as an instructor at the flying field of the Chicago Aeronautical service, Irving Park boulevard and Cumberland avenue, and was teaching the other owners of the plane to fly. He denied stealing the plane. He said he had been out for a ride and had been forced down by a rainstorm at River Grove.

Here to Bury Father, He's Haled to Court by Ex-Wife

Joseph Shetsky, St. Louis policeman who came to Chicago to attend the funeral of this father, was arraigned yesterday in the Court of Domestic Relations and ordered by Judge Edgar A. Jonas to contribute $4 weekly for the support of his 8 year old daughter living in Chicago with his divorced wife, Mrs. Bessie Siegmund, of 1103 North Leavitt street.

COUNCIL READY TO PUSH REPAIRS ON CITY STREETS

Meets Tomorrow to End White Co. Contract.

Despite warnings that he may be held personally responsible for damages, the city council will meet in special session at 2 p. m. tomorrow to direct Richard Wolfe, commissioner of public works, to cancel the White Paving company street repair contract, and to pay the company $368,000 for work already done.

The company has a contract to repair all streets on the north of Madison street during 1928, but is willing to cancel it in view of a legal tangle caused by the suit of Miss Myrtle Elsenau, a tax payer. She declared the prices charged are "fraudulently excessive." As a result the repair work has been stopped. Ald. Jacob Arvey's vehicle tax subcommittee called the special council meeting after negotiations for a settlement of the suit failed.

Wants City to Do Work.

Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen yesterday prepared two ordinances which are to be presented to the council for passage. One directs Mr. Wolfe to cancel the contract and to pay not to exceed $368,000 to the White company. The other directs him to proceed with the street repairs with city labor.

"Adoption of these two ordinances will solve the whole situation," Mr. Breen said. "The Elsenau suit will be a joke, because nobody can collect damages from the city council after it has deliberately authorized payment of sums due under a valid contract."

Hayes McKinney, attorney for Miss Elsenau, however, was of a different opinion. Even if the council orders Mr. Wolfe to do so, Mr. McKinney said, the commissioner of public works will sign vouchers for the $368,000 at his own peril. Mr. McKinney has announced that he also will warn the acting city controller not to countersign the vouchers.

Regrets Breen's View of Suit.

"Mr. Breen may call our suit a joke," he declared, "but it is a joke which already has saved the people of Chicago between $500,000 and $700,000 and could save them $100,000 more if the council acts propertly. This is the kind of a joke the tax payers should appreciate."

The latest offer of Mr. McKinney's client is to withdraw her suit if only $257,000 is paid to the White company. Previously she had held that not more than $147,000 is due at fair and reasonable prices, but offered the compromise figure in order not to delay the repair work further unless necessary. The company, however, has refused to accept any less than the full $368,000 and is not expected to cancel the contract until it receives that amount.

SUIT SEEKS TO HALT EXTENSION OF LINCOLN PK.

Charges Violation of Riparian Rights.

An injunction suit that would block the extension of Lincoln park from Montrose avenue to Devon avenue was filed in the Superior court yesterday against the park commissioners. The plaintiff is Mrs. Clementine Eddy Fisk, wife of an uptown merchant, and owner of real estate on the northeast corner of Wilson and Clarendon avenues.

The petitioner alleges that the building of park property by filling in the lake is a violation of her riparian rights. Whereas her land is now at the water's edge, with the completion of the improvement she will be separated from the beach by thousands of feet of public park, her bill pointed out.

The park project, it is contended, is a violation of the constitutions of the United States and of the state of Illinois, in that it is taking her private property (her riparian rights) for public use without compensation.

Attorney Robert N. Holt, representing the plaintiff, said he was negotiating with the park board for a settlement of his client's claims.

"The board obtained the riparian rights for all property along the lake front, from Montrose avenue to Devon avenue, except my client's," said the lawyer. "It was probably an oversight on the commissioners' part.

"Most of the lake front property owners gave up their riparian rights in return for a certain number of feet of the newly made land east of the old water line."

Last year a similar suit delayed work on the outer drive for several months. North of Montrose, dikes and breakwaters have already been built with natural accretions aiding dredges and sandsuckers in the work of filling in. The Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, which has this contract, is named a co-defendant in the injunction petition.

MILLIONS STOLEN FROM HISTORIC CHINESE TOMBS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, Aug. 4.—The historic eastern tombs of the Chinese monarchs have been desecrated and millions of dollars worth of jades, pearls, and priceless art objects are missing.

The discovery followed an attempt to dispose of part of the loot to diplomats in Peking. A commission sent to investigate found that the tomb of the late Emperor Chien Lung had been opened and the coffin forced, and jewels and magnificent ornaments were missing. Fourteen sarcophagi were found to have been opened in one burial hall, including those of empresses and concubines.

The Chinese press accuses Gen. Ten Chu-ching. An intensive search was begun and his brother has been found to be at the head of the organization engaged in the sale of the loot.

REPORTER FINDS 'GOOD OLD CHI' IN NICARAGUA WILDS

250 Midwest Marines Give Town Home Tinge

This is the seventh story of the marines in Nicaragua. It is an account of their daily doings in the wildernesses where American forces have been asked to intervene to protect American lives and property and to insure a peaceful election this November. Mr. Edwards of The Tribune staff lived for weeks with the marines, marching with them through jungles and visiting lonely outposts in the interior.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OCOTAL, Nicaragua, July 14.—A midwestern tinge has been given this little mountain town of northern Nicaragua by the presence of 250 marines, most of them from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Michigan. But four hours of standing watch with a sentry in the old stone tower of the beautiful church, Feast of the Assumption, conjured up visions of centuries ago when this district of Nueva Segovia was a land of buccaneers, blood and gold.

The adobe walls of the houses in Ocotal are punctured by hundreds of bullet holes, reminiscences of July, 1927, when 400 bandits under Gen. Augusto Sandino besieged a small garrison of marines. From the hills which encircle the town, the Sandinistas poured a hail of rifle fire upon the occupants. Only the arrival of bombing planes of the marine corps saved the garrison from annihilation.

Church Tower Now Lookout Post.

The church tower, which now serves as a lookout post for the marines, was held by the bandits on that occasion. Three huge bells which are still in service bear bullet scars of the battle. Scraps of Spanish scribbled on the walls are mingled with observations in English by the marine sentries.

"Good old Chi" strikes the eye with homely force and underneath is the name: "Private Frank J. Guzniczak, 1021 West Division street."

"O, to be back in my Ohio home," is another wistful plaint.

The sentry is Donald A. Grady of Elkhart, Ind. He has just relieved Ellsworth Stockwell, 4817 West End avenue, Chicago.

Quartered in Adobe Houses.

The marines are quartered in the adobe houses around the central plaza of the town and any one strolling about the square hears nothing but the talking, singing, and whistling of middle western farmer boys and of other boys from Cleveland and Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Gary, Cedar Rapids and Des Moines.

But in the stone church tower, high above the plaza, the sentry looks out at the high, wooded hills and dreams, perhaps, of the days when Hernando De Soto, discoverer of the Mississippi river, was a governor's lieutenant in this district or of the time, 100 years later, when Sir Francis Drake, the English pirate, sailed up the tortuous rivers hereabout and ravaged the gold mines.

Town Seems at Peace.

There is a machine gun in the tower but it has not been used for many months. Here, as in other sections of Nicaragua where the marines are in occupancy, the country seems at peace. A sentry is always at watch in the tower, but day after day and night after night pass by while he sees nothing but an occasional native driving a bull cart on the yellow winding roads which twine about the mountains.

Ocotal is the center from which all patrols are sent forth into the northern hills. Expeditions leave here daily to scout in the forests for the elusive Sandino, who, since the rout of his army some months ago, has not been seen nor heard from. A report comes in that he is supposed to be in the vicinity of Santa Cruz.

Marines Find Nothing.

But the marine patrols, threading the hills in all directions, hoping earnestly for contact with the outlaws, find nothing. Sandino's men have discarded even the colored hat band which served as a uniform previously. Any native in a village may have a rifle concealed in his hut but there is nothing to distinguish him from the peaceful citizen.

Col. R. H. Dunlop is in command of the marines at Ocotal. The men here are quartered comfortably, and the food, transported mostly by plane, is good. The marines complain only of the monotony of the life and most of them express a preference for patrol duty in the hills, with all its hardships, to the comparative luxury of barracks life.

MOTHERS PLEAD FOR VACATION AT CAMP ALGONQUIN

Cash Needed for Ice and Rest Funds.

"I plead and beg of you, send us to Camp Algonquin," writes a mother of five children who in the fourteen years of her married life has never had a vacation or has been out of Chicago. "I saw that THE TRIBUNE sends out tired mothers. Couldn't you please send us?"

The woman's husband keeps the furnace going twelve hours a day in a south side factory during these sweltering summer days. He has no Sundays or holidays off. He cannot even afford a vacation for his family, but must spend every cent he earns to keep a roof over their heads.

"I know a family of ten children that I would like to see at your camp," writes another. "The mother died two years ago and the father is very ill."

Others Plead for Relief.

Every day imploring letters reach THE TRIBUNE pleading for vacations and rest at Camp Algonquin. But the Algonquin fund, though growing through the generosity of TRIBUNE readers, is far too small to care for many worthy requests. Hundreds of Chicago families of the tenements who know too much of suffering and hardship will not leave the city's confinement all summer for lack of money to send them.

The lack of ice in many a family refrigerator in the congested areas was sadly felt during the last week when the heat reached the highest point this year. There was no way to keep food from spoiling, no means of keeping baby's milk sweet, no cool drinks with tinkling ice. In giving relief to as many families as possible THE TRIBUNE's free ice fund is melting at a fast rate, and the aid of many more of the fund's friends who contribute annually, is needed.

Acknowledgment is made of the following gifts to both funds:

LEADING IN SALES BECAUSE IT DESERVES TO LEAD

As a result of its unrivaled silence, dependability and economy—Silent Automatic is outselling all other oil burners in this community

Since Silent Automatic was first offered to home owners in Chicago, it has scored a most spectacular success in oil burner history.

In 1927 Silent Automatic outsold every other oil burner on the Chicago market. And nearly twice as many people have purchased "Silents" so far this year as in the same corresponding period of 1927!

This decisive leadership is not a matter of chance; nor is it due to exceptional local conditions—

—for it exists to an equally impressive degree in other such metropolitan markets as Detroit, Boston, etc.

The blunt truth is that "Silent" is leading in sales because it deserves to lead—because, at $395 it combines advantages that are available in no other oil burner, regardless of price!

It offers all the basic conveniences which have made oil heating the most widely discussed household utility of the age. It assures even, healthful temperatures at all times. It eliminates the drudgery of ash carrying, furnace tending and basement cleaning. It relieves housewives of all furnace responsibilities. It does away with soiled curtains, smudged walls and tracked-up carpets and floors.

You enjoy operation that is really silent—free from roaring noises and disturbing sounds. It is so quiet that you can stand next to it in the basement and be conscious of only a gentle whir. This is the result of the gaseous flame which is produced entirely within the fire box and which plays against the heating surfaces, literally bathing them with an upward wiping action—exactly the manner for which your heating plant was originally designed.

You enjoy unusual economy—for the "Silent" can be adjusted to precisely the amount of oil sufficient for your requirements, whether you occupy a bungalow or a mansion. Because of this precise oil consumption adjustment, the "Silent" provides the most economical form of automatic home heating known.

You enjoy dependable service—for "Silent" design is simple design, and its one moving part is manufactured to the highest standards of precision and subjected to the most exacting tests. Thousands of owners report that they have gone through entire heating seasons without requiring service of any kind.

Yet with all these important exclusive advantages, the "Silent" sells for only $395—an amazing low price made possible by efficient mass production, the standardization upon one size burner, and tremendous sales volume. Moreover, included in this price are the finest safety and automatic controls available.

If you have been denying yourself the advantages of oil heating—if you have been envying your neighbors who have it—come to our Chicago display room and see the "Silent" in operation. Learn why it has won such impressive leadership. Learn the easy payments on which you can enjoy this great essential to a modern, comfortable, happy home.

ONE SIZE BURNER—AT ONE PRICE—FOR COTTAGE OR MANSION

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4.—The eclipse of Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, Finnish aces, by still another Finn, one Torno Loukalo, 22 year old taxi driver of Helsingfors, featured the dreary, drizzling afternoon at the Olympic stadium. Loukola outdistanced his teammates to set an Olympic record of 9 minutes 21 4-5 seconds in the 3,000 meter steeplechase.

WILLIE RITOLA.

Before the rain turned the track into a miniature pond there was time for the United States to qualify two of its men's relay teams and its women's 400 meter team in preliminary heats.

Elizabeth Robinson, Chicago's champion girl sprinter, competing under the colors of the Illinois Woman's Athletic club, was clocked unofficially at a world's record time of 12 seconds flat for 100 meters when she tore down the homestretch and overtook the German girl, Helene Junkers, who had received the baton three yards ahead, and gave the United States 400 meter relay team first place in the semi-final heat in 49 4-5 seconds. Canada's women won the other heat in the world's record time of :49 2-5.

Nurmi Turns Ankle.

Willie Ritola, an easy winner of the steeplechase at the Paris games, dropped out of the race for the first time in his life today after running in last place from the start. Nurmi finished a poor second, eighty yards behind Loukola. And thereby hangs a tale.

Though usually silent, Nurmi told it himself today after being piqued by newspaper stories that he donated the 5,000 meter race yesterday to his rival, Ritola.

"It was no donation," said Nurmi, who explained that in Wednesday's steeplechase trials he turned his ankle when he fell headlong into the water trap and that in a second dip a couple of laps later he wrenched his back.

Ritola Also Injured.

It develops also that Ritola turned his ankle in Wednesday's steeplechase trials and that after winning yesterday's 5,000 meter race he was ordered to scratch today's steeplechase finals. This he would not do, and appeared with ankles so swollen that he had to get special shoes to fit him. He fell flat in the first water jump and did the same thing the second time around the track. After running a half lap behind the leaders he gave up within one circuit of the finish. Spencer and Dalton of the United States finished seventh and eighth, respectively.

All three of those who finished at the top were Finnish, Antierson of Finland finishing third.

Both American relay teams looked good in the preliminaries today, but it remains to be seen what they will do against Canada, Great Britain, and Germany in the finals tomorrow.

Track Games End Today.

With three fresh men, Baird, Alderman, and Spencer, to team with Ray Barbuti, the United States easily won the semi-final heat of the 600 meters with Canada second.

Yrjola, Finland, won the Olympic decathlon, according to the unofficial compilation, with a score of 8,053.29 points, bettering the world's record. Jim Stewart, University of Southern California, who was a close runner-up until the last event, the 1,500 meters, lost many valuable points by his slow time in this event.

Tomorrow will see the curtain rung down on the track and field events, so far as this Olympic is concerned, and, as usual, it will be climaxed by the marathon.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Four victories, one of which smashed the world's record, one second place and one third, comprised the record of six American swimmers, three men and three women, competing in trial heats of the Olympic water sports which got under way today.

As a result of their showing, all six qualified for the semi-finals in their events, the men in the 1,500 meter free style and the women in the 400 meters.

Martha Norelius, the New York mermaid who won the crown at the distance in the 1924 games, fully lived up to the promise of her training performances and shattered her own world's record for 400 meters with plenty to spare, while Clarence Crabbe gave Arne Borg of Sweden and Boy Charlton of Australia the race of their lives in the 1,500 meters.

Crabbe Presses Charlton.

There were few thrills in the Norelius race. She simply went out and killed off all opposition in the first 300 meters and then won alone, but it was a different story in the men's feature heat.

This race was by far the fastest, and Crabbe was permitted a place among the qualifiers because his time for third was better than that which any of the winners in the other four qualifying heats turned in. Crabbe, who battled Charlton on almost even terms nearly all the way, finished just 3-5 of a second behind him in 20 minutes 17 4-5 seconds, while Borg's time was 3 seconds faster.

Miss Norelius won her heat with a one sided victory over Miss Stewart of Britain in 5 minutes 45 2-5 seconds. Her record for the distance now on the books is 5:53 1-5, made in Indianapolis in 1922.

Ethel McGary Qualifies.

The other American girls who won were Ethel McGary, also of New York, whose time in trimming Miss Tanner of Britain was 6 minutes 4 3-5 seconds, and Miss Josephine McKim of Homestead, Pa., who beat out Miss Miller of New Zealand in 6:10. Miss Braun of Holland was the winner of the other heat in 5:53 4-5 with Miss Vandergoes of South Africa second.

In water polo Hungary defeated Argentina, 14 to 0; Great Britain beat Czecho-Slovakia, 4 to 2, and France shut out Spain, 4 to 0.

The swimming events will continue next week with Helen Meany figured a certain point winner for the United States in the fancy diving.

Last Week's Answers

Quotation—Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!

Answer—Said by David Glasgow Farragut, first admiral of the United States navy, at the battle of Mobile bay on Aug. 5, 1864. With a fleet of fourteen wooden vessels and four ironclad monitors, he advanced to the attack on the confederates at 5:30 a. m. To get into the bay the ships had to pass between the guns of Fort Morgan on the east and a field of anchored torpedoes on the west. The Brooklyn led the squadron. Farragut took up his position in the rigging of the flagship Hartford.

The monitor Tecumseh gradually drew ahead of the Brooklyn and was seen suddenly to disappear below the surface. She had struck a torpedo and carried down with her, her commander and most of her crew. The Brooklyn began to back and disaster appeared imminent as her movement threw the fleet into confusion under the flaming guns of the fort.

"What's the trouble?" shouted Farragut from the Hartford. "Torpedoes," was the reply. "Damn the torpedoes!" said Farragut. "Four bells! Capt. Drayton, go ahead! Jouett, full speed!" The Hartford moved to the front of the line and led the fleet to victory.—George G. Life, 1157 East 62d street, Chicago.

NOTE—Drayton was Capt. Percival Drayton, in command of the Hartford. Jouett was Lieut. Com. James E. Jouett, commanding the Metacomet, which was lashed to the flagship. Once in the bay Farragut defeated and captured the ironclad ram Tennessee and two of the three confederate gunboats. The forts surrendered soon afterward.

Quotation—I'm from Missouri; you'll have to show me.

Answer—This expression first came into wide use about 1900, having occurred in a speech of Col. Willard D. Vandiver, Missouri congressman, at a Philadelphia banquet which followed an inspection of the navy yard there. Col. Vandiver explained later that neither he nor Gov. Hull of Iowa had gone prepared for a banquet. Gov. Hull rented a dress suit, leaving Vandiver the only one in the group without one.

In an after dinner speech Gov. Hull praised Philadelphia highly. To get even Vandiver poked fun at the city and ridiculed Hull's story that a Philadelphia tailor had made him a dress suit in fifteen minutes. He concluded: "This story from Iowa doesn't go at all with me. I'm from Missouri, you've got to show me."

While Col. Vandiver always has disclaimed credit for originating the expression, it was his use of it that made it popular. W. M. Ledbetter, member of the Kansas City Times staff in 1898, stated the expression originated in Leadville, Colo., during a miners' strike. Workers imported from Missouri needed frequent instruction and the pit bosses used to say: "That man is from Missouri; you'll have to show him." The phrase became known above ground and was used as a term of reproach. Today it means "one not easily taken in."—W. D. Teach, 6250 Harper avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Missouri has become the "Show me" state. A discussion of the phrase's origin may be found in the Literary Digest of Jan. 28, 1922, page 42.

COAST EIGHT WINS SECOND OLYMPIC RACE

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Pulling into the teeth of a storm of wind and driving rain, the University of California eight, representing the United States in the Olympic games rowing regatta, came through their second elimination heat today with their colors wet but flying high. The decisive manner in which they defeated the Danish eight by three lengths over the 2,000 meter course boosted the stock of the Golden Bears, who already are looked upon as probable finalists on Aug. 10.

Ken Myers, the American single sculler from Philadelphia, rowing under the same adverse conditions, disposed of Collet of England, one of his toughest opponents, winning by two lengths.

Duray Claims Auto Speed Title; Beats Ray Keech

Salem, N. H., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Leon Duray won the unofficial world automobile speed racing crown here today when he defeated Ray Keech, holder of the world record, on a straightaway track in two of their three five mile heats on the Rockingham track. Duray's margin of victory was only a half length.

Glenna Collett's Father Dies of Pneumonia

Providence, R. I., Aug. 4.—(AP)—George H. Collett, all around sportsman, one time international cycling champion, and father of Glenna Collett, former champion woman golfer of the world, died tonight of pneumonia at his summer home at Little Compton. He was 53 years old.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The Cubs went to unnecessary extremes in a torrid, humid atmosphere this afternoon. Behind some splendid four hit hurling by Pat Malone they could have afforded to glide to victory without exerting themselves, but instead of this they provided a high old time for four Robins hurlers by amassing a total of twenty-two assorted blows, which let them have a sixteen to three decision for their fourth straight victory, three at the expense of the Robins. But tomorrow Mr. Vance pitches and there may be strikeouts where there were base hits today.

PAT MALONE.

The game never was anything more than a frolic for the Chicagoans and a nightmare for the hapless Robins. The visitors blasted the decision loose from the enemy right in the first inning when it took the services of three home hurlers, Clark, Ehrhardt, and Elliott, to retire the side. Five runs were scored during this session and thereafter it was just a passing show with one Cub passing over the pan in the second, three more in the fourth, three in the sixth, and four more in the ninth, when the few thousand customers were too groggy to voice any more complaints against the management of genial Uncle Wilbur Robinson.

Hack Goes Hitless.

The boisterous hitting of the Cubs was peculiar only for one reason. With blows falling all over the premises, some of his mates getting as many as four, poor, perpetually perspiring Hack Wilson received nothing with which to nourish his sinking batting average. Hack was up to the plate six times, and each trip was a disappointment, except when he managed to produce a sacrifice fly in the first inning and a pass that helped to roll up the run total in the fourth. But what hurt most was that Hack, trying valiantly to plaster one against the walls as the others were doing, fanned in the sixth and again in the ninth. It is possible that Wilson was waving his bat so as to be in form tomorrow for Vance, against whom he can fan with the greatest of ease and grace.

Mr. Hack was further embarrassed

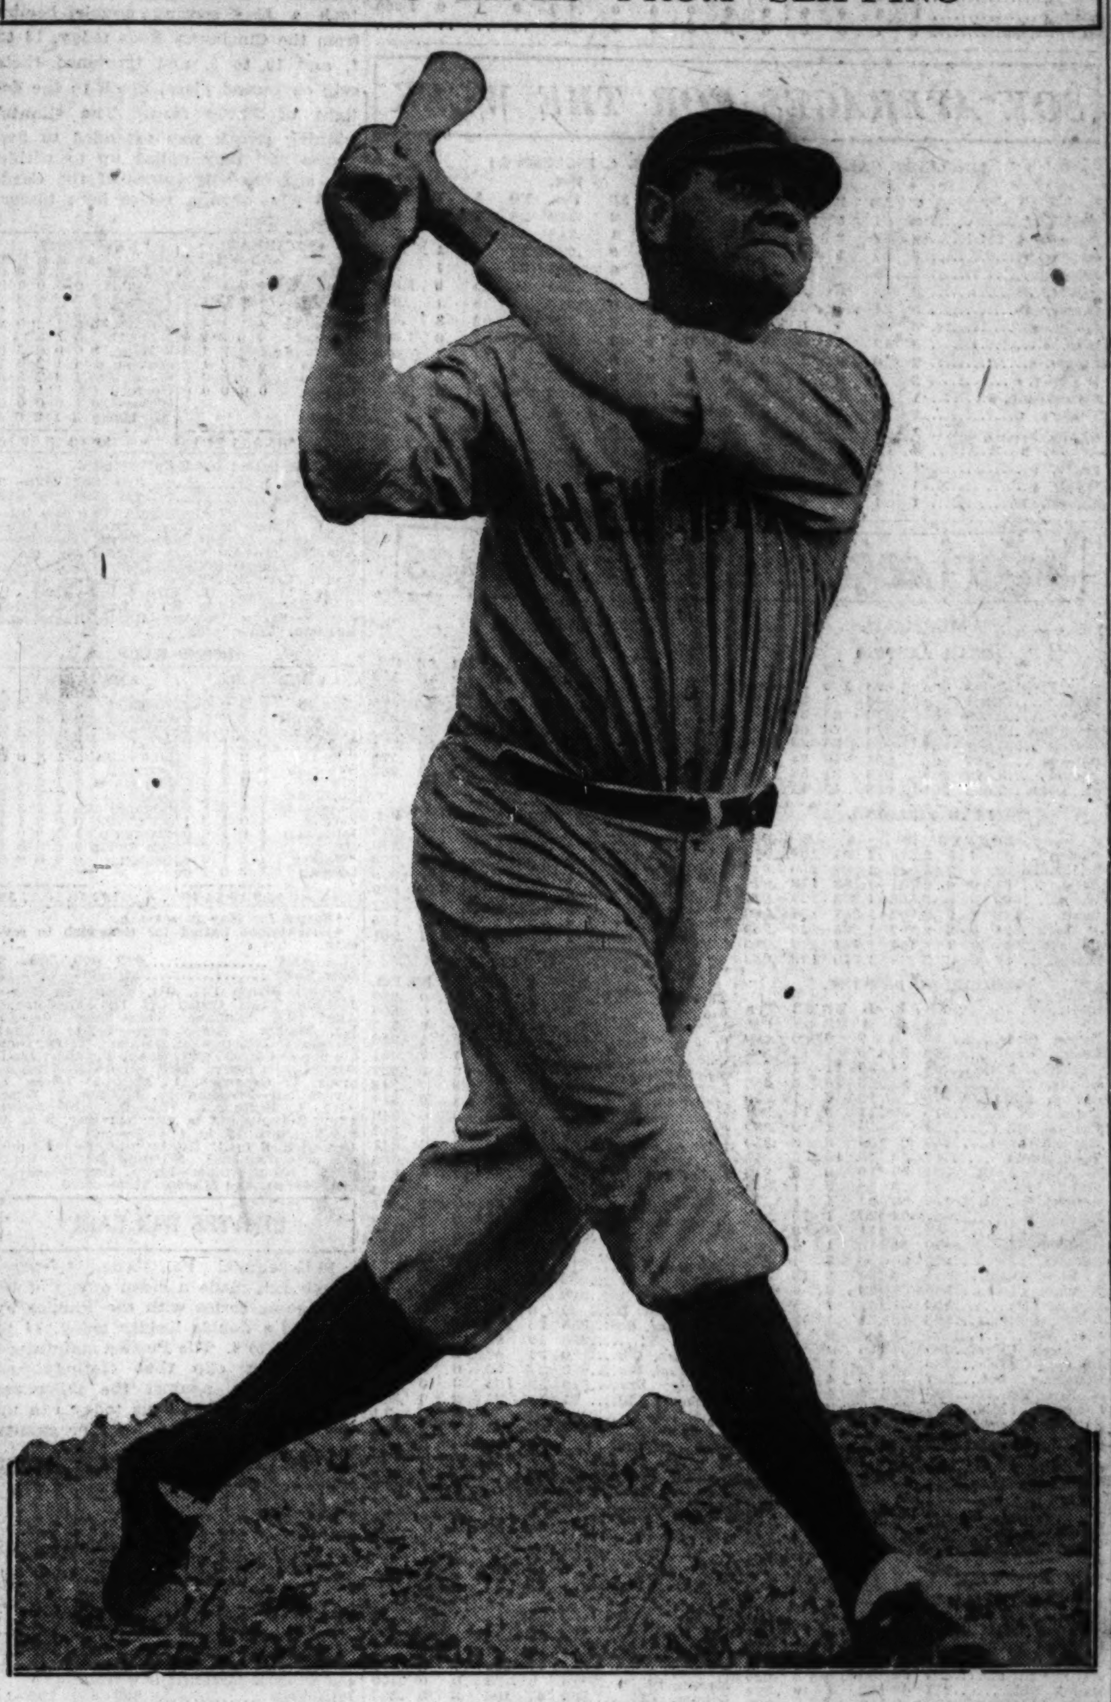
BABE KEEPS YANKS FROM SLIPPING



Babe Ruth sends another baseball into the bleachers. It's an old story to the battering Bambino, whose circuit clout in the fifth inning scored Pipgras ahead of him and helped defeat the White Sox, 8 to 6. The Babe's smash yesterday was his forty-third this season. He is now eight homers and twenty-one days ahead of his record.

Martie Flynn Splashes to Victory in Hawthorne Mud

A rainy day crowd of 15,000 cheered long and loudly for Martie Flynn at Hawthorne yesterday.

For Martie Flynn, the overwhelming favorite, was coming from behind in the stretch, coming with a nod of determination and romping to victory in the $5,000 Hawthorne handicap. He was racing toward the lead in a small four horse race over a muddy track, so holding and sticky it took the heart of a champion to glide over it.

And Martie Flynn was two lengths behind Solace, the leader, and another length back of Blackwood, which was running in second place. He was out in the center of the track where the mud appeared to be deepest.

Then came a streak of khaki striped maroon silks up toward the front. Martie Flynn was staging his noted run down the stretch. He came faster and faster and he was soon in first place. Solace wilted before his determined challenge and so did Blackwood. Martie Flynn went on to take down the stake for his owner, Stuyvesant Peabody, by three lengths.

15,000 See Races.

The severe track conditions caused the original field of eleven to be reduced by scratches to four starters. Blessefield, from the Royal stable of Chicago, after cutting out a dizzy early pace, started quitting on the lower bend. He dropped back so quickly he was beaten by Martie Flynn by something like 54 lengths.

Martie Flynn carried 112 pounds in the combat, which was exclusively for 3 year olds. He was ridden by Jockey Carl Meyer. He was rated back in last place for a time and he was third as the field headed into the stretch.

The time for a mile and a sixteenth was 1:49 4-5, and Martie Flynn, the choice of nearly everybody in the crowd, paid $3.82 to win and $2.94 to place. Blackwood's price was $3.64 to place. There were no show mutuels sold in the four horse struggle.

The crowd was one of the largest that has visited Hawthorne in several years. The fifteen thousand spectators all but taxed the capacity of the plant despite the fact that several hard showers drenched most of the spectators while they were en route to the scene of the turf activities.

Crowd Boos Ambrose.

Jack Alexander, an old time Chicago favorite and the long shot of the party, won the Nip and Tuck handicap which was third on the program.

The crowd didn't like the way Jockey Ambrose rode the finish on Prince of Wales, which had galloped into a long lead at the head of the stretch. There were boos for Ambrose when he brought his mount back to be unsaddled. Jack Alexander was ridden by G. Woolf, and had been far out of it in the early stages. He came on the outside in the stretch and gradually wore Prince of Wales down. Rurik saved third money.

In the mutuels Jack Alexander's price was flashed at $24.08 as his backers roared.

Double Heart, another expensive juvenile in Boots Durnell's care, defeated the heavily backed favorite, Tuberose, by a length and a half in the Commander purse for 2 year olds. Tuberose went to the front soon after the start and for a time threatened to make a runaway race of it. Double Heart closed up on the leader rounding the turn and sailed into the lead half way down the stretch. He was ridden by L. Hardy. Paul Bunyan finished third.

Ship's Log Reveals Yacht's Struggle to Reach Spain

[Copyright: 1928: By the United Press.]

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 4.—U. P.]—A graphic story, told in fragmentary figures of the ship's log, was revealed today of the adventurous voyage of the Detroit yacht Azara in the Santander yacht race.

It was disclosed that for five days, July 22 and 26, the ship made a total of only 290 nautical miles, for an average of a little more than 2 2-5 nautical miles an hour; that on July 23 and 24 the Azara average only 1 3-5 knots, and that on July 24 she made only 35 miles—an average of 1½ knots that really was only a drift on the windless sea.

The log showed the ship's total mileage to be 3,392, and her best day's run 225 miles on July 15 for an average of nearly 9 2-5 knots.

Reigh Count Wins $5,000 Saratoga Race

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—One crack of the whip, one yell of "come on," from a familiar voice in his ear, and Reigh Count, winner of the Kentucky Derby, the big western colt of Mrs. John D. Hertz, left four eastern cracks tied into knots as he rushed away from them to win the Miller easily by two lengths here today.

It was Jockey Lang, rider of the big chestnut in all his important races, who called on Reigh Count just once after the single slap of the whip and who, by that action disposed of the contention of George D. Widener's Gerard, Larry Waterbury's Penalo, the Wheatley stable's Diavolo, and Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Beau, which finished in the order named.

By the victory the three year old son of Sun Reigh-Contessina, earned $5,325 for his owner, set at rest once for all the rumors about poor condition and won more supporters to his claim for the three year old championship. The race was one of three features on the first Saturday of the Saratoga meeting which attracted a crowd of more than 15,000 persons.

HEIMACH, STAR A. A. SOUTHPAW, TRADED TO YANKS

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Fred Heimach, southpaw pitcher with the St. Paul club of the American association, and one of the leading hurlers in the league, today was traded to the New York Yankees for three players. The Saints will get Al Shealy and A. Campbell, pitchers, and Julian Wera, third baseman, who is being recalled from Hollywood of the Pacific Coast league. Shealy and Wera formerly were with the Saints.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Aug. 4.—(AP)—In a three-quarter mile race today, Ray Watson, a member of the United States Olympic team, set a British record of three minutes and four-fifths of a second. Harold Osborn, also of the American team, won the high jump here with 6 feet 4 inches.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

It's not so much what those Yankees do; it's the ornery way they have of doing it. There they were in the tenth inning of a game that should have been a Sox victory, 6 to 5, in nine innings. The score was tied at 6 to 6 and two were out. Then a double and an intentional pass. Two wild swings by Pinch Hitter Benny Paschal. Two timid fouls. Next a double. The score had reached its final status: New York, 8; Chicago, 6.

BEN PASCHAL.

In the middle part of the game some of the Yankees were just as dizzy as currently advertised. And any unbiased observer will tell you the Sox looked twice as good a ball club as the visitors, 90 per cent of the time. But the score was Yanks, 8; Chicago, 6. Just try to second guess that out of the record books.

The only variant of the usual Yankee formula for the Sox was contained in the fact that Babe Ruth made a homer which did not directly break up the ball game. The blow came with Pipgras on third in the fifth inning. It was his 43d homer and it put him 8 homers and 21 days ahead of his record.

Falk Goat of Game.

Bib Falk, always potent against the New Yorkers, made two doubles and two singles in five times at bat. The other time he got on as a result of an error and scored. Yet Bib was the prime goat of the game.

With the score 6 to 5 in favor of the Sox, the big Texan did not deem it necessary to bend his back to capture Koenig's single with Meusel on first in the sixth. When the ball hopped between Bib's heels, Meusel dashed in with the tying score that kept the Yankees in the ball game. A little flexibility in Mr. Falk's spine and Pitcher Grady Adkins would have gone to dinner a happy man.

As per their custom in appearances against the Yankees, the Sox were all burned up with stage fright in the first inning. Combs started the game with a single to left. Robertson grounded to Hunnefield who, in an attempted flip throw for a force out and a possible double play, tossed widely to Cissell. Ruth hit into a double play, Combs reaching third. He scored when Gehrig got his only hit of the day, a double over Mostil's head. Meusel singled to left, scoring Gehrig, and took second on the throw.

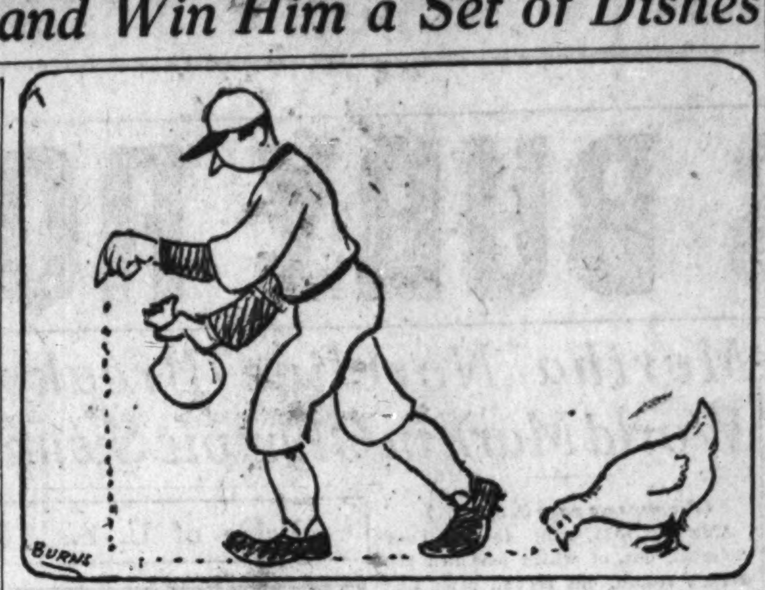
Enter Your Congressman; His Seeds May Sprout and Win Him a Set of Dishes



BY EDWARD BURNS.

When we started solving problems pertaining to baseball we promised our public we would respond only to worthy letters, but an insidious well-poisoner who signs himself "Clem" has aroused our pique to the extent we are going to devote this space this week to putting Clem in his place. Here's Clem's letter:

"Old Pal: Knowing how newspapers like contests such as most popular embarrassing moment; best arranged parlor, bedroom and sink; most beautiful limerick, etc., I have thought up a contest which is absolutely new and should be taken ahold of by you.

"My idea is for you to award a set of dishes to the Congressman who furnishes the seeds which will grow the best grass on the infield at Comiskey park.

"As you know, there never has been much real grass on this infield and that rainy night of the Walker-Hudkins fight what few blades there were was tramped out.

"Now, Congressmen are always sending out seeds, but most times they are addressed to folks who live in tenements or loop hotels. Here's a chance for them actually to get their seeds planted and have a chance on winning a handsome prize besides, to say nothing of making the Old Roman an infield.

"I am not working at present, having several offers under consideration, and would be glad to work with you on putting over this big idea for suitable remuneration. Wire prepaid.

[Signed] "CLEM."

If you want our opinion, Clem, this letter, in its insidious cupidity and subtlety, shows you up as a real snake in the grass. You don't want any contest. All you are trying to do is harp on the fact that the White Sox have the worst infield in the major leagues.

Do you think it is fair to bring this matter up at this time? Hasn't Mr. Comiskey had enough to worry him without bringing up that his grass is moth eaten? Do you have to worry about the grass? Can't you always find a seat when you go to Mr. Comiskey's spacious amusement grounds? Has an usher ever insulted you? Has Lou Comiskey ever sold you strawberry pop when you asked for orange? Don't you get all the mustard you want for your hot dogs?

It's just such malcontents as you, Clem, that make the striving of public benefactors hardly worth the candle. A grass growing contest! Indeed!

But if we DO put on this contest, Clem, how many congressmen do you think we should enter? The part of the diamond on which grass is supposed to be grown is something between 700 and 800 square feet. Would it be your notion to have about 15 congressmen, each cultivating 50 square feet of grass? Wouldn't this make the place look even patchier than it now does?

There's been a whole lot said about congressmen who vote dry and drink wet, Clem. We must have the contest restricted to congressmen who know how to carry their liquor. Mr. Comiskey wouldn't give his place a bad name by having a lot of entrants singing on the premises, even if they were congressmen.

Perhaps, Clem, we'd better call the contest off. What if the ground keeper got huffy and loosed a flock of famished hens on the field of competition? Then we'd be stuck with a set of dishes on our hands.

BRAVES DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER WITH CARDINALS

Lose First Game, 3 to 2; Then Win, 2 to 1.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 4.—(AP)—After the league leading Cardinals had gained a 3 to 2 verdict over Boston in the first game of today's double header in ten innings, the Braves defeated Alexander, 2 to 1, in the final.

Brandt held the visitors to four hits in the first game and fanned nine, but in the tenth St. Louis made a winning run on a base on balls, a bunt, a steal of third by Pinch Runner Martin and Haines' grounder to Bell, which Martin beat to the plate.

St. Louis' single run in the second game came from Bottomley's home run drive over the right field fence. It was his 24th homer of the season and put him in a tie with Hack Wilson of the Cubs for the National league leadership. Boston made two in the seventh inning on four singles and R. Smith's sacrifice fly. Scores:

MYSTERY CLOAKS NEW ARLINGTON TRACK MAGNATES

H. D. Brown Has Heart Attack; Seriously Ill.

A. H. Dressel, the west side banker who on Friday purchased the Arlington Park race track interests formerly held by Harry D. Brown, proved to be a mysterious stranger in the sport business yesterday.

He answered no question and neither did he give an inkling of the men he represented in closing one of the biggest race track deals that has been made in America in many years.

Frank J. Bruen, who, Mr. Dressel announced, would be retained as general manager, was just as silent. He announced during the afternoon that he would have an important announcement to make early this week and that the names of persons who have come into possession of the Brown stock likely would be revealed at that time.

Link Druggan with Deal.

In the meantime all sorts of rumors were in the air wherever the racegoers congregated.

Emil Denemark, wealthy west side automobile dealer, was the man most closely linked in the big transaction and it was claimed by numerous friends that Dressel was representing him when he bought out the Brown stock in Arlington Park.

The names of Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, of beer fame, also were linked in the deal in many quarters. Druggan denied last night that he or Lake were in any way interested in the race track sale.

Brown Has Heart Attack.

"We haven't got that much money," was the way Druggan put it.

And Brown, the Californian who built and promoted the pretentious Arlington Park turf course and the man who might have issued a statement that would have cleared up some of the mystery of the sale, suffered a heart attack as he was entering the Hawthorne race track yesterday afternoon. Last night he was in a serious condition at the West Suburban hospital.

He was resting comfortably and out of immediate danger, his physicians reported at an early hour this morning. It will be 10 days or two weeks before he will be able to leave the hospital, they announced.

Brown's collapse came at the gates of the Hawthorne track while he was telling a number of friends of the deal which disposed of his Chicago interests. He was taken immediately to the West Suburban hospital, accompanied by two physicians.

WHITES VICTOR OVER BLUES, 9-5, IN POLO MATCH

Westbury, N. Y., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The Whites, led by Tommy Hitchcock Jr., defeated the Blues, 9 goals to 5, in the sixth test match to determine what American polo team will face the Argentines in the international contests next month.

The Blues lined up with Hitchcock, new captain of America's international squad in No. 2 position with Capt. C. A. Wilkinson in the No. 1 post, S. B. Iglehart Jr. at No. 3 and F. W. C. Guest, former Yale star, at back. Opposed to them was a team composed of Capt. P. P. Rodes, E. A. S. Hopping, W. S. Tevis Jr., and J. Cheever Cowdin. Wilkinson, Hitchcock and Hopping each accounted for four goals.

CLEVELAND BEATS DETROIT IN POLO TITLE SERIES, 9-8

Toledo, O., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The Chagrin Valley Pola club of Cleveland, champions of the United States, won the first match of the title series at the Central Circuit tourney this afternoon by defeating the Grosse Point Hunt club of Detroit, 9 to 8. Cleveland champions spotted the Detroit club five goals.

Detroit played a better game at hitting the ball, but the Clevelanders were better mounted. It was not until the last two minutes that Chagrin Valley put over the winning goal. Capt. Tom White and J. Wegmore were the stars for Cleveland, and Small and Satterlee for Detroit.

The second contest of the series will be played tomorrow between the Onwentsia club of Chicago and Detroit Riding and Hunt club.

Von Porat Pins Ring Future on Charles Bout

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Otto Von Porat, Norwegian boxer who is seeking recognition in the heavyweight ranks, will be put to the test on Thursday night when he meets Pierre Charles, champion of Belgium, in the main event of Promoter James Mullen's boxing show at the Mills' stadium.

Von Porat dropped a questionable decision to Napoleon Jack Dorval in the Coliseum last winter. Shortly afterward, Dorval was defeated by Charles in a New York ring. As a result of these fights it is apparent the Norwegian will have a fight on his hands on Thursday night. If Otto is the winner, Promoter Mullen intends to match him with Chuck Wiggins of Indianapolis, who won a ten round decision over Les Marriner last week.

Charles Defeats Wiggins.

Many fans rate Charles as one of the leading heavyweights in the country. Pierre has defeated Chuck Wiggins, Arthur DeKuh, Bud Gorman and Jack McAuliffe. He lost a decision to Phil Scott of England, who won from Tom Heeney.

If Von Porat can leap the hurdle on Thursday night he will be ranked among the foremost contenders, particularly if he wins by a knockout. The Norwegian's close friends claim Otto was not at his best when he met Dorval and that the fans will see an improved fighter this week.

Bar Shade-Anderson Bout.

The boxing commission has refused to permit Dave Shade to meet Joe Anderson of Kentucky at the Midway Gardens tomorrow night. Shade arrived in Chicago last Thursday after meeting Rene Devos, Belgian middleweight, in the east earlier in the week. Dave received a bad cut over his right eye and an infection has set in. The commission refused to sanction Shade's appearance after two physicians had examined the wound.

Promoter Mique Malloy announced this fight will be held on Aug. 20. In the meantime, the local promoter is trying to secure a suitable opponent for Anderson. If he fails, the show tomorrow night will be called off.

ILLINOIS LEGION BALL TITLE WON BY MARINE POST

Marine Post baseball team of Chicago is the 1928 Junior American Legion sandlot champion of Illinois.

The tournament, which started Thursday at Wrigley field with eight divisional champions, came to an end last night with Marine Post winning the title by the most circuitous route possible. Despite eligibility protests and rain storms, Marine Post won the championship by two forfeit victories and a 9 to 4 triumph over Peoria in a five inning game halted by rain.

Last night the Cook County council of the American Legion entertained the eight teams at the Sherman hotel in honor of the Chicago team, which will represent Illinois in the regional games Aug. 8 and 9 at Sox park. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees were present.

Three Teams Ousted.

The storm of protests, which forced three teams out of the tournament, broke Friday night after the West End Cardinals and Springfield apparently had earned places in the finals. The American Boys Commonwealth of Chicago's west side started the rumpus by protesting Frank Stachura, third baseman for the Cardinals. They alleged that he was over the age limit. The rule involved states that no player shall be 17 by Jan. 1, 1929.

The A. B. C. protest was allowed, but the Commonwealth team also was banned because it displayed "poor sportsmanship" in withholding the protest until the Cardinals had won an 8 to 6 victory over the west siders.

Then came Charles D. F. Merrill, athletic officer of the second division with evidence that the Senf twins, Alvin and Elmer of the Elmhurst team, were 17 years of age last March. So Elmhurst followed the two Chicago teams.

How Commitee Ruled.

The eligibility committee then ruled that in those games where an eligible team had defeated another eligible team the verdict should stand, and simon pure candidates for the state title.

Following out this line of reasoning Springfield, Peoria and Marine Post remained in the title fight.

So yesterday morning Peoria played a semi-final game against Springfield, and won, 4 to 2, principally because Walter Wyss threw a baseball with such deception that the hard hitting capital city team could register only one hit in the final seven innings.

Which process of elimination then brought the Peoria team into the finals against Marine Post, which had not played since it lost its first round game, 4 to 3, to the bad boys from Elmhurst.

Although five innings had been played, both managers agreed to finish the final game today, no matter what the cost.

But had the managers been permitted to follow this plan, the banquet would have been without championship players, so Leslie O'Connor, secretary to Baseball Commissioner Landis, upon request, ruled that five innings always constitutes a game. So Marine post became the titleholder. Score:

The Question.

What do you think of Gene Tunney's retirement?

The Answers.

W. F. Livingston, 3123 Warren avenue, school teacher—Tunney's decision to retire is good reasoning, unprecedented though it is in the annals of the ring. He has accumulated a large sum of money and he is young enough to make something of himself in another field. He was a credit to the ring and will be to any profession he may elect to follow.

Evald Young, 601 North 12th avenue, Melrose Park, draftsman—I think Gene Tunney is right in his decision to pass up the ring. That's what I would do were I in his shoes. I wouldn't take any more slam banging from aspiring challengers. Tunney has proved himself a champion, and it is time for him to devote himself to other work while he is young and can enjoy it.

Fred Novak, 2721 North Troy street, marble man—Tunney only reluctantly has arisen to the top of his profession, and it seems foolish for him to retire at this time. He should wait until he takes a few more raps at some of the fellows who aspire to his championship title. Tunney could earn a fortune with comparative ease.

Thomas Carter, 3714 Rokeby street, student—Gene Tunney has done a wise thing in retiring from the ring. With his education and inclinations he has a good chance for success in some other line. He seems to have the intelligence to succeed in any line of work he may desire to follow.

J. J. Sherman, Great Northern hotel, attorney—I am an admirer of Gene Tunney, and I feel that his retirement from the ring was a wise and timely move. It shows keen judgment in keeping what he already has accumulated instead of following in the footsteps of some champions who held on too long and lost out altogether. Tunney is a great sportsman, and his decision gives further cause for admiring his good judgment.

14 SOCCER TEAMS PLAY TODAY IN 7-A-SIDE MEET

Fourteen teams are entered, including the best clubs in three leagues.

QUINCY ROWERS FURNISH UPSET AT PHILADELPHIA

Beat Lincoln Park Club by Two Feet.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Detroit and the South Side Boat club of Quincy, Ill., broke through Philadelphia's long reign of national rowing supremacy in the fifty-sixth annual regatta of the national association of amateur oarsmen which came to a close today on the Schuylkill.

Of the seven championships decided today, Philadelphia won five, bringing its two days' total up to ten. Jim Rice's Detroit Boat club took two first places in the two days, retaining its senior 145 pound eight oared shell title today, when it beat Penn A. C. and Undine barge.

Probably the biggest upset was in senior eights in which the Quincy, Ill., crew won by two feet from Lincoln Park Boat club of Chicago, runner up for the national title the last two years. Quincy and the Chicago eights staged a remarkable battle over the national mile and a quarter course. Detroit finished third. Quincy's time was 6 minutes 44 1-5 seconds.

Chet Turner, former Argonaut oarsman, won the national singles championship. He finished five lengths ahead of W. E. Garrett Gilmore, a former national titleholder. Turner was timed in 8 minutes flat.

DEVINE RETIRES AS COACH.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Aubrey Devine, the former all-American football player from Iowa university, will retire as freshman coach under Howard Jones at the University of Southern California in order to devote more time to his law practice, he said today. He will henceforth assist Jones in an advisory capacity and upon special scouting expeditions only, he said. Devine starred under Jones' tutelage at Iowa City.

TRIALS WRECKED U. S. TRACK TEAM, EUROPEANS SAY

Olympic Athletes Burned Out in Prelims.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune].

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4.—To the many and varied excuses offered here explaining the sensational slump of American track athletes in the last few days, the opinions of two Europeans who know athletics both in America and on the continent were added today.

Perhaps they will be of use to future American Olympic teams which return to Europe in years to come, and which want to wipe out the memory of the Amsterdam games—the most disastrous for the United States in Olympic history.

The men are Harold Abrahams, captain of the British Olympic team and 100 meter winner in 1924, and Andy Glarner, a Frenchman, who received his schooling at the University of California and was a great half miler in the days of Mal Shephard.

European Athletes Improve.

Both have the same opinion. Here, in substance, is what they told THE TRIBUNE correspondent tonight:

"In the first place your slump is not so sensational as you imagine. Track and field talent of Europe has been improving with leaps and bounds since the United States cleaned up at the Stockholm games. Because their time was not so fast as yours, you would not recognize the improvement. We care little for times or records, but our men have the competitive instinct which carries unknowns like Percy Williams, the Canadian, and Jack London, the Britisher, through. It was Ray Barbuti's great fight in the straightaway of the 400 meter run today which carried him to victory. But he was the only American who really was keyed up all week."

Both described the American system as too hard. The tryouts culminating in finals only three weeks before the games, they spoke of as absurd.

"The British pick their teams two months before the games, and then point for them," said the English captain. "We would not have allowed Douglas Lowe to be put through the tough trials to which Lloyd Hahn had to submit."

Burned Out in Trials.

Abrahams blames the American Olympic committee for refusing Hahn's request to come over to Amsterdam two months early to train and get acclimated.

"You ran your men to death selecting a team, and in cases of men like Hahn and Conger it is especially regrettable," he said.

Cuhel, the University of Iowa captain, who ran second to Lord Burghley in the 400 meter hurdles in time he had beaten consistently, offers no alibis for his defeat, but points the conditions the hurdlers had to contend with.

"Lacked Practice," Says Cuhel.

"After the severe trials at Philadelphia we were unable to do anything for ten days aboard ship, and then we were unable to work out here because there was no suitable practice track," he said. "When the tough test came, Morgan Taylor and I lacked the finish we had at Philadelphia.

The majority of American athletes agree that conditions might have been improved, with fewer coaches, trainers, managers and official hangers-on, and if the leaders had directed the team from the dressing rooms instead of the press box, where they have spent most of their time at these Olympics, telling the boys back home about it—for pay.

Trench Fires Are Best for Camp Cooking

BY BOB BECKER.

Thousands of camp and cooking fires blaze forth in the woods during the vacation season and even more thousands of outdoor fans learn when they attempt to cook over these fires that the principal difference between preparing a meal at home and one in the woods is the "heating system."

At home one has a steady, strong, heat and a handy oven. The heat for any pot or pan can be regulated with ease. In the woods it's a story with a different slant. One minute the fire is blazing high and hot enough to keep one at a distance and the next minute it's nothing but hot coals or, more than likely, out.

The way that fires in woods behave forces the camper to acquire a system for his cooking program if he wants to get a meal that is fit to eat.

In wet woods shredded birch bark or pine shavings are sure fire starters and in dry weather feathered hard wood twigs will do the trick. Then add your split hickory, maple, birch, tamarack, or other firewoods for the cooking fire. The intense hot flame from these firewoods make the pots boil in a hurry and it's this boiling part of the cooking job that should be taken care of first. No use trying to sidle up to a flaming fire with a skillet. Boil your spuds when flames are high and your frying later when the hardwoods have burned down to coals.

We had several chances to observe this method of building fires and using them on the recent TRIBUNE canoe cruise. We used wire grates and trenched fires for cooking. Trenching is a safety first method of handling fire in the woods because it confines the blaze and it also is a heat saving method. With grates over these trenched fires it was easy to cook a meal. When the oak and maple sticks were blazing high we had our potatoes boiling, or other vegetables requiring boiling on the fire. When these were done and the flames had died down to coals we fried steaks or chops with the trench brimful of live coals to furnish an even heat.

PLAN TRIANGULAR MEET.

The Harvard-Dartmouth-Cornell track meet will be held next winter at the Boston Madison Square garden, probably Feb. 23.

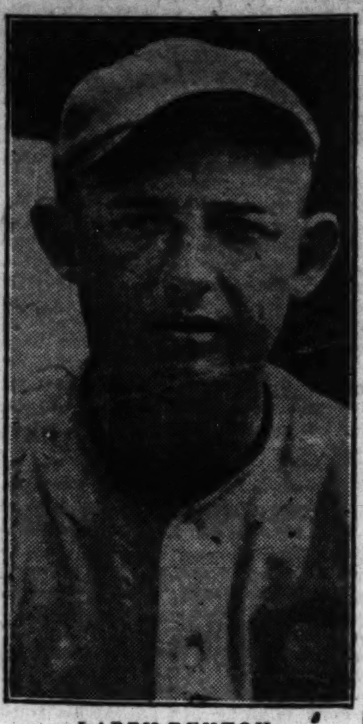
Larry Benton Is Picked as Greatest Right Hander

This is the third of a series of articles by Irving Vaughan, veteran baseball writer, in which he is picking the ten greatest players in the game today. In his first two articles he selected Charles Hartnett of the Cubs as catcher and Herb Pennock of the Yanks as southpaw pitcher. The remaining articles will appear on successive Sunday's in The Tribune.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 4.—To pick the greatest right handed hurler in the big show today would be a simple matter if the full careers of those entitled to consideration could be weighed in evidence. However determining the outstanding performer among this particular class at present involves only deeds for the current campaign and on this basis the honor, if it can be regarded as such, must be tendered to the ace of the New York Giants—Larry Benton, who is the only hurler in the National league close to the twenty win mark.

Mound Ace



LARRY BENTON.

A couple in the American league have records approaching Benton's but allowance must be made for the fact that they are pitching for a great all-around ball team that adds fifty per cent to a pitcher's effectiveness and that they are in a league in which one of the eight teams has no particular difficulty in winning. That one team is the Yanks and the team the mentioned pitchers are working for.

Benton Greatly Improved.

Benton has hoisted himself up to the front ranks after season upon season of see-sawing, both with the Braves and with the Giants. He never before has been able to produce consistently, but whether this is due only to a protracted run of luck or a final polishing off that has "made" him is something that can be determined only after he has worked another season.

If Benton's record at this time was down around ten or a dozen victories instead of close to twenty, there would be no hesitancy about naming at least a half dozen pitchers as being vastly superior to him. As an expert workman Alexander, even at this stage of his career, is one. Vance is another, but he is inclined to bear down only against certain clubs. Root, of the Cubs, is every bit as good as Benton, in fact they are similar in pitching style, but their records for the season are different. A year ago Root was to the league just what Benton is today.

Benton is essentially a fast ball pitcher, and his success must be sort of a blow to the experts who continue to argue that you can't get by on speed, even if a little change of pace is mixed with it. He is overhand on everything he throws. For the most part he hops his fast ball through chest high, and because of exceptional control he is able to do this most of the time. As further proof of the excellent control he has of his speed, he has pitched some games this season in which he has thrown everything low. This is an adjustment to hitting conditions in various parks.

Develops Knuckle Ball.

For a change of pace, Benton merely slows down on his fast ball. The delivery, of course, is the same, otherwise the batter would detect the difference in an instant. In some of his recent games he has thrown a few knuckle balls, indicating that he aims to develop this baffler into an effective change of pace ball. He also has a fair curve but has no control of it, so uses it only when he wishes to waste a ball or has the batter in such a hole that he can afford to experiment.

Benton was purchased from Memphis by the Boston Braves in 1922 and started his major league career the following year. On June 12, 1927, he was traded to the New York Giants with Taylor and Thomas for McQuillan, Farrell and Greenfield. In his five years in the majors he has won 55 games and lost 44. His record:

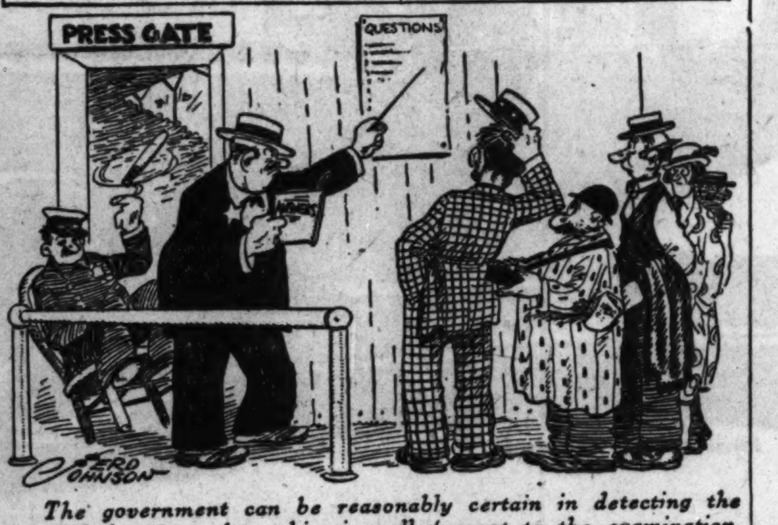
NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler



The government can be reasonably certain in detecting the unqualified experts by subjecting all present to the examination.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The collector of internal revenue has been skeptical as to the expertness of the experts who occupy seats in the working press rows of Mr. Rickard's forty dollar prize fights, suspecting that some of those who sit there earnestly masticating splinters of their pencils are merely lay customers occupying free seats and, therefore, legally subject to the government's tax of twenty-five per cent.

This may involve an official government test of the qualifications of all experts in the press sections, not only at prize fights but at political conventions, track meets, football games and world series exhibitions. But what would be the government's test of expertness and how expert would a candidate have to be to qualify under the regulations of the United States bureau of standards?

If the deputy collectors were authorized to approve or reject all experts on the basis of the notes lying on the writing shelf in front of the candidate, you correspondent's hieroglyphics might not pass the examination. These characters consist largely of crude pictures of teet, eccentric circles and fox-and-geese puzzles such as I learned during the Alegbra periods at high school, and I might have a difficult time convincing a government inspector that they really constituted a shorthand description of the knockdowns in round three. How could I assure an inspector that a notation reading: "Rhineland 0062, ask for Harry, will deliver day or night" was merely my quaint way of saying that Harvard punted out of bounds at her own fifteen yard line?

If the government really is sincere in a desire to tax the honorary customers out of the press rows, it can be reasonably certain of detecting the unqualified experts by subjecting all present to the following examination, which can be varied according to the nature of the event:

1—Who is fighting whom in this contest, and why?
2—Whom did they ever lick?
3—Which is which?
4—What is the score?
5—Who cares about that?
6—Is it on the level?
7—What makes you think so?
8—Who gives a damn what you think?
9—How many rounds in this fight?
10—How many rounds in a rod?
11—How many rods around this ring?

I believe this questionnaire would flunk many of the lady editors of the Daily Recipe column; the Daily Health Hint department; the Care and Feeding of Children department, the lady novelists, the gentleman novelists, the lady tennis players, the lecturers of both sexes, the insurance salesmen and the advertising manager of the Bon Ton department store in North Cabbage, Vt., who is present as the special correspondent of the North Cabbage Weekly Gazette.

Of course, this test would not flunk the mayors, the aldermen, the commissioner of streets and sewers and the inspectors of speakeasies who make up a considerable proportion of the press coop personnel at the large events. But the politicians we always have with us, and a press row would not be a press row without them. In addition to which I believe it is contrary to the constitution to tax the boys for anything.

Entries for the Western Boys and Junior tennis championships which open tomorrow on the courts of the Hyde Park Racquet club assumed an international aspect yesterday when M. de Mestre, junior champion of Mexico arrived to practice for the event. He is accompanied by his sister, who acts as his interpreter.

More than fifty out of state entries have been received, representing thirteen states in all. Frank Shields, national junior champion of New York, William Jacobs of Baltimore, national boys' champion; Harry Plymire, Los Angeles, Pacific coast junior champion; Joseph Coughlan, California junior champion, and Keith Gledhill and Ellsworth Vines of Los Angeles, Pacific coast junior doubles champions, are among the entries.

U. S. Yacht Patsey Leads in International Cup Race

GOSPORT, England, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The American boat, Patsey, held a short lead at the end of the first day's racing for the international cup. Skipper Joe Weaver of the Patsey, and A. Jones, owner and skipper of the British defender, Little Nell, furnished a keen competitive struggle, first one and then the other forging ahead.

CARL KAUFFMANN RETAINS TITLE IN PARKS GOLF

Ogden Unable to Match Foe's Accuracy.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—Carl F. Kauffmann, thirty-two year old Pittsburgh clerk, today accomplished what no other player has been able to do since public links golf championships started seven years ago. Kauffmann, by defeating Philip Ogden of Cleveland, O., in a 36 hole final over the Cobbs Creek course, 8 and 7, became the first to win the national title for two successive years.

Kauffmann gave his opponent rather severe treatment during the first half, leading 8 up at the end of the first 18 holes. But Ogden, who is an assistant superintendent of the Cleveland railway company, profited by his painstaking style and play and cut into what appeared to be an almost insurmountable lead in the afternoon.

After he had reduced the margin by three holes, however, he weakened, to lose two holes, making Kauffmann 7 up over 29 holes. Kauffmann then won the 29th hole to settle the match.

Ogden's manner of play attracted attention, for he addressed the ball before each stroke on the average of eight or ten times in an effort, it seemed, to make a perfect shot.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

Tunney's Retirement.

IF GENE TUNNEY adheres to his resolution to forsake the professional ring he will be the first American heavyweight champion who has retired undefeated and later declined to reënter the ring. Tunney in his personal conduct as champion violated all precedent. As a fighter, or boxer if you prefer, he is an unusual young man. Therefore we are inclined to accept his statement at face value. Even so, we cannot help wondering if Tunney would not take another slap at it if Jack Dempsey, by any chance, cleaned up all contenders in an elimination affair to determine a new crown holder.

Jim Jeffries is the only other champion who retired with the title. If left to his own counsel, we doubt whether he would have returned many years later to take a drubbing from Jack Johnson at Reno in 1910. Jeffries was importuned to become the "white hope" to batter down Negro supremacy. In his training camp, this point was so stressed that he entered the ring near nervous exhaustion and was no match for Johnson, who possessed a really clever countering defense.

Looking back over the champions, John L. Sullivan lost his title to Jim Corbett at New Orleans in 1892, exhausted by the footwork of his clever dancing opponent, and never made a serious effort to fight thereafter. Corbett was knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons at Carson in 1897. He made two comeback attempts against Jeffries after the latter was champion and was knocked out each time. Fitzsimmons lost his title to Jeffries in 1899 and fought several good fights thereafter, although losing again to Jeffries in a second meeting.

Jack Johnson acquired a disputed title by stopping Tommy Burns in 1908. After his defeat by Jess Willard at Havana in 1915, he was practically a "has been." Willard lost his title in a sorry exhibition against Jack Dempsey in 1919. Tunney's defeat of Dempsey at Philadelphia in 1926, Dempsey's "comeback" against Jack Sharkey and his second defeat by Tunney are recent history.

Tunney, retiring champion, fought only two battles after acquiring the title, the second Dempsey bout and the recent Heeney affair. Thus Tunney has earned enough in only three big contests to obtain financial independence.

Marriner's Test.

Les Marriner, University of Illinois football product who decided to apply his college training to prize fighting, made a creditable showing in his ten round defeat by Chuck Wiggins Thursday night. Marriner previously had been in the "building up" process and it was common opinion his opponents were hand picked. Wiggins, experienced and crafty, one of the best among the second flight heavies, is nobody's setup. Marriner held him about even for seven rounds of the ten round journey and then faded more from his own efforts than from what Chuck inflicted on him. The Illini, young in the game, is a potential heavyweight contender, although not yet ripe.

COURT ENJOINS RING BOARD AS TITLE ARBITER

The Illinois State Athletic commission has no authority to decide who is champion of the world in any form of athletics. Judge William J. Lindsay of the Superior court made this ruling yesterday in granting an injunction to Johnny Meyers, claimant to the world's middleweight wrestling championship, to restrain the commission and other defendants from deciding the world's championship from the result of a bout to be held Aug. 7 at the Hippodrome Athletic club.

Meyers alleged that the bout to be held next week between Charlie "Midget" Fisher and Gus Kallie has been advertised as a match to decide a new champion of the world. He contended that he is the champion and that he has been for twelve years. Attorneys for the commission told Judge Lindsay that the state commission does not recognize Meyers' claim.

MILLER DEFEATS LLOYD FOR CITY GOLF CROWN, 1 UP

Gallery Crowds Players; Nine Hit by Balls.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

David beat Goliath again yesterday, using golf balls for stones and for a sling a well grooved swing with a putter. David was little Pete Miller. Goliath was 220 pound Ted Lloyd and the battle ground was Jackson park. Miller won the city amateur golf championship, 1 up in 36 holes.

Breaks of the game were numerous and that word "breaks" almost became a pun. There always are "breaks in the game," but why there weren't any "breaks" of bones in this game is a mystery. Hemmed in by a menacing gallery of 5,000, whose charges recalled the vanished buffalo, the players hit men, women, children, cops, motorcycles, baby carriages, trees, and fairways indiscriminately. Nor coud one blame the golfers, for the gallery looked upon the fairway in front of the player as a fine place from which to see him play the shot.

Only one woman was hit, she by Lloyd's drive on the tenth hole in the afternoon. With it he won the contest to decide who could bounce a golf ball furthest off a flapper's head. His ball landed on a bushy bob and bobbed thirty feet into the air. Miller bounced one further from a tree, but it was ruled out as not being fair game to shoot at a stationary target.

Hits Five Spectators.

To be specific, Lloyd finished one up in galleryites, for he hit five, while Miller hit only four, but Miller also hit the motorcycle of a policeman riding herd on the gallery, so maybe the count was even any way. In effect, Miller got better breaks, for most of his direct hits on the fans helped his shots and Lloyd got one bad break when his ball caromed sharply to the left after connecting with a skull.

Outside of the difficulties with the gallery (and the motorcycle cops whose threats to throw somebody in the hoosegow didn't help much) the golf was worth watching. Under the conditions it was unusually good. Four times in the 36 holes the match was squared and neither had a lead of more than two holes at any time. Meanwhile the medal scores for the 36 holes were hardly more than a shot or two from par.

Miller, from Oak Hills, started both rounds by slicing his tee shots but in each case soon got them under control, while his work around the greens (and off the spectators) saved him when his tee shots weren't straight. Lloyd, whose home club is Lincolnshire, found shots into the woods costly.

Miller One Up at Lunch.

Slices cost Miller the first and third holes, while he won the second as Lloyd missed his second and they halved to the seventh, which Lloyd won by sinking a ten foot putt for a birdie. Miller took the ninth after Ted had driven behind a tree, put his second in the bushes and picked up, leaving the little fellow one down. He squared it on the eleventh when his drive, headed for the woods and water hazards, hit two or three of a group at the edge of the pond and kicked back on the fairway. It so upset Lloyd he was over with his second and missed a four foot putt for a half.

Two beautiful putts, a twenty footer for a two on the thirteenth and a ten footer for another birdie on the fifteenth, put Pete two up but Ted knocked in a long putt for a birdie on the sixteenth and they halved the last three holes, going to lunch with Miller one up.

Lloyd squared the match on the first hole in the afternoon, Miller again slicing to a trap and missing an eight foot putt for a half by an inch. Lloyd's birdie three on the 22d put him one up but Miller squared it when Ted overdrove the 24th green. Ted's second was short on the next hole and Miller won it with a par.

Drive Caroms Into Rough.

Starting the final nine one up, little Pete won the 28th when Ted's drive hit a woman and bounced into the deep rough. They traded the next two. Both hit their seconds into the gallery on the 29th and Lloyd got the better recovery, Pete missing a short putt. Miller's birdie three took the 30th when Lloyd again nudged a woman with his drive and his putt for a half hung on the lip of the cup.

Lloyd's birdie was plenty good enough on the 32d as Pete tried a trap, was short with his second and wild with his third and so on. That left the little fellow only one up and he held the lead as they halved the last four holes in par. Cards:

Cubs Take 3d in Row from Robins, 16 to 3

by muffing a fly ball, a slip that probably can be attributed to the fact that his hands were too wet for catching purposes. This happened on Hendrick in the sixth, and the batter made the complete circuit of the sacks. Prior to this the Robins had scored once on two hits in the third. And they counted their third and last tally in the eighth, when a double and two passes filled the bases, with none ou , and Riconda ran home while a double play was being perpetrated.

Ehrhardt Relieves Clark.

The panic in which the Cubs scored five times in the opening inning had its start in a single by English. Maguire also singled. Cuyler improved on their work by doubling off the right field concrete, English scoring, and Maguire halting at third. Wilson sent a fly to deep center, Maguire scoring and Cuyler rushing to third after the catch. Stephenson was awarded free passage, whereupon Grimm singled to score Cuyler. This convinced Manager Robby that his pitching selection wasn't so good, so Clark went elsewhere and Ehrhardt stepped in for a limited engagement.

When the excitement was resumed Hartnett splashed one of Ehrhardt's offerings against the wall in right for two bases, Stephenson and Grimm running across the counter. Beck lined a single to left, and Hartnett pulled up at third, but when Bressler made a throw to the plate Beck took second. Ehrhardt was relieved of further worry which probably was welcome by him in view of the blistering heat. Elliott then ended the dizzy inning with the assistance of some poor base running by the Cubs. Malone bounced one to Bissonette and Hartnett, who had no license to make the attempt, was doubled trying to score.

Score Three in Third.

The Cubs scored one more in the second when English, Maguire, and Cuyler plotted against Elliott with singles. After giving themselves a breathing spell in the third the Chicagoans busied themselves by scoring three in the fourth and at the same time ridding the game of Elliott. Malone opened the inning with a double and English sacrified him to third. Maguire doubled Malone over the pan. Maguire was cut down at third on Cuyler's grounder. Cuyler stole second and continued to third on Gooch's wild throw. Wilson walked and Stephenson singled to register Cuyler. Grimm's single scored Wilson and also brought Koupal to Elliott's rescue.

The Chicagoans took another rest in the fifth and then returned for three more tallies in the sixth. This session started with Wilson fanning which was one of the few happenings of the day the populace seemed to enjoy. Next came a pass to Stephenson and a single to center by Grimm. Hartnett singled to right and Stephenson scored. Hartnett was trapped over-running first base and after a lot of running and throwing he and Grimm landed on third base. The corner belonged to Grimm so Hartnett had to leave. A hit by Beck counted Grimm. Hits by Malone and English moved Beck around to the plate with the third run of the inning.

The Cubs weren't entirely to blame for scoring four additional runs in the ninth. They were forced to take them as gifts from the Robins. Malone opened the inning with his fourth hit and English was safe on a fumble by Flowers. Maguire flied out and Cuyler walked, filling the sacks. With this opportunity in front of him Wilson swung mightily but missed his third swing. Then Stephenson cleaned up the bases with a double to the left center field fence. Steve counted the final run of the hectic afternoon when he ran home from second when Bissonette tossed poorly to Koupal, who covered the bag on Grimm's grounder.

Yanks Defeat Sox, 8 to 6, in Ten Innings

In the last of the first Metzler singled and Falk doubled but died. Clancy led off the second with a triple over Combs' head but died because Cissell, Berg and Adkins fizzled.

The third was something else again. After Mostil had tapped feebly to Pipgras, Hunnefield singled and came in on Metzler's triple. Dutch scored on Falk's single.

In the fourth the Sox took a 4 to 3 lead. A base on balls, an error by Koenig, and an infield hit put Cissell, Berg, and Adkins on base with none out. Mostil's sacrifice fly scored Cissell and Hunnefield's second hit scored Berg. Then Metzler hit into a double play.

The Babe made his homer with Pipgras ahead of him in the fifth, just after one of the Sox four double plays. Gehrig then popped to Clancy.

Sox Score Two More.

In their half the Sox, for the third successive inning, got a pair of runs. Errors by Koenig, singles by Kamm and Clancy, and a sacrifice fly produced the markers. The score was Sox, 6; Yanks, 5.

Meusel walked to open the sixth. Koenig singled to left and Falk was seized with ennui, as previously narrated. Meusel ran all the way from first to home when he should have been held at second.

Adkins pitched well and his mates played brilliantly to avert danger until two were out in the tenth. Then Meusel doubled down the left foul line. Koenig was walked purposely. Paschal performed as related in our opening paragraph—a double which spoiled everything.

Urban Faber, the only Sox pitcher who has won this year at Yankee stadium, will be in charge this afternoon.

CLEAR WAY FOR SEPARATION OF HIGHWAY GRADES

County Orders Survey for Developing System.

FRANCIS L. BOUTELL.

A detailed survey of the main highway intersections of Cook county for the purpose of establishing county rights and property restrictions on which to base a system of highway grade separations was ordered by the county board last week.

The measure providing this action was in the shape of an order introduced by County Commissioner Francis Boutell instructing President A. J. Cermak of the board to appoint an advisory committee to work with the board's subcommittee on grade separations, of which Mr. Boutell is chairman.

The commissioner said that President Cermak has indicated that he will name the advisory committee within a few days. It likely will consist of four or five technical men. Their survey and findings are to be completed within thirty days if possible

New Separation Plans.

Coincident with this move Mr. Boutell announced that the county highway department is nearing completion of designs for the first example of highway grade separation by the county, to be applied at Milwaukee avenue and Dempster street. It is expected, he says, that work on this project will be commenced before the season ends.

"Two designs are being made," Mr. Boutell said. "One set of plans provides for Milwaukee avenue continuing at grade and Dempster street intersecting at a depression. The other design reverses the position of the thoroughfares at the crossing. The type of separation follows the plan used at Grand Concourse and Fordham road, New York City.

"This separation is to be ordered built immediately. It is to be a typical structure, susceptible to adaptation at other intersections through the county. When once it is completed the first step in a general grade separation will have been taken. It is the idea of the county board that immediate steps will be taken to follow through on main traveled highways in various parts of the area.

Clear Up Complications.

"Our experience to date has convinced the board that the most requisite preliminary work on this form of improvement is to clear intersections of property owners' complications well in advance of plans for construction.

"The advisory committee provided for is to take steps in this direction. Its first task will be to develop a detailed survey of all intersections susceptible of grade separation treatment. Then regulations for building improvements at intersections can be put into force. The county also will be enabled to acquire width of right of way required for such structures long in advance of the launching of the project, having time for condemnations. Purchase is out of the question.

"These details usually are what slow up or stop proposed improvements of this character. It is our plan to clear the way for a general grade separation campaign at one fell swoop.

Board Eager to Act.

"The board, generally speaking, is ready to go ahead with the building of a system of grade separations which will give to some of the more important routes now being widened to 40 feet a straight run for several miles without intersection of importance. On new work the provision for grade separations, of course, will be included in original plans, as is demonstrated in the new Southwest highway."

CINCINNATI PLANS PLACING OF BAN UPON PARKING

Cincinnati is moving the direction of complete prohibition of parking in the congested area of the city.

Elimination of downtown parking in the city is being gradually accomplished. By increasing the "no parking" spaces slowly, it is said, the public gradually becomes acquainted with the situation and is prepared for the complete prohibition in the whole congested area.

The Cincinnati police are tightening up on "no parking" areas already designated. Signs already in place which bear the legend, "no parking, public building," will be replaced by straight "no parking" signs, because of protest against the enforcement of the first named signs, which had been placed in front of churches and theaters.

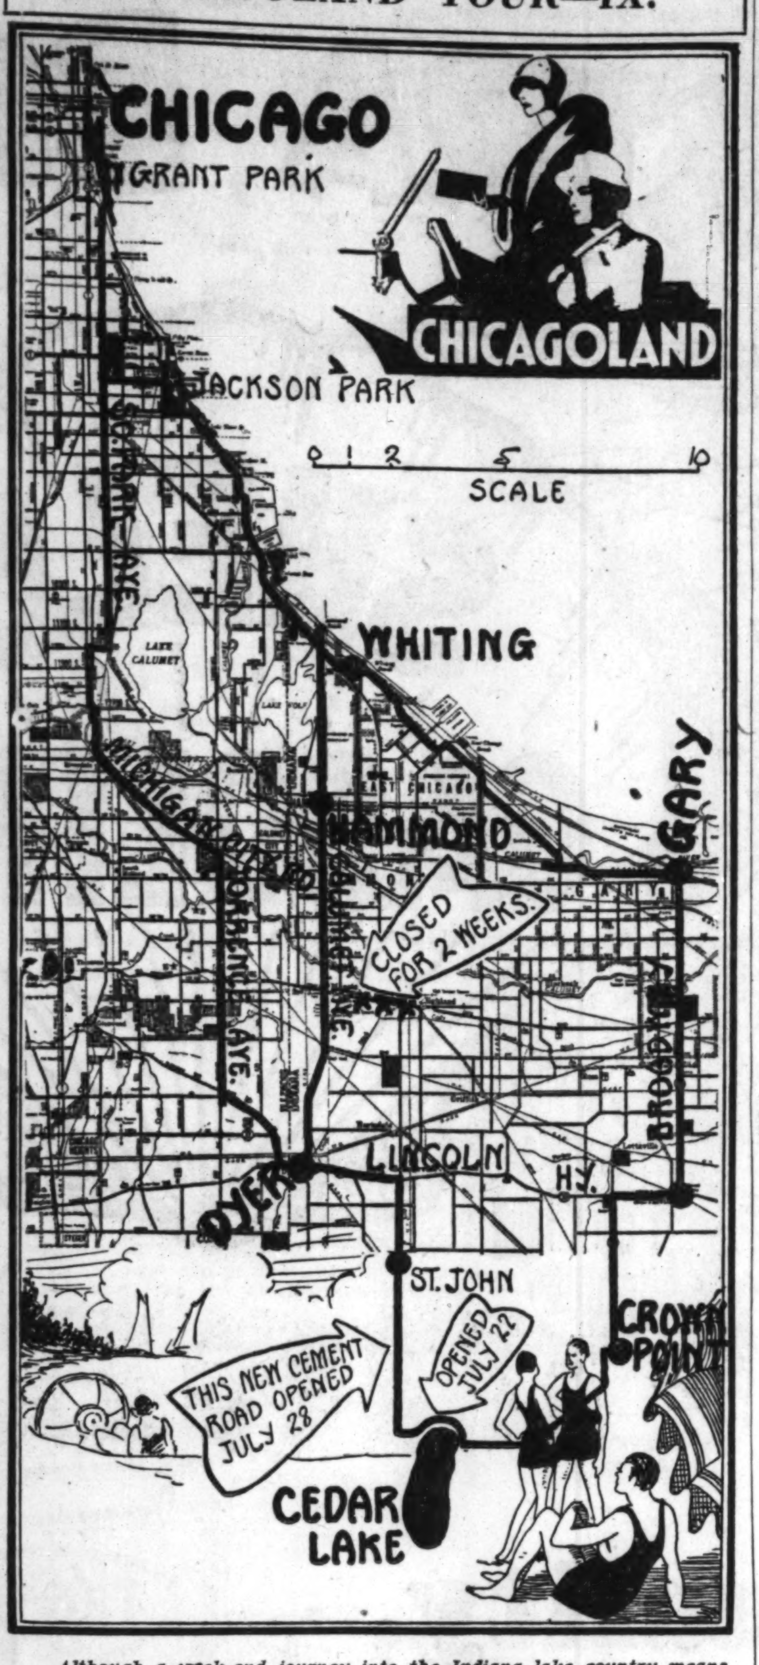
Motorists had been in the habit of parking in front of these buildings when they were closed, believing that the law applied only when they were open. Police, however, tagged all cars found there at any time of the day or night.

New York Is Center of Motor Population

New York state has the greatest number of motor vehicles of any state, there being 1,937,918 registered in 1927. New York also had the largest numerical increase over 1926, or 122,484. North Carolina had the largest percentage increase, 11.8.

Six other states had more than a million cars, California having 1,693,[illegible], Ohio 1,570,734, Pennsylvania [illegible]4,915, Illinois 1,438,985, Michigan [illegible]4,772, and Texas 1,111,407. Only two states, Florida and Arkansas, showed a decrease in registration in 1927.

CHICAGOLAND TOUR—IX.



Although a week-end journey into the Indiana lake country means punishment, there appear to be hundreds of thousands who are willing to make the sacrifice involved in worming through indescribable congestion of motor traffic for the purpose of getting an outing. Cedar lake is now within reach over new cement, opened July 28, and it is suggested that those attempting a circle tour to that resort go out of Chicago by way of the eastern route and return by the western, as shown on the map. It will be easy going south in the morning and easier getting back into town by Torrence avenue in the evening.

NEED 500 CARS TO GET ORPHANS' OUTING QUOTA

Directors of the outing to be held at Lincoln park, Aug. 16, for inmates of Chicago orphan asylums and homes for the aged are facing a problem of transportation. President John C. Emery reports that 1,000 cars will be needed to transport the 5,000 guests from forty institutions to the park and back. Up to yesterday only half that number of vehicles had been subscribed.

"We appeal to motorists to volunteer their cars for a few hours on orphans' day," said Mr. Emery. "The little ones and the aged look forward with much enthusiasm to this annual event and in the past none has been disappointed. Cars are assigned to the nearest home to that of the volunteer. The schedule calls for the deliverance of the guests to the park by 9 o'clock and the return trip is set for 4:30. This arrangement permits the business man to take care of his regular pursuits during the day."

This will be the twenty-third annual outing, which includes homes of all denominations and nationalities. At the park the guests are entertained by a dog and pony circus, clowns and vaudeville numbers. Stage celebrities now playing in Chicago have volunteered to appear. Luncheons, candy, ice cream, toys and other knickknacks are distributed.

Those who wish to volunteer cars may register with Robert K. Sloan, care of the Chicago Motor Liverymen's association, 326 West Madison street, either by mail or phone State 4852.

MOTOR SCRAP HEAP NEARS TWO MILLION FOR YEAR OF 1927

A report from Detroit says that the automobile scrap heap now has reached mountainous proportions, and is sure to increase in size indefinitely.

In 1927 it has been found a total of 1,825,581 automobiles of all makes and models were added to the pile.

New York led with a contribution of 149,372, Pennsylvania was second with 135,378, and Michigan third with 119,796.

All cars were considered scrapped which were registered in 1926, but not registered the following year.

SPEEDING, ONCE CRIME, BECOMES TRAFFIC VIRTUE

A tendency on the part of states to increase speed limits in the interest of safety is becoming increasingly evident in the eyes of the American Automobile association.

Results of a survey conducted by the association show that within the past three years twenty-three states have wiped out "obsolete" speed laws and that the "move on" signal in the open country, together with drives to eliminate speed traps and roadside courts, has "done much to facilitate movement of traffic."

The associatiion reported there had been a "very notable development in the tendency to divorce speed and recklessness and to judge the recklessness of the driver on the facts in the case and the situation confronting him.

"Secondly," it said, "there is a marked increase of opinion in favor of minimum speed laws, this being advanced by state officials who have observed over a long period of time that many accidents are due to people taking a change in getting out of the line of slow moving traffic.

"While the practice of leaving the line always involves serious hazards, experience is driving home the fact that vehicles moving at an unnecessary slow rate are proving one of the worst nuisances on the road today."

States having speed laws allowing the motorist to "step on it" out in the open, the survey showed, have contributed less to the accident list than those with "obsolete regulations."

VERMONT PIQUED AT BLAME FOR POOR HIGHWAYS

Officials Make Statement on Conditions.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

Officials of the state of Vermont, the roads of which were taken up for the purpose of comparison with the roads of adjoining states and the province of Quebec in an article recently, express a certain resentment to statements made.

For the purpose of untangling a misunderstanding, it is necessary to state that the article in question was not formulated as a criticism of the condition of Vermont's existing roads, but rather to show the type of roads which do exist, and that only as an illustration for comparison with the neighboring roads in New York state, Massachusetts and Quebec.

The gravel roads of Vermont are excellent for what they are, but they are not concrete. Tourists were not warned to forego the wonderful beauties of the Green mountain state because earthen roads largely exist. Merely the fact was pointed out that tourists do not go into Vermont in as heavy volume as they go into New York, and the conclusion was drawn that automobile traffic prefers hard surface paving, regardless of other considerations.

Follows Similar Lines.

Walter H. Crockett, director of publicity for the state, at the request of Rawson C. Myrick, secretary of state, furnishes THE TRIBUNE with a statement of conditions which appears to substantiate the thought in the article sent from Middlebury, Vt., by the writer last month.

"State officials have no intention nor desire to mislead prospective visitors," Mr. Crockett writes, "but they do ask a fair statement of facts. Vermont's doors are open to the motoring public and most of her roads are safe and comfortable.

Before the automobile came into common use, Vermont established a system of trunk line highways with a stone foundation and a gravel surface. There is no easier road built for riding comfort than a good gravel road, and where the traffic is not heavy such a road is a delight to ride over.

Do Not Stand Up.

With the increased use of motor vehicles, the gravel roads will not stand up under modern highway traffic, and Vermont is now starting to substitute cement roads on its main system of highways. The state is thoroughly committed to a good road policy, following a survey made by the national good roads bureau, and its recommendations are being carried out by the state highway department.

"There are main trunk line highways running north and south on either side of the Green mountain range, which extends through the state from the Massachusetts border to the Canadian line, and there are several cross state trunk lines which form important links between New York state, New Hampshire and the Maine coast. Much of the travel from southern New England to eastern Canada passes through Vermont.

Building Fine Bridge.

"A bridge across Lake Champlain from Chimney Point, Vt., to Crown Point fortress is being constructed by the states of New York and Vermont and the cost will be approximately one million dollars. This will form an important connecting link between the southern Adirondack region, the Green mountains, the White mountains and the Atlantic coast.

"It is not assumed that incorrect information has been given out maliciously, but as a result of a misunderstanding of facts. Early spring motorists to this state were distressed by the condition of Vermont roads due partly to flood damage last November and partly to heavy spring rains. Extensive repair work during the last few months has very largely remedied this condition."

Has Concrete Program.

As stated in the article Vermont is now interested in permanent highway pavements, and up to Jan. 1, 1928, had over 59 miles of this type of improvements. Addition of 38 miles is provided for this year, according to the Portland Cement association of Boston, and similar additions are planned for future years.

At present, however, gravel roads constitute the riding facilities of the state for the great majority of motor traffic.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

Auburn has gone in for demonstrating mechanical performances of its eight and announces that an official record for 24 hours' action and 2,000 miles' endurance, together with all hours and distances under that, now is held by the Cord product. The record shows that the car went 2,033 miles in the limit, averaging 84.73 per hour. The test was made at Atlantic City by a model 115 stock speedster.

Hupmobile's new models are scheduled for display by dealers this week, an offering that is attracting wide attention.

The De Soto, the new Chrysler built automobile, is now in the hands of retailers and ready to take its place in the public marts. Walter J. Felton, Inc., the head of which has been in the automobile distribution business in Chicago for twenty years, has been named as distributor for this territory.

Community Motors, Inc., will hold the fourth annual picnic of Oakland-Pontiac owners today at St. Paul's park, Morton Grove. All the standard features of an old time picnic will be on the program, H. A. Wehmeier, vice president and general manager of the company, states.

Buick's new eighteen model line of 1929 cars stimulated the interest of literally hundreds of thousands of motorists in Chicago territory last week, when the new cars were displayed at all dealers' showrooms and at a number of leading Chicago hotels. On Saturday, Sunday, and Monday 298,000 visited the displays; last year's showing drew 121,000, according to C. Y. Yonkers, branch manager.

NEWLY WIDENED WAUKEGAN ROAD NEAR COMPLETION

With the first section of the newly widened 40 foot Waukegan road complete and open for traffic, Supt. George A. Quinlan of the county highway department, announced yesterday that sections further north are to be ready within a week or ten days.

Traffic is now permitted at all times to travel the highway between the Milwaukee avenue connection at Niles and Glenview, and north of that the pavement is open to traffic during construction work in the daylight hours, Sundays excepted.

Mr. Quinlan predicts that the entire distance to the county line will be open within a fortnight.

Dempster street is now open between Waukegan road and McCormick road, according to the highway department, which will provide 40 foot driving facilities from Devon avenue and McCormick road to Glenview.

Since the work has been started much traffic has been switched to Sheridan road and to Milwaukee avenue, causing the heaviest congestion in motor traffic yet recorded on those two highways. The situation will be relieved with the completion of this highway.

FITTING STREETS IN MERGED TOWNS BRINGS PROBLEM

Regional Experts Busy on Blanket Planning.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

There are eighty-three cities and villages in the immediate suburban area of Chicago. Practically all of them are growing at a rapid rate in population and area. In a comparatively few years the vacant property which now divides them will have been populated and the entire collection merged into a metropolitan group.

MARSHALL E. KIEG.

When that day comes, what will be the situation as to the joining of streets? Will the streets of the adjoining suburbs fit together?

Some of these towns are laid out on the bias, some on the lines of the cardinal points; some in circles. As each community grows its streets will reach out and eventually come into contact with the streets reaching out from the nearest neighbor.

An interesting question arises in the matter of the joining or merging of these streets, with a possibility of continuity.

Main Arteries Fixed.

The first step toward preventing a hopeless tangle lies in the through arteries that already have been laid out to connect these communities. In a way this work has made some sort of provision for intercity motor communications of the future, and the tendency of subdividers and city planners is to lay out new streets on lines which take into consideration the directions of main arteries.

Cook county has adopted a policy so far as new subdivisions in unincorporated territory goes, and will approve plats only if the streets are upon continuous north and south or east and west lines. In the incorporated communities the county has no jurisdiction.

Street development in the suburbs has not been let to "just grow up," but rather quietly and effectively the regional plan authorities have been working on this subject for more than three years.

Marshall E. Kieg, chairman of the committee on highways of the Chicago Regional Planning association, yesterday discussed this important phase of highway development and reviewed the efforts of the group in the past.

Made Obstacle Survey.

"Three years ago," Mr. Kieg said, "the association began work with the cities and villages, the counties and the states in the region of Chicago, to untangle some of the traffic problems. Taking each continuous thoroughfare, whether it be state, county, city, or village street, an obstacle survey was made to ferret out the places which needed attention to make adequate arteries.

"To the north of Chicago the plan commissions of Evanston, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka, Glencoe, Highland Park, Lake Forest, and Lake Bluff, which shore line municipalities are immediately connected with Deerfield, Northbrook, Northfield, Glenview, Morton Grove, Niles Center, Tessville, and Niles, just to the west of the lake shore, are all collaborating on a connected plan for their thoroughfares.

"Under the Illinois law certain roads known as state aid roads may be extended by the county authorities into cities and villages on a direct route. Under that law these north side cities and villages are collaborating on a system of highway rights of way wide enough to take care of the future traffic and of such alignment as will take away from the immediate lake shore the traffic that is now compelled to follow Sheridan road and the residential streets because there is no other thoroughfare for them to use.

"Northwest of Chicago the cities of Park Ridge and Des Plaines have held a number of meetings of their plan commissions in coöperation with the regional plan so that the city plans of each of these two cities may fit together as one unit and coincide at the limits of the city of Chicago with the Chicago plan.

Main Streets Provided.

"East and west thoroughfares such as Dempster street, Oakton street, Touhy avenue, and Devon are provided with 100 foot wide rights of way which are assured as rapidly as the land is subdivided. North and south thoroughfares such as Milwaukee avenue, Pfingsten road, the River road, Mannheim road and Wolf road are all provided with wide rights of way, and pavement programs are proceeding unimpeded by right of way problems as a result of this kind of coöperation.

"In the western suburbs this arrangement is effective in Maywood, Broadview, Brookfield, and Melrose Park, and the thoroughfares of the county, state, and the cities and villages are being connected up. Of special importance is 25th avenue, on which pavement is now being laid north of Roosevelt road to connect Schiller Park with Franklin Park, Melrose Park and south through Bellwood, Maywood, Broadview, La Grange Park and Brookfield to connect with East avenue.

"Western Springs, La Grange, Hinsdale, La Grange Park, Brookfield, Riverside and Lyons have collaborated as a Western Gateways association, coöperating with the planning association in perfecting their program for city and village pavement to connect with and supplement state and county pavement in that vicinity. These villages along the Burlington are well organized and are proceeding to iron out difficult problems which have in the past prevented the widening of highways.

Seven Counties Active.

"Already seven counties in the region of Chicago are acquiring wide rights of way for every main state and county highway, as the land is subdivided. In addition the state and county are acquiring 80 and 100 foot rights of way through farm land instead of the old 66 foot widths."

So far as the development of purely local thoroughfares on lines which will coincide with the lines of highway in an adjoining town, D. H. Burnham, president of the regional body, is of the opinion that it cannot be done. Each community has its own ideas of strictly local landscaping and street arrangement, but Mr. Burnham is of the belief that the main arteries can be shot straight through all communities so that so far as future increasing motor traffic goes, main thoroughfares will be provided.

On the other hand, no plan has been developed to cope with the problem of overlapping street ends, which are bound to occur as these suburbs grow together. Planners say that their field has not yet reached a point which will give them authority over the layout of local subdivisions, especially in regard to street directions.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

AN ENDURING MEMORIAL.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Hillsboro, Ia., has been taken out of its isolation. Once more or less marooned on "the worst mud road in Iowa," the town is now connected with the rest of the world with a ten mile highway of concrete.

Standing alone, this does not mean much to anybody excepting a resident or near neighbor of Hillsboro. Thousands of other American cities and towns, having access to nothing but undependable mud roads as late as a decade ago, are now in the happy posture of Hillsboro.

This new ten mile stretch was not financed by a state, a county, a town or a township. Federal aid did not enter into its building. It was not reared out of the proceeds of motor car licenses or gasoline taxes. No man's bills will be increased because of the existence of this good road unless the presence of the road increases the value of property adjacent to it, and if it does that, the townspeople of Hillsboro and the farmers round-around will have double reason to rejoice. Any increase in taxes due to increment of land values will be more than balanced by the material and social benefits the road will bring.

This road is the gift of a private citizen. It helps to emphasize the gratitude he feels because he prospered and gained a large fortune. It means that he has put into the public business something of what he was enabled to amass in private enterprise. For building the road he paid $250,000. He volunteered to assume this obligation and to turn over the results of his philanthropy to his friends and neighbors for a permanent community benefit.

His name? Alexander Coleman, farmer, nonagenarian, living in retirement in Fort Dodge. He had lived sixty years before automobiles became something else than rare curiosities. Better than most men he knows all the values of a hard surfaced road today. This particular road, call it what the people might, was to be a memorial to himself and his family, a benefaction to those who live in and enjoy the motor car age, a saver of time and wear and tear, an enlarger of a neighborhood, a broadened opportunity for the education of youth, a shrinker of distances to markets.

OBSERVER.

IMMUNITY FOR NATIVES.

Chicago, July 28.—This should be ample proof of the one sided methods employed by motorcycle pirates in some of the small towns and will show up the injustice to unoffending motorists in this one particular Tinley Park. My wife and I have gone through Tinley Park frequently the last year and in the evening it is common to see this pirate with a victim on the highway. On May 15 I was parked on the highway in Tinley Park for an hour and noticed a native driving his coach up and down at 40 miles an hour, coming and going three or four times. Why not hand this fellow a ticket? If a man wants to see the speed limit violated in this town all he has to do is to park and watch the natives. They violate the speed law all day and night. I am not a speedster, but I do like to see

FAIR PLAY.

SIGNAL LIGHTS NEEDED.

Chicago, July 23.—There is a dangerous intersection at Evergreen, Fowler and Wicker Park avenue, where the three thoroughfares converge. There is hardly a day passes without an accident. It would be gratifying to those who walk or ride, to have this spot taken care of.

MRS. W. PELOUBET.

NORTH WOODS SPORT.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 4.—I appeal for knowledge with which to combat, if possible, a putrid situation that exists at Schoefield, Wis The place is a cross road where the chief enterprise consist of a peace justice and motorcycle cop, a partnership doing a thriving business on out of state motor victims.

Last Saturday we were stopped and accused of speeding 40 miles per hour past intersections. Actually, we did not exceed 30 miles per hour. The cop's sales talk ran about as follows: "The 'minimum' fine is $13 and up to $100. If you can't wait to see the justice when he holds court after seven o'clock tonight, the thing for you to do is to put up $13 appearance bond and forfeit your bond for non-appearance."

I did what any other sucker at such a disadvantage would do—forked over the $13, which represented exactly what I was arrested for—the $13.

Did that cop have any legal right to assess and collect the appearance bond. If I had elected to wait for the justice and refused to turn over any cash could the officer forcibly detain me or hold my car? Could the officer refuse to accept my personal check for the amount of the appearance bond?

In the event any of the procedure was illegal, what can I do to regain the money I paid?

NEW CAR MODELS SERVE AS SPUR TO FALL TRADE

Makers Scorn Idea of Election Year Slump.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The introduction of new models for the 1929 trade is at its height with every manufacturer striving to get his offerings into production and into the hands of the critical public. The most noticeable changes in designs are those of the Buick, Chrysler, Nash and Studebaker.

This week's offerings in new lines are those of the Hupp, Chandler, Dodge, and the De Soto, the latest Chrysler built car.

With the announcements new cars are filling the showrooms, which have been bare for weeks awaiting the new lines. A noticeable increase of orders placed is also announced by dealers and manufacturers which makes it almost certain the fall months will be busy ones for the industry as a whole despite the fact that it is a "presidential year."

Discard Old Belief.

The trade is getting away from the belief that a presidential year is always a bad one for business. Formerly there was a tendency to slow up months before a presidential election because of radical measures advanced by one party or the other. Present indications, viewed from a study of schedules and orders being received for automobiles, justify the prediction that the sale of cars during the second half of the present year will amount to one and a half billion dollars, a figure which will pass sales of any other half year by many millions of dollars.

With the year little past the halfway mark, the production and sale of Chevrolet cars since the first of January is well in excess of 750,000.

Ford plants throughout the country are increasing production from week to week, but to no sensational extent. The daily output remains around 3,000. Officials still look to a 5,000 cars per day output before October.

Labor Records High.

Due to production of new models, the employment in the various automobile plants and accessories shops took a substantial upward trend this week, the increase being 5,001. This placed the total employed at 270,557, an increase over the corresponding week of 1927 of 68,563.

The same ratio of increase is reported in other upstate automobile plants.

Approximately $10,500,000 will be refunded to the 53,135 automobile dealers in this country as a result of the repeal of the automobile sales tax, which became effective May 29 last. When the tax was reduced from 5 to 3 per cent two years ago, dealers received a refund of $7,534,814.

Show Prosperous Year.

Figures compiled by the department of commerce and just made public indicate the present year will be one of the best in the history of the automotive industry. The report shows a production of 2,201,880 passenger cars and trucks in the United States during the first half of the year. A substantial increase of passenger cars is shown, while the truck division suffered a slight decrease.

With automobile production to date in advance of any previous year, with the exception of 1926, the output for the year is being estimated at around 4,000,000 units.

The trip to Niagara falls is more like a week-end tour than a journey. The preferred route is straight into Detroit over U. S. highways 12, 20, and 112, across the ferry and on to Provincial highway 3 into Niagara Falls, two days of steady driving. The return, of course, is a matter of where one cares to wander.

NEW JERSEY ALSO BUILDS ELEVATED AUTO SPEEDWAY

8 Mile Viaduct Without Crossing Under Way.

Jersey City, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—While the Holland vehicular tunnel, which connects Manhattan and the Jersey side, is considered a long stride ahead of all other existing means of motor transit between New York City boroughs, the bore itself is being overshadowed by the development of its New Jersey approaches.

This remarkable enterprise, now under construction, consists of a "stem" highway thirteen miles in length without an intersection at grade. At the western end the so-called stem branches out into the main radial highways which cross the state.

The same principle has been adopted at the Camden bridge across the Delaware river to Philadelphia. At the Jersey end of the bridge a stem highway has been built eastward for three miles, where it intersects a circle highway. The radiating highways join the circle road. Coming from any direction the motorist first comes upon the circle highway and then follows that until reaching the bridge approach.

Goes Into the Air.

The Jersey City development, however, is a much more elaborate plan. The tunnel connection starts out from the Hudson tunnel plaza as an elevated highway which continues west across the network of terminal railways that infests the water front.

Continuing in the air, it attains grade at the Palisades level. Across that elevation the right of way is being blasted through the solid rock, which permits the road to proceed at a depression. For eight miles no intersections occur at grade. In that distance a number of ramp connections with the lower levels are made.

"This work is without doubt the most distinguished example of up to date treatment for the motor traffic problem in the world," L. N. Whitcraft, district engineer of the Portland Cement association, said. "Engineers from European countries are frequent visitors at the job, and the views they register are unanimous to that effect.

New Jersey a Leader.

"Creation of this unparalleled transit facility, together with the improvements at Camden bridge and the policy of road widening going on all over the state, places New Jersey among the leaders in America in the somewhat nervous race of states and municipalities to catch up and keep up with the demands of automobile traffic.

"The viaduct is scheduled to be wholly completed in two years, and when finished will handle an immense volume of important traffic from all directions in the state and from the entire west of the nation. With a capacity of 46,000 cars a day through the Hudson tunnel, this viaduct will make it possible to deliver to the entrance and to take away from the exit of the tunnel all the traffic that possibly can be carried through it.

"The driving surface on the highway at the tunnel plaza will accommodate six lines of traffic, though it may be narrowed to four some distance inland."

Resembles Chicago Proposal.

The viaduct enterprise in Jersey has a parallel in Chicago in the proposed elevated motorway to follow Roosevelt road from the lake front boulevards to Des Plaines avenue, Forest Park, at the west. The distance of the Jersey viaduct without coming to grade or meeting an intersection, is eight miles. The distance from the lake boulevards to the western limits of Chicago is also eight miles.

The New Jersey authorities designed the approach and decided to build it without any great fuss, although in all regards this tunnel connecting motorway constituted a difficult problem.

The Roosevelt road proposal is purely one of construction. The city of Chicago and the west park commission hold title to the right of way, and the street exists as more than 100 feet in width from Michigan avenue to Crawford.

An inspection of the tunnel plaza highway by Chicago officials and interested backers of the plan, should convince the most skeptical of the comparative simplicity and low cost that characterizes the Chicago project.

A BROKEN BOTTLENECK

Michigan avenue is now a continuous eight or ten lane artery, as the case may be, from the link bridge to Lake Shore drive, the old bottleneck south of Oak street to Chicago avenue having been widened out and opened to traffic late in July. Through what was formerly the narrow portion additional lanes of cars may now travel, and this is expected to reduce the night and morning jams materially.

Ideal Spot for Parking Attracts No Customers

Royal Oak, Mich., has a free parking lot near the center of the city, but motorists do not use it. Frequently cars are parked as close together as possible along the curbs on all sides of the block containing the free lot, but nearly every day, the only car in the lot is the one owned by R. J. Whitney, city manager. The park is located beside the city hall.

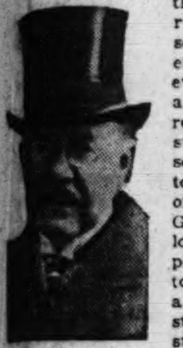
Forty-seven Story Tower to Replace Tacoma Building

HIGH HOUSE ON DRIVE TO PASS FOR HIGH FLATS

25 Story Structure for Gold Coast.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Another noted old Lake Shore drive residence capitulates this morning to the overwhelming rush of the skyscrapers in their efforts to capture every foot of land along Chicago's residential show street for themselves. The latest to go is the home of Mr. and Mrs. George H. High, long socially important, which is to be replaced by a twenty-five story apartment structure.



GEORGE H. HIGH.

Mr. High, long identified with real estate interests here, has sold his property to an undisclosed syndicate for a price which also is kept in the dark. Title was taken by Anna Petersen, who in turn conveyed it to the Chicago Title and Trust company as trustee.

The land fronts sixty-five feet on the drive and extends back 95.5 feet to Stone street, on which thoroughfare it also has frontage.

The ground is improved with two stone residences built by Mrs. J. Whitney Farlin, mother of Mrs. High, about 1893. Mrs. Farlin presented the residence at 1242 to her daughter as a wedding gift when she married Mr. High. The one at 1244 she lived in until her death.

Designed by Cobb.

The residences were built as a unit, being of English Gothic architecture. They are of Bedford stone. Each contains twelve rooms and a large ballroom. They were designed by Henry Ives Cobb, who was the architiect for the federal building here. Mr. and Mrs. High have occupied their residence since the spring of 1893. They are leaving shortly for an extended trip to Europe.

Details regarding the skyscraper have not been completed. However, Robert S. De Golyer & Co. are preparing plans for the structure, whicn is to be at least twenty-five stories high. Present plans call for a roof bungalow with luxurious appointments. It has not yet been decided whether the structure will be devoted to coöperative or straight renting apartments.

The High residence is the fourth to be announced within the last montn or so as being doomed to pass into the hands of the wreckers. Of course the most interesting transaction was the sale by Potter Palmer of the Palmer family's castle on the drive between Schiller and Banks to Vincent Bendix for $3,000,000. This mansion is to be replaced by a huge hotel, but not for a year or so.

Others to Go.

The Frear residence at 1440 Lake Shore drive has just been torn down and a nineteen story "co-op" is to be erected on its site. Then W. B. Frankenstein heads a syndicate which bought two old residences at 1040 and 1042 respecively, which are to be razed ultimately for a tall structure.

Among the few remaining private residences on the drive are those of the following: Mrs. Rockfeller McCormick at 1000, Mrs. Waller Borden at 1020, Frank G. Logan at 1150 Charles A. Monroe at 1234, Charles M. Richter at 1418, George M. Reynolds at 1444, Edward T. Blair at 1516, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Whiting at 1524, B. A. Eckhart at 1530, and Richard T. Crane Jr. at 1550.

Michael Cantacuzene and A. M. Brown of Ross & Browne negotiated the sale of the High property to the syndicate and Ross & Browne will have the management of the new skyscraper upon its completion.

COX SELLS HIS RESIDENCE ON BELLEVUE PLACE

James C. Cox, treasurer of the William Wrigley Jr. company, has sold his residence at 100 Bellevue place, lot 24x110, to an undisclosed purchaser, title being taken by the Chicago Title and Trust company. The reported price was $75,000. Mr. Cox, who has bought an apartment in the new coöp at 1500 Lake Shore drive, intends to remain in the Bellevue place residence till his new home is ready and has leased back the house until May 1, 1929. When Mr. Cox moves the new owner is to occupy the residence. Daniel Connell & Co. were brokers.

F. & W. GRAND STORES LEASE ON NORTH AVENUE

The F. & W. Grand 5-10-25 Cent Stores, Inc., leased for ninety-nine years from James Hammond Birks and his wife Sarah Davies Birks the premises at 2740-44 West North avenue, just east of California avenue where it will have a new store. The land is 72x125 feet and is improved with two two story frame buildings and a three story brick structure. The lease calls for an annual rental ranging from $11,500 to $16,500. The lessee is to erect a building prior to Jan. 1, 1936, not to cost less than $75,000. Mark Levy & Bro. were brokers. Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale & Templeton were brokers.

Large Hotel Is Rising at 5108Kenwood

Construction is in progress at 5108-14 Kenwood avenue on a ten story apartment hotel, which, it is stated, will represent an investment in land and building of approximately $710,000. The structure is to contain ninety apartments, of which fifty-four will have living room, bedroom and kitchenette-dinette, and thirty-six will have living room and kitchen-dinette.

Designed by Architect W. L. Hoffman, the new south side hotel will be T shaped, with the stem of the T facing toward Kenwood avenue. The architecture is modified Gothic.

The front and sides will be of face brick and cut stone, with the bays outlined in stone to the top. The roof will be finished off with battlements, a stone coping and a pergola. The land at the front and sides not occupied by the hotel will be landscaped.

A large lounge and lobby will occupy the entire front of the ground floor. Besides the lounge this floor will contain the offices and a three room apartment for the manager.

The apartments will have all the customary conveniences, including mechanical refrigeration and ventilation, large closets, etc.

The lot fronts 66½ feet on Kenwood with a depth of 178.9 feet. The owner is the 5110 Kenwood Building corporation, of which Thomas D. Randall is the principal stockholder. The Straus Brothers Investment company has underwritten a $430,000 bond issue at 6 per cent on the project.

WORK TO START SOON AT BOUL MICH AND 26TH

Work is to start shortly on the building project, announced in this department on May 30th, at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and 26th street. Several details have been changed since the original announcement. The building is to be two stories and will represent a total investment of approximately $353,000. The site is 142x179. R. Bernard Kurzon is architect. The owners are Benjamin Horwich and Lester Jelinek. William C. Heinemann & Co. have underwritten a $185,000 six per cent bond issue loan on the project.

The corner is improved with an old mansion built and occupied for many years by Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Wells. Mr. Wells was a wealthy shoe manufacturer. Mrs. Wells now lives at the Parkway hotel.

DOZEN MORE BUY SUITES IN NEW HYDE PARK CO-OP

Twelve additional sales in the 5000 East End avenue coöperative project are announced by William B. Seifert, of Carroll, Schendorf & Boenicke. The buyers of apartments are: W. C. Boorne, of the Hartford Fire insurance company; W. F. Carroll, vice president of the Empire Storage company; Ernest L. Kreamer, attorney; James J. Simon and Carl Ragnitt, automobile accessories; High R. MacKenzie, manager of the Stickley Brothers Furniture company; Paul L. Day and Walter H. Giertsen, realtors; George A. Lee, farm investments; Florence Hanson and Charles Krutckoff, member of the board of assessors.

SWIMMING POOL FOR APARTMENTS ON WRIGHTWOOD

A seventy apartment building features of which will be a swimming pool and gymnasium at the top is planned for 663-65 Wrightwood avenue by Gussie Katz. Mrs. Katz recently acquired the 50 by 190 site, improved with an old stone residence, from Giuseppe Mule, giving in exchange twelve flats at 721-23 Briar place.

Mr. Mule acquired the Wrightwood avenue property from Christine Andresen in part payment for nineteen flats which he sold to her at the northeast corner of Damen and Argyle, lot 49 by 156 feet. John M. Gray & Co. and Strassheim & Co. were brokers.

BANKER, PROF., AND REALTY MAN BUY CO-OP FLATS

Four more sales of suites in the 6700 Crandon avenue coöperative apartment building are reported by the Kirkham-Hayes corporation. They are: Karl S. Lashley, research psychologist at the University of Chicago; H. B. Snider, vice president of Carman, Snider & Co., bankers; George F. Mengerson, real estate, and A. Homan, of the Butler-Homan company, wholesale fruit merchants.

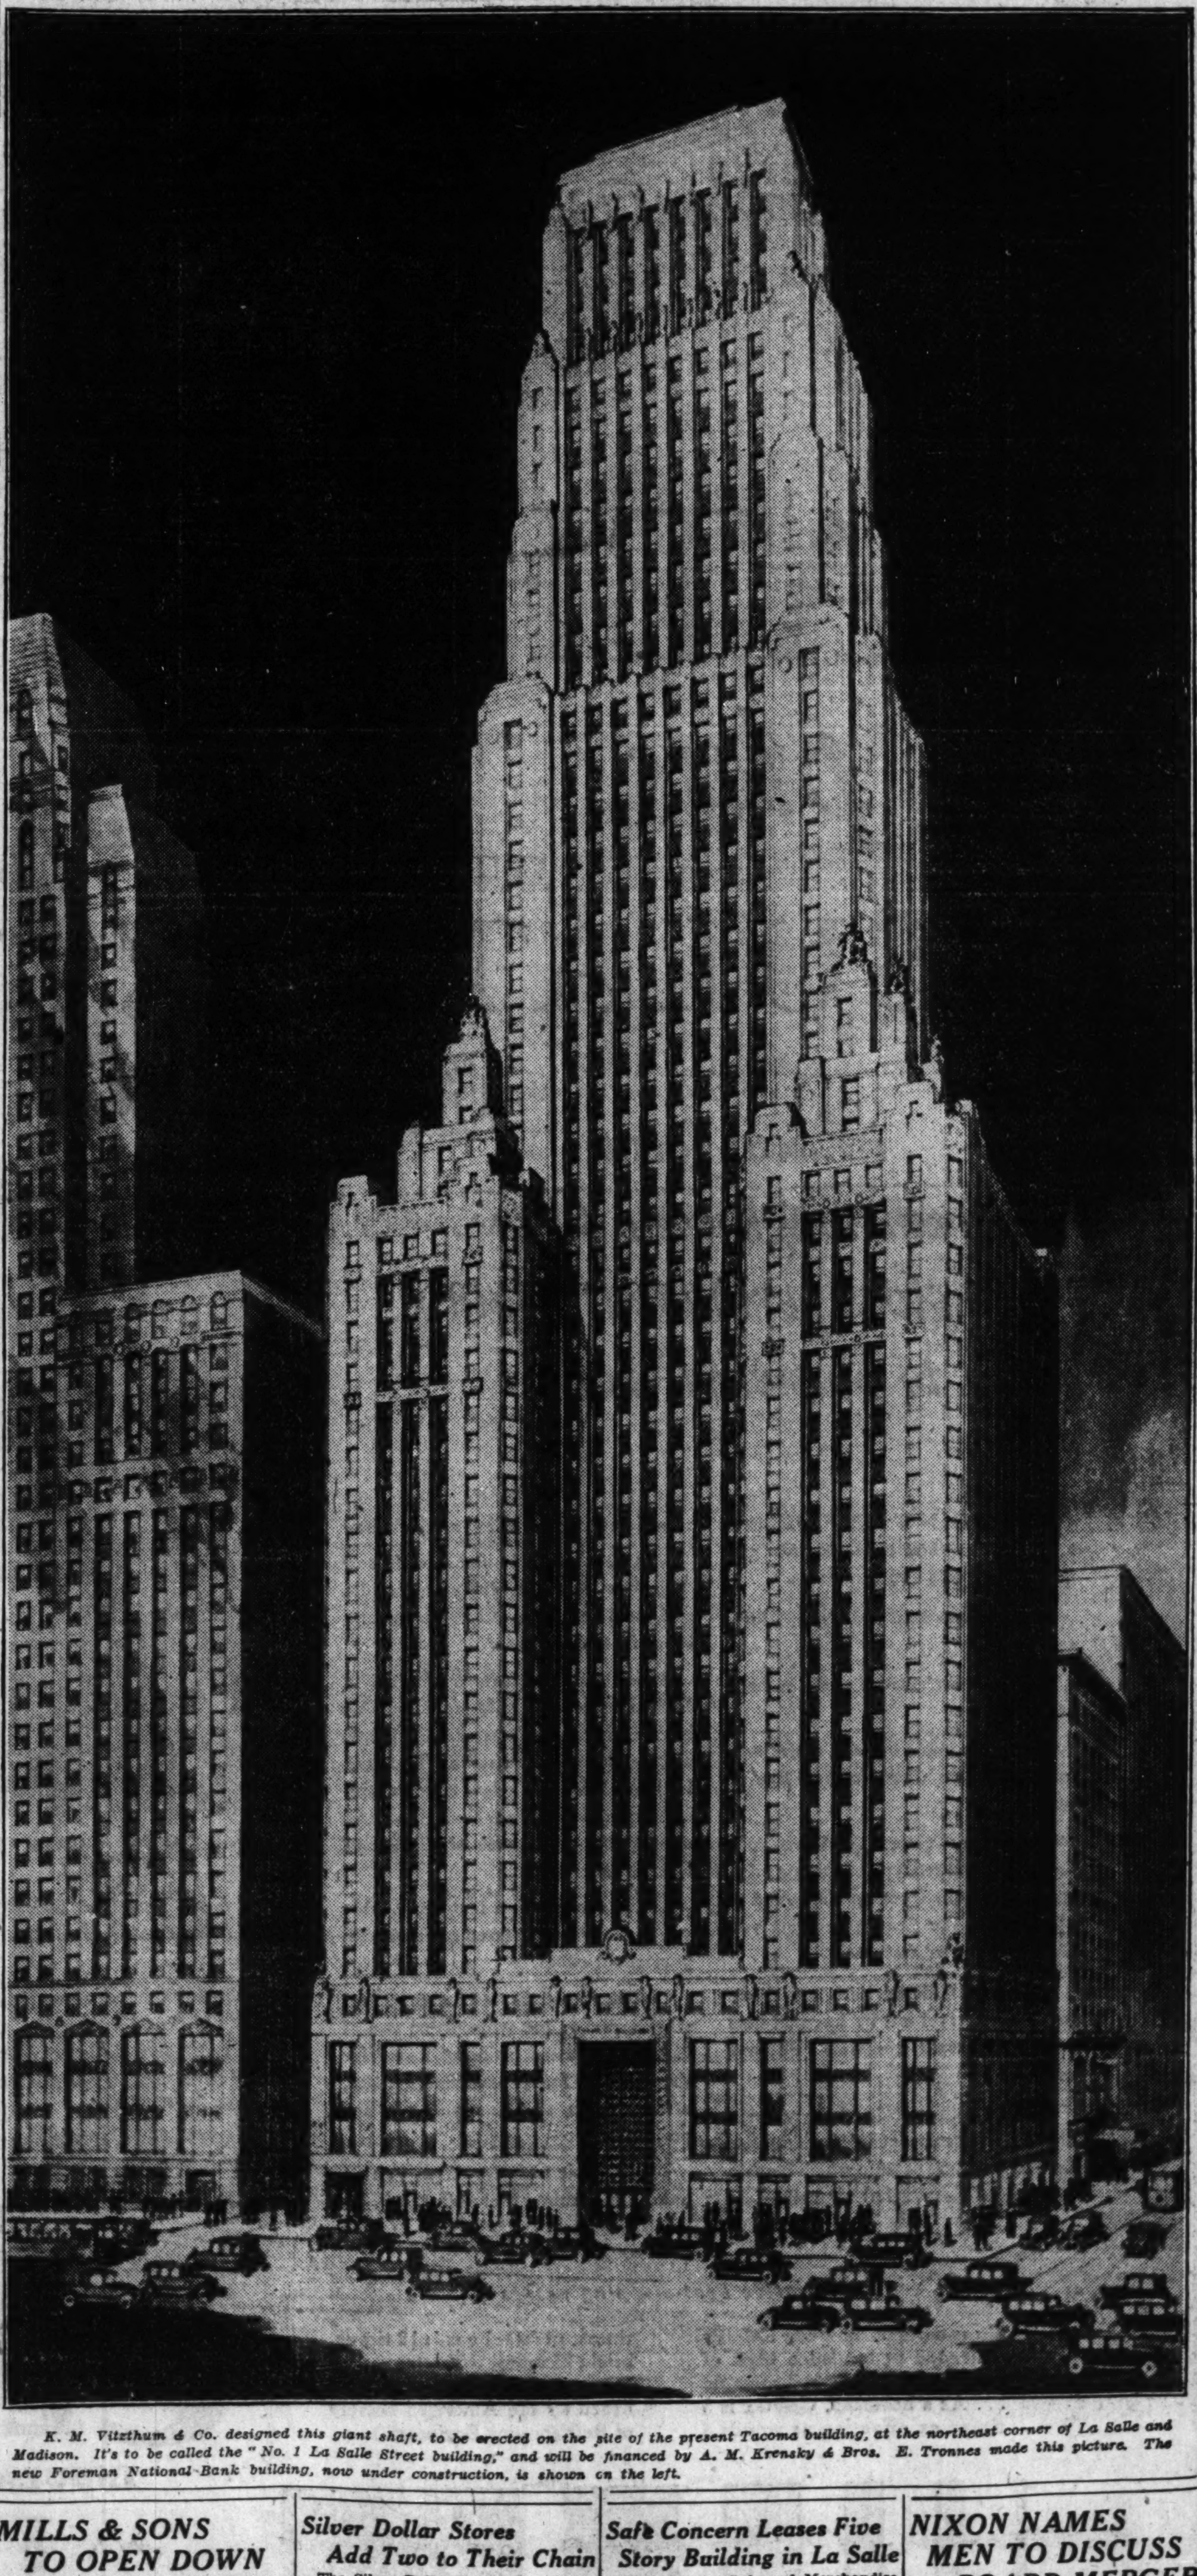
The 30 Cedar Street Building corporation has bought the four story residence, 30x144, at 30 Cedar street for a reported $65,000, through Daniel Connell & Co., for investment. The house is how occupied by the Chicago alumni chapter of the Phi Kappa Sigma. This is just east of the nineteen story apartment building erected by Harold Bradley.

Joseph C. Belden Buys Flat in Lake Shore Drive Co-op

Joseph C. Belden of Lake Forest, president of the Belden Manufacturing company, makers of insulated wire, has purchased an eight room apartment on the top of 1448 Lake Shore drive. James W. Rogers of Sudler & Co. and Baird & Warner were brokers.

CHICAGO'S NEWEST LOOP SHAFT



K. M. Vitzthum & Co. designed this giant shaft, to be erected on the site of the present Tacoma building, at the northeast corner of La Salle and Madison. It's to be called the "No. 1 La Salle Street building," and will be financed by A. M. Krensky & Bros. E. Tronnes made this picture. The new Foreman National Bank building, now under construction, is shown on the left.

MILLS & SONS TO OPEN DOWN TOWN BRANCH

Mills & Sons, developers of Westwood, have leased the store at 115 South Dearborn street and will open it about Aug. 10 as their downtown office. An exhibit is planned showing the various types of homes they are erecting and also the building materials used.

Silver Dollar Stores Add Two to Their Chain

The Silver Dollar Stores, Inc., have added two more stores to their Chicago and suburban chain, which makes nine leased since Jan. 1. Seventy-five feet at 4635 Broadway have been rented for eight years at a reported $84,000 for the term. William Dormand & Co. and Benjamin C. Rose were brokers. The store at 5807 West 22d street, Cicero, was leased for ten years. Mr. Rose was only broker.

Safe Concern Leases Five Story Building in La Salle

The Chicago Safe and Merchandise company has leased from the First Trust and Savings bank, as trustee, the five story building at 170 North La Salle at an annual net rental of $7,500. Hooker & Slosson and J. G. Kirk & Co. were brokers.

The same firm also has leased the 4th, 5th and 6th floors at 173 North Wells street from Edward Casey. J. G. Kirk & Co. represented the lessee.

NIXON NAMES MEN TO DISCUSS BOARD MERGER

President George F. Nixon of the Chicago Real Estate board has named the following committee to confer with a similar group from the Cook County Real Estate board to consider the question of merging the two organizations: Edward S. Judd, Adolph F. Kramer, Albert W. Swayne, James J. Carroll, and Hyde W. Perce.

Tour d'Argent De Luxe Cafe for Boul Mich

La Tour d'Argent is the attractive name to be given a restaurant to be opened on the first floor of the Palmolive Tower when that structure, now under construction at Michigan and Walton, is completed. And what is of interest to epicureans here is a flat statement by those interested in the new café that it will be the finest in the city; that it may be comparable only to some of the eating establishments of Paris, where they do know how to fix up a dinner.

At any rate, this restaurant is being named for one of the best known Parisian cafés, La Tour d'Argent, which old Prof. Watzis says means the Silver Tower.

Learns About Food.

The story is that one of our most prominent local restaurateurs while delving about Paris ran across several cafés in which he learned something about food. So, when he set back for the home town he decided he'd equal if not better Paris in the matter of a restaurant here.

John Holabird and John Root of Holabird & Root, architects for Palmolive Tower, are now in Paris, where they are gathering ideas for the interior, which it is said will be modernistic in appointments and design.

Twenty Year Lease.

La Tour d'Argent will have a frontage of thirty-feet on the Boul Mich south of and adjoining the main entrance to the building. It will extend back 230 feet. Some 4,000 square feet will be used in the basement for kitchen purposes.

We are now about to mention some figures in connection with the signing of the lease, which must not be confused with "l'additions," as they call the bills which come at the end of the repast in Gay Paree. The lease terms provide that the lessees must spend not less than $150,000 in fitting up the premises. And the lease is for twenty years at a term rental of $741,900.

LET CONTRACT ON VOPICKA PROJECT AT STATE-11TH

Contracts have been let for the construction of a building at the southeast corner of State and Eleventh streets, adjoining the new central police station. This department told about this project in detail on March 11. The structure is being erected by the Chicago State company, of which Charles J. Vopicka is president. It will rise five stories but will have foundations capable of carrying eight or nine floors in addition later.

There will be two stores on the ground floor, sixteen offices on upper floors and garage space for 350 automobiles. Fox & Fox are the architects.

It is stated the investment will be $560,000. Melvin R. Cone of the Mid-Continent Mortgage company represented Mr. Vopicka in negotiating through the office of William C. Heinemann & Co. a $270,000 bond issue for ten years at six per cent.

BUYS 20 ACRE TRACT ON SOUTH SIDE; TO BUILD

The five blocks bounded by 91st, 92d, Jeffery, and Luella, with the exception of five lots, comprising approximately twenty acres of land, have been purchased by the Warner C. Miller Realty company from Erhardt and Roseen for a reported $65,000. Mr. Miller plans a bungalow building program for the west front on Chappel avenue, between 91st and 92d, and has started work on two. The first unit of his program calls for ten bungalows. They will be of brick with five rooms and sleeping porch.

The tract just purchased contains 150 twenty-five foot lots, but Mr. Miller is selling them in thirty-foot parcels. The property has been placed in trust with the Union Bank of Chicago by the new owner. Lazarus Krinsley was attorney.

CLOTHIERS BUY SOUTH MARKET STREET BUILDING

Adolph and Jacob Gibberman, clothing manufacturers, purchased from David Schetnitz the leasehold estate and building at 213-37 South Market street for an indicated $445,000. The land 124½x112 feet, owned by the Bass estate, is improved with a seven story mercantile building under lease to a number of tenants. Alfred Miltenberg & Co. are agents for the building.

Chain Grocery Firm Rents Seven More Chicago Shops

Seven more leases made by the Loblow Groceries are reported by Harry A. Nichols. The locations and lessors are; 6443 South Halsted, Henry Cohlen and Isadore Berkson; 4026 West Roosevelt road, Sol Graff; 5518 South Ashland, John Marlas; 1960 Lawrence avenue, Lawrence Cuneo and Rose Haimowitz; 7415 West Madison, Rudolf Burkart; 5036 West Madison, C. Anderson; 5935 Irving Park boulevard, Louis Velesares.

Julia King Leases Space on Wabash for Candy Shop

Julia King has leased space at 129 South Wabash between the Richardson and Revell stores, for another tea room and candy shop. The term is ten years and five months with a total rental reported to be $250,000. Gerard E. Hausen & Co. and W. H. Ames of L. M. Willis & Co. were brokers.

WORLD'S FIRST SKYSCRAPER TO BE SCRAPPED

'No. 1 La Salle St.' to Cost $8,000,000.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago, "city of towers," is to have another impressive addition to its skyline—a forty-seven story $8,000,000 structure at the northeast corner of La Salle and Madison, replacing the historic old record breaker of its day, the fourteen story Tacoma building. Following the vogue of using numbers for names, a Gold Coast method of nomenclature now spreading to the loop, this gigantic structure will be christened the "No. 1 La Salle street building."

The plans for "No. 1" were announced yesterday in connection with a ninety-nine year lease on the site from the University of Chicago to the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee for an undisclosed syndicate. The term rental is reported as $29,102,047.

This would make the average annual rental $293,960, which capitalized on a 5 per cent basis gives a valuation for the corner of $5,879,201. Doing a little more work with the pencil one finds this gives a square foot value of $328.87 for the 17,877 square feet, and establishes a front foot value of $58,209 on Madison and $33,215 on La Salle.

Work to Start Next May.

K. M. Vitzthum & Co., Chicago architects, designed the building and announce that work will start May 1, 1929. The John Griffiths & Sons company has been named general contractor. Financing of the project will be handled by A. M. Krensky & Bros. The Farnham-Kuhn company was broker and George O. Fairweather represented the University of Chicago. Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale & Templeton, and Taylor, Miller, Busch & Boyden were attorneys.

Now apparently having told an impatient world who all the gentlemen connected with the deal are, so far as we could learn up to the minute of going to press, with the exception of the most important of all, who really comprises the syndicate which is to own the building, we'll tell about the structure itself. Aside from the beauty of its architecture, for which we believe Mr. Vitzthum and his partner, John J. Burns deserve a word of praise, its height is perhaps the most outstanding feature.

If we talk in terms of actual feet "No. 1 La Salle Street" won't be the tallest in town. It'll be 550 feet nearer the sky than the Madison and La Salle sidewalks are. The Pittsfield building's upmost tip is 557 feet, but this is attained by counting in the smokestack, which, it's true, is made a part of the architectural design. The tip of the cross on the Methodist temple is 556 feet. But perhaps Mr. Vitzthum will design some kind of a gargoyle or thingamagig just eight feet tall and then the owners honestly can call "No. 1" the highest in the city, for it'll then be one foot higher than the Pittsfield, two feet over the temple, and making a somewhat distant comparison, three feet taller than the Washington mounment.

Lower Floors to be Cooled.

But figuring it by actual rentable floors, No. 1 will be Chicago's No. 1 in height for it'll have forty-seven stories. And the first eight of these floors will be artificially ventilated so that even with the weather man doing his dirtiest in dog-day weather, it won't be necessary to open the windows. The ventilating system will pump in chilled air during the warm months and hot air during the cold season.

The owners believe that this method will do considerably to reduce the ear strain caused by wailing taxicab brakes and the miscellaneous street uproar which supposedly blends into a soothing medley of sounds by the time it reaches the ninth floor. Anyway, from the ninth to the 47th, office tenants will have to yank up the windows in August if they get too warm. This ventilation of office building space, by the way, is said to be the first time it has been done on such a large scale in this city.

Designed for Bank Purposes.

The entire 2d, 3d, 4th, and 5th floors are designed to meet the needs of a large financial institution. An imposing entrance four stories high on La Salle street will lead to it. The main entrance to the office section also will be on La Salle, at the north end of the building.

The first floor will be of polished granite on La Salle and Madison. The street fronts, with, we hope, generous returns on the alleys, will be of terra cotta or stone. All sides of the setback portions of the building will be of the same material.

The building will have twelve elevators, arranged so tenants can reach the 47th floor without changing cars. The banking floors will be served by private lifts.

The Tacoma building, now on the site, was erected in 1887, and for years architects have battled with typewriter, pencil, and printing press over the question of whether or not this was the first steel skeleton building in the world. It was designed by Holabird & Roche. Three other old structures, the Watson, the Williams and the Morris Plan Bank building, will make way for No. 1.

BUILDING HERE IS FORGING UPWARD, FIGURES SHOW

Big Projects Gain, Home Construction Drops.

BY THOMAS WREN.

CHARLES M. BAULSEN.

Chicago's building program for this year is gradually forging up to the 1927 level of construction activities, according to Charles M. Paulsen, president of the Illinois Federation corporation. Building permits issued by the city's building department for the seven months of this year amounted in valuation to $208,988,283. This figure falls short by $13,930,717 of the permits issued in the first seven months of 1927.

Jan.	21,873,100	27,091,400
Feb.	34,977,900	23,256,300
March	47,759,500	35,434,200
April	42,484,200	29,345,300
May	27,806,500	40,067,300
June	27,939,850	25,705,550
July	20,437,950	28,088,233
	222,919,000	208,988,283

The beginning of the last half of the year found building activities throughout the country about on a par with those of a year ago. Reports made to S. W. Straus & Co. from 541 principal cities and towns of the country located in forty-eight states showed building permits and plans filed for the half year of $2,065,202,908, compared with $2,103,324,264, a loss of slightly less than 2 per cent.

To Increase Capital.

Officials of the Illinois Federation corporation have filed application with Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson for permission to increase the company's capitalization from $1,100,000 to $2,200,000. The corporation was organized late in 1925 by officers of Chicago building trades. Its purpose was to finance home building for wage earners in the metropolitan area of the city on a 100 per cent trade union basis. It was launched with a $250,000 capitalization. Approximately 3,500 Chicago trade unionists now own stock in the company.

"Chicago builders are optimistic that their 1928 construction business will probably slightly exceed that of last year," says Mayne Stanton, business manager of the Associated Builders of Chicago.

Home Building Drops.

"This year's program consists largely of big projects. From reports received it appears there has been a considerable let-up in home building. The housing problem is about solved. Tranquility between the building trades and employers prevails; jurisdictional squabbles between the trades are conspicuous by their absence. Present building activities should keep resident building mechanics and laborers in steady employment until construction begins on the Chicago world's fair in a year or so."

National Athletic Club Leases Larger Quarters

Louis Doussang's National Athletic club has leased the entire third floor of the Madison-La Salle building, 173 West Madison, together with the third and fourth floors of the annex, for ten years, moving there from 116 West Madison. Hooker and Slosson and Clayton C. Pickett were brokers.

Walgreen Leases 53d and Lake Park Avenue Corner

The Walgreen company has leased for ninety-nine years the northwest corner of 53d and Lake Park avenue, improved with the five story Holland hotel building, from Abraham J. Franks. Gus C. Manos was broker.

Protective Real Estate Board to Visit Milwaukee

The Protective Real Estate board of Cook county plans a trip to Milwaukee on the Christopher Columbus next Wednesday, Aug. 8, leaving at 9:45 a. m., according to John B. Bernard, secretary.

DOWNTOWN HOME OF DE PAUL UNIVERSITY READY FOR TENANCY

Announcement is made that the De Paul university building, recently completed at 64 East Lake street, just off Michigan avenue, is now ready for occupancy. This structure, eighteen stories high and costing in the neighborhood of $3,000,000, is one of a group recently erected in the northeastern section of the city's loop district. The top five floors of the edifice will be occupied exclusively for the classrooms of De Paul's downtown school. Features include a promenade and recreation and club rooms for both men and women students. The balance is being leased for general offices. The K. M. Vitzthum company is the architect, and the McClellan Construction company had the general contract.

SHIVELY BUILDS 231 RESIDENCES AT VILLA PARK

Homes Being Put Up in 50 Different Designs.

Villa Park is the scene of an important home building project. N. O. Shively & Co. announce that they are starting work this week on the second unit of their residence program in Shively Manor, a section of Villa Park.

This unit consists of 141 homes. The first unit, started several months ago, now has fifty-four homes either finished or under way, with plans for an additional thirty-six to be started at once. The entire investment for both projects will be in the neighborhood of $1,701,800, it is stated. There will be 231 homes in all.

The residences, while having similar floor plans, will be of fifty different designs, mostly of English or Spanish inspiration. B. J. Bruns is architect. There will be five rooms in each house downstairs, with unfinished attics that will be capable of being divided into three rooms should the owners elect.

Each residence will be of face brick on all sides. The houses will be heated by hot water, and will be equipped with electrical refrigeration and other modern conveniences. The average size is 27x50 feet.

A feature of the development is an arrangement whereby playgrounds 540 feet long and 114 feet wide are located in the center of each block. A portion of the playgrounds will be a park laid out with trees and shrubbery, a part will be set aside for sand piles and playing apparatus for the tiny tots, while the balance of the ground may be used for football and baseball by the older children.

Both developments are located in south Villa Park, fronting on Madison street. Twenty-five residences of the first unit have already been sold.

Ultimately there will be a four story tower adjoining the addition and a three story wing on the other side of the tower. The exterior of the addition is to be of face brick on all sides with the exception of the east wall, to which the tower will be adjoined later.

When completed the plant will have a frontage of 125 feet. The sprinkler tower is to be hidden in the tower. Construction will be of reinforced concrete. The Elliott company manufactures varnish, enamel, and paint specialties.

BUYS KENWOOD RESIDENCE.

Katherine Ducker has purchased from Katherine W. Wright the three story brick and stone residence at 1353 East 50th street for a reported $12,500. Paul V. Hoecher of Swan & Lorish was broker.

in new form from tough cane fibre that gives permanent beauty to plastered walls

SOMETHING NEW! Celotex Lath, a plaster base that stops extreme heat, cold and dampness.

That reduces heat leakage and lowers fuel bills.

That keeps plastered walls smooth and unbroken.

That gives you a quieter, more restful atmosphere wherever you live or work.

In summer, Celotex Lath keeps your home cool and enjoyable. During winter it shuts out freezing cold. And at all times of the year it protects you from penetrating dampness.

Moreover Celotex Lath cuts down your winter fuel bill by keeping heat where you want it—inside walls and ceilings.

Celotex Lath provides these remarkable advantages because it is made from long tough fibres of cane which contain millions of tiny sealed air cells—just what is needed for efficient insulation!

This new lath is 18 inches wide and 48 inches long—convenient to handle and ideal for lining attics, closets and other restricted areas.

An outstanding feature of Celotex Lath is its beveled ship-lap edge. The bevel insures extra plaster at the joints, a protection against cracking. The ship-lap joints bring lath edges together, giving continuous surface that eliminates open joints, the cause of disfiguring lath marks.

These construction features enable you to decorate plastered surfaces with permanent effect.

Celotex already is well known everywhere, due to the widespread use of Celotex Standard Building Board for sheathing; for lining basements, garages, attics, roofs and for many other purposes.

Think what Celotex offers you in building economy, fuel saving, quieter rooms, more healthful homes and greater living comfort throughout the year!

All reliable lumber dealers can supply Celotex Building Board and Celotex Lath. Progressive builders and contractors have used these products in more than 250,000 homes.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

TWO RESIDENCES LIKE IN PLAN BUT UNLIKE IN DESIGN

Half Yankee, Half English, or Spanish Types.

BY LOUISE BARGELT

(Two five room houses with similar floor plan designed by J. T. Hetherington, architect, 925 First National Bank building, Chicago.)

Two distinctly original and interesting exteriors of an ever popular floor plan for the five room bungalow are again offered today. Distinction of line and a fine regard for detail regardless of the size and cost of the dwellings, lift them out of the ordinary. And yet the plan of the five rooms, compact and practical, makes it possible to build them at almost minimum cost.

One exterior suggested is that of the Spanish type, with roof of red cement tile and stucco walls. The other exterior is semi-English and American in style with a choice of walls including brick, stucco, frame or hollow tile. The roof may be of stained shingles, asbestos shingles or asphalt shingles. Slate would be appropriate if cost were not too closely regarded; though, incidentally, it may be mentioned that there are certain grades of slate on the market, serviceable and attractive, which are much more reasonable in price than is generally known.

Foundation plantings are briefly suggested in the delicately rendered perspective. Most houseowners recognize the importance of plantings of this sort; indeed one frequently sees a tendency to overdo this type of planting.

In small homes like these the entrance should be emphasized with plantings, and the hard house corners, which are apt to present a hard masonry line, may be softened by the proper choice of shrubs and foliage.

In both instances the doorways harmonize with the style of the house. No doorway, however, correctly drawn and built but loses much of its beauty if not in keeping with the house type.

In these floor plans the living room runs across the entire front of the house. At the extreme front end there is an oblong area with windows on three sides; space pleasingly suggestive of a possible sunroom. Plaster walls would be appropriate for the living room and dining room; painted and enameled walls for the kitchen and bath, and papered or plastered walls for the bedrooms.

Observe the light and ventilation provided in the kitchen. This room could be made, with proper finishing and furnishings, as charming and attractive as any room in the house. Inlaid linoleum could cover the floor, with porcelain sink, table, and ice box containing natural or mechanical refrigeration and stove and cabinet all close enough to make work easy and steps as few as possible.

There are several factors which contribute vitally to the interest of these homes.

One is the fact that while they are fundamentally extremely reasonable in cost, they are in no wise commonplace as to their exterior renderings. One sees many a larger and more ostentatious home, presenting no more intrinsic beauty of line or basic merit of design.

Another is the many exterior possibilities which one floor plan can offer. Whether one wishes a five room home in English, American, Spanish, or Italian style, expense does not need to be added by any change of the simple layout of the rooms. Rather, the exterior is deftly changed and a cozy home results, offering charm at low cost and compactness in a graceful frame.

New Shower Doors of Brass with One Large Glass Panel

Interesting new shower doors are on the market. They are of hollow brass construction, with one large glass panel. The finish is in nickle plate or white enamel, and models may be chosen with or without a ventilating grille at the top.

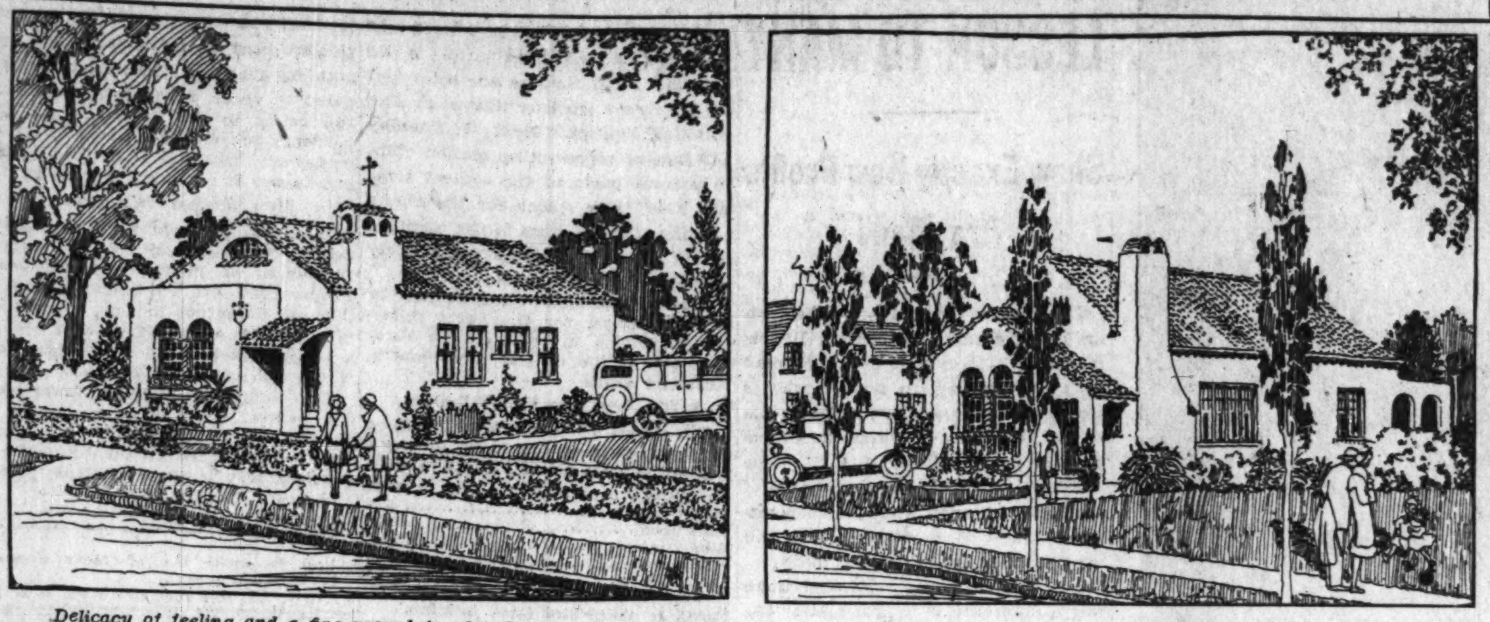
NATION IS SPENDING MORE FOR BUSINESS AND HOME BUILDING

This year's building program is setting a new mark for average outlay in proportion to population, it is disclosed by an examination just made by the research department of Greenebaum Sons Investment company of the most recent data.

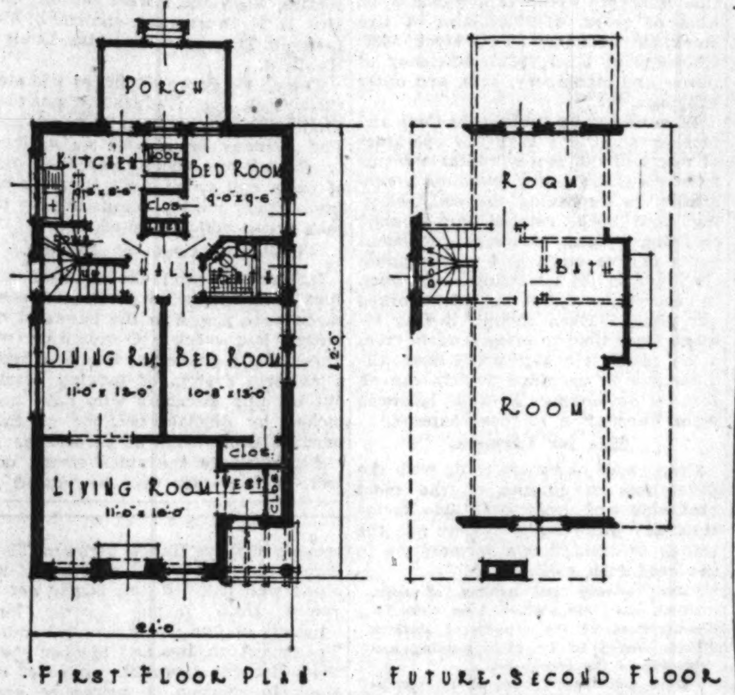
Approximately $2 more has been expended during the first six months of the year for each man, woman and child in the country than ever before in the history of the construction industry. The average outlay per person for 1928 is found to be $32. This includes expenditures for all types of structures. Last year during the corresponding period $30 was spent. In 1926 the per capita average was $29 and in 1925 it was $26.

A certain increase in building outlay each year is normally looked for to keep pace with the growth of population, it is pointed out. That expenditures this year show a material increase over and above that called for by population increase is taken to indicate that the American people as a whole are in a financial position enabling them to spend more freely than ever before to provide for their home and business building needs.

A CURE FOR SHOE BOX ARCHITECTURE



Delicacy of feeling and a fine regard for detail importance lift these two exteriors out of the realm of the ordinary. The floor plan is typically a stock one, the same for both bungalows, and yet they are individual, appealing homes, infinitely removed from that dreary sameness and monotony which marks the shoe box type of dwelling. Economical to build, compact in the extreme, one is in the English style, the other in the Spanish.—Architect J. T. Hetherington, 925 First National Bank building, Chicago.



NEW DOOR NOW ON MARKET SAID TO BE SOUND PROOF

Also Has Many Other Advantages.

Domestic architecture, as well as other types, has a real need for such a feature as the sound proof door; in kitchens for the suppression of odors and noises, for sun porches, and sleeping porches, for bathrooms and sick rooms and bedrooms.

Long before this, much more effort would doubtless have been expended on sound proofing walls, if it were not for the fact that the ordinary door would promptly nullify the attempt. Now, however, that the sound proof door is on the market, the specifying of sound proof walls in all kinds of domestic architecture will be much more frequent.

While it is not claimed that this door is absolutely sound proof, it is relatively so. It is composed really of two doors plus an interposed deadening quilt and mechanism. All mechanism is free from springs and the need for oiling.

Has Many Virtues.

It is also interesting to observe that sound proofness is but one of the virtues of this door. It is furthermore odor proof, light proof, weather proof and air tight—all because it hermetically seals the room every time it is closed.

The door may be in any kind of wood, or in any style of flush or sunken panels. The European type of handle is used, a rotating lever instead of a knob.

Its function in domestic architecture is as definite as in other kinds of buildings. For the library or the nursery or for the bathroom when one wishes a turkish bath perhaps in an air tight room free from drafts; on sleeping porches too, that the cold air may be kept from chilling the house and wasting its heat. It is much better than any weather strip, for it is in effect and actuality four felt weather strips of generous size applied with forcible pressure.

May Be Fire Resisting.

If one wishes a fire resisting door, a sheet of asbestos board is interposed on each side of the deadening quilt.

Price of these doors varies with the kind of wood used, size of panels, number of doors wanted and whether or not a fire resisting door is ordered. Doors are shipped complete with special stops and all hardwear excepting the butts.

HERE'S A GARAGE DOOR THAT OPENS INSIDE BUILDING

One practical type of garage door now manufactured is that which slides open inside the building.

In this way the doors are not exposed to the elements—ice, snow, rain or sleet. No danger either of their slamming shut against the car as it leaves the garage in case the wind is heavy. Nor, it is claimed, do they shrink or sag.

As with houses, so with garages—the doors which protect them are vitally important features of their construction.

70 HOMES FINANCED DURING YEAR FOR ELECTRICAL WORKERS

Employés at the Western Electric company's Hawthorne works will receive $410,000 this month when this sum, representing maturity of the eighth series of shares in the Hawthorne Club Savings, Building and Loan association is paid to the workers at the southwest side plant. This figure represents the largest amount ever paid out at any one time by the association, and is about three times as great as the returns from any previous series.

The next largest single payment on record was that made last September at the Western Electric plant, when $140,000 was paid to subscribers holding matured shares. Altogether, during the last year, the Hawthorne association has paid out more than $700,000 on matured stock. According to Louis E. Mulac, secretary of the association, during the last twelve months' period the telephone workers have subscribed for about 22,000 additional shares of stock, representing a matured value of $2,200,000. Seventy homes were financed by the association for employés at the local plant during the last year.

Since its incorporation Nov. 10,1920, the Hawthorne association has steadily and rapidly increased in activity and membership, until today it ranks as the largest industrial building and loan organization in the country. It began with about 20 members, and financed 18 homes the first year. Its assets approximated $129,000. At the present time the assets of the association total $2,500,000, and its membership exceeds 3,300. The association operates on a serial plan, in which shares are issued every three months, or four times a year. The officers and directors of the Western Electric association are: E. A. Hause, president; Frank Novak, vice president; Louis E. Mulac, secretary, and J. P. Krivanek, treasurer; and directors: C. O. Hahn, W. M. Johnson, E. B. Torland, C. B. Johnson, and D. C. Brady.

MILK SERVICE CABINETS MAKE BID FOR FAVOR

Milk service cabinets of steel and finished with enamel have made their bow for domestic favor. They come ready for installation, their interior lined with cork, chemically treated with creosote to prevent odors and bacteria to accumulate.

The cork surface is covered with a lacquer coat to kill the creosote odor and prevent any possible contamination of the milk.

Combination Hidden Wall Safe and Cabinet for House

Like the idea of a hidden cabinet for your valuables? The builder of a home may now install an invisible cabinet, which is also an invisible wall safe. Built into the wall, it has specially designed locks and can be completely hidden from view.

SOME POINTERS FOR GUIDANCE OF THOSE ERECTING RESIDENCE

In frame houses, as a precaution against shrinkage, make sure that your lumber is well seasoned and that your interior bearing partitions are correctly arranged.

Employ a reliable heating contractor in the installation of your heating plant, as you will save by so doing in maintenance money.

Automatic thermostatic control is a comfort and a fuel economy.

Copper gutters and downspouts mean longer roof life and fewer repairs.

Oils are used for mixing paints. For interiors, raw linseed oil is preferable, and for exterior work boiled linseed oil is best.

Don't forget to include "more than enough" base outlets for lamps and modern electrical conveniences.

Permanence of coloring in wall paper depends on its quality.

ALL STEEL HOUSE IS CALLED SAFE FROM LIGHTNING

Those of us who are instinctively—and unhappily — apprehensive in a thunderstorm will be interested to know of the claims which are being made for the lightning proof qualities of the all steel house.

Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, late electrical wizard, once said: "I can think of just three places where you will be absolutely safe in a thunderstorm. One is an underground chamber, another is a space entirely surrounded with metal network, and the last and only one of which you are likely to be able to take advantage is a steel frame building. This is an excellent conductor. It tends to relieve by "silent discharges" the electric strain always existing between earth and sky during a thunderstorm. Sometimes they are struck but the people inside never know it. The lightning is instantaneously carried to the ground and dissipated.

USE SHEET STEEL TO GET EFFECT OF CERAMIC TILE

BY HOMER GRANT.

Sheet steel has now been introduced into the manufacture of walls for bathrooms, kitchens, and laundries. The effect is that of a tiled wall and yet no real ceramic tile has been used. Merely a tile of porcelain finished sheet steel, which can be used, it is claimed, in any climate, and it costs considerably less than ceramic tile.

Oblong units containing the same frontal dimensions as ceramic tile are formed from the pressed sheet steel, and there are other sizes to fit in with standard requirements. There are also units as cove base and cap molding.

A slab of composition material, cement covered and insulated, is used as a base for the tile. The tiles, when pressed into the grooves of the slab, absorb sufficient cement and, after rubbing smooth in the joints, furnishes the pointing up required for the finished wall.

One can choose this tile in various colors to harmonize with popular decorative schemes. Black and white, of course; ivory, jade, buff, and pastel gray are a few of the possible shades.

It is claimed that the services of a skilled tile setter are not necessary, as any capable contractor can install this tile. Its low cost is another decided asset.

Home owners considering the remodeling and decorating of bathroom and kitchen walls will be interested to know that this porcelain enameled steel tile may be applied directly over existing walls.

MAHOGANY WOOD OF PHILIPPINES IS GOOD FOR DOORS

Doors of Philippine mahogany are now manufactured—doors which possess the admitted beauty and fineness of mahogany at moderate prices.

These doors come in both the light red and the dark red. If desired, the light red may be given a brown or a walnut finish as well as mahogany, while the dark red may be given a brown finish or left in the original deep shade.

The home owner may choose for his mahogany door one which has the plain grain or one with quarter sawed panels, stiles and rails which reveal the full charm of the narrow grain characteristics of this wood.

Philippine mahogany has come into many other uses besides that of doors recently.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To Aug. 5, 1898; 30 Years Ago Today

Willis & Frankenstein have rented to the wholesale clothing firm of H. Cohn & Son the building at 156-58 Market street for a term of three years at a rental of $20,000.

W. B. FRANKENSTEIN.

Leander J. McCormick has for a consideration of $25,000 released the Union Elevated Loop from its agreement to maintain the rental of the Atlas block at the northwest corner of Randolph street and Wabash avenue at $44,180 a year. J. W. Doane formerly owned the Atlas and Grocers blocks at the northwest corner of Randolph and Wabash and the of Wabash and Lake, respectively. Mr. Doane consented to the construction of the loop on Wabash and Lake street in consideration of the company guaranteeing that for a period of thirty years from Oct. 1, 1897, the rentals of the Atlas building should not fall below $44,100 a year. The agreement for the Grocers block was for the same period and the railroad company agreed to make up all deficiencies to $30,290. Mr. Doane sold the Atlas block to Mr. McCormick some time ago.

To Aug. 5, 1908; 20 Years Ago Today

Bauer & Black, manufacturers of surgical dressings, etc., acquired a tract of 200x108 feet at the northwest corner of 25th street and Dearborn, upon which they will erect a large addition to their plant at Armour avenue and 25th street. It will be four stories high, will cover the entire lot, and will cost about $75,000. Martin Roche of Holabird & Roche, architects, who had previously taken title, conveyed it for a nominal consideration to the firm.

JOHN T. CONNERY. [Edgewater Beach Studio.]

The Saddle and Cycle club bought from John J. Corbett and John T. Connery 105¼ feet of frontage in Sheridan road, north of and adjoining the club's grounds, for $26,812. The interesting part of the transaction is that it gives the club control of the entire block between Foster and Berwyn avenues, fronting on Sheridan road. Cochran & McCleur represented the sellers and Winston & Co. acted for the club.

To Aug. 5, 1898; 10 Years Ago Today

JAMES B. WALLER.

James B. Waller bought from Marion R. Stephens the property at the southeast corner of Astor and Schiller streets. The land is improved with a three story brick residence and the lot is 83½ x 25 feet. While a nominal consideration is named, the deed showed a consideration of $30,000 according to the revenue stamps. Mr. Waller owns valuable vacant adjoining on the east and is said to have been largely influenced in the purchase by a desire to protect his property.

NEW JAILS HERE TO BE WITHOUT WINDOW BARS

Novel Device Avoids Old Time Prison Effect.

Looking from out towards in when one is casting his eyes on the new central police station at State and 11th or on the new county jail the observer might think he was glancing at a cheerful office building instead of a dismal "brig." For the old time steel window bars, which in the past have assured the proper prison effect, will be absent and in their place will be "detention windows," devised by a Philadelphia firm.

These windows, constructed of heavy steel and divided into small openings 9 by 5½ inches, will not, however, materially alter the aspect of those looking from in towards out. The idea of these windows is to keep those in from being able to join those out in enjoying the exterior design of the buildings, unmarred as they are by bars.

Specially Constructed.

The detention windows, which were specially constructed by the Philadelphia concern, have been approved by City Architect Argyle E. Robinson as giving complete and adequate protection. The cells on each floor are surrounded by a corridor and the outer wall of the building is provided with these windows.

The building, which will house Chicago's police headquarters, corresponds to the Tombs in New York City and the excellent new police headquarters in Detroit. It will contain the No. 1 and 1-A and South Clark Street district police offices, the Chicago detective bureau, two Domestic Relation courtrooms, the Traffic, Morals, and Boys' courts, as well as the general police headquarters. The architects were Graham, Anderson, Probst & White.

An even wider use of the "windows without bars" occurs in the four large units of the Cook county jail. The entire window surface of the four buildings have been fitted with "detention windows." Not a bar is seen on the exteriors of the jails.

Ninety Per Cent Ventilation.

The eastern company first manufactured the "detention window," which is designed to give 90 per cent ventilation (each row of panes opening, except the bottom row), for these two jobs. It is now marketing them. A feature is that the 90 per cent ventilation scheme can easily be adapted to industrial uses.

The jail units, which have been pronounced among the "most efficient in the United States or Canada," are comprised of an administration building and four cell buildings, all within the prison walls, making it the largest county jail in the world. It will contain 1,400 cells. Ample light and ventilation is furnished each cell by the 1,527 detention windows which have been built into the heavy walls.

The impregnability of the prisoners' quarters is assured by gray enameled steel walls, floors, and ceilings. County Architect Eric E. Hall of Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliffe, was in active charge.

ALBERT W. SWAYNE.
[Moffett Photo.]

The second certificate of approval has just been given by the consultation bureau, recently established by the National Association of Real Estate Boards to pass upon the general soundness of coöperative apartment projects, to the Eddystone Homes Coöperative development. This development constitutes a huge building which Albert W. Swayne is erecting in units on Sheridan road, between Belmont and Melrose.

Work is now under way on the first unit, which is on Melrose, just west of Sheridan. This unit is to be twenty-two stories high, will contain eighty-four apartments and will cost about $2,000,000, it is stated. When the Eddystone is completed it's to be thirty-seven stories high and will have in the neighborhood of 300 apartments. Holabird & Root are architects. The site is that of the Chase apartments, across from the Belmont yacht harbor.

The first certificate given by the bureau was that to the Park Gables building erected by the Gubbins, McDonnell & Blietz organization.

PLANS 5 STORES AND 16 FLATS AT BELMONT-LUNA

Constantine Kocianis plans to improve the property at the southeast corner of Belmont and Luna, which he recently purchased for a reported $32,500, with a building to contain five stores and sixteen apartments. Thermon & Haffey were brokers in the purchase of the site.

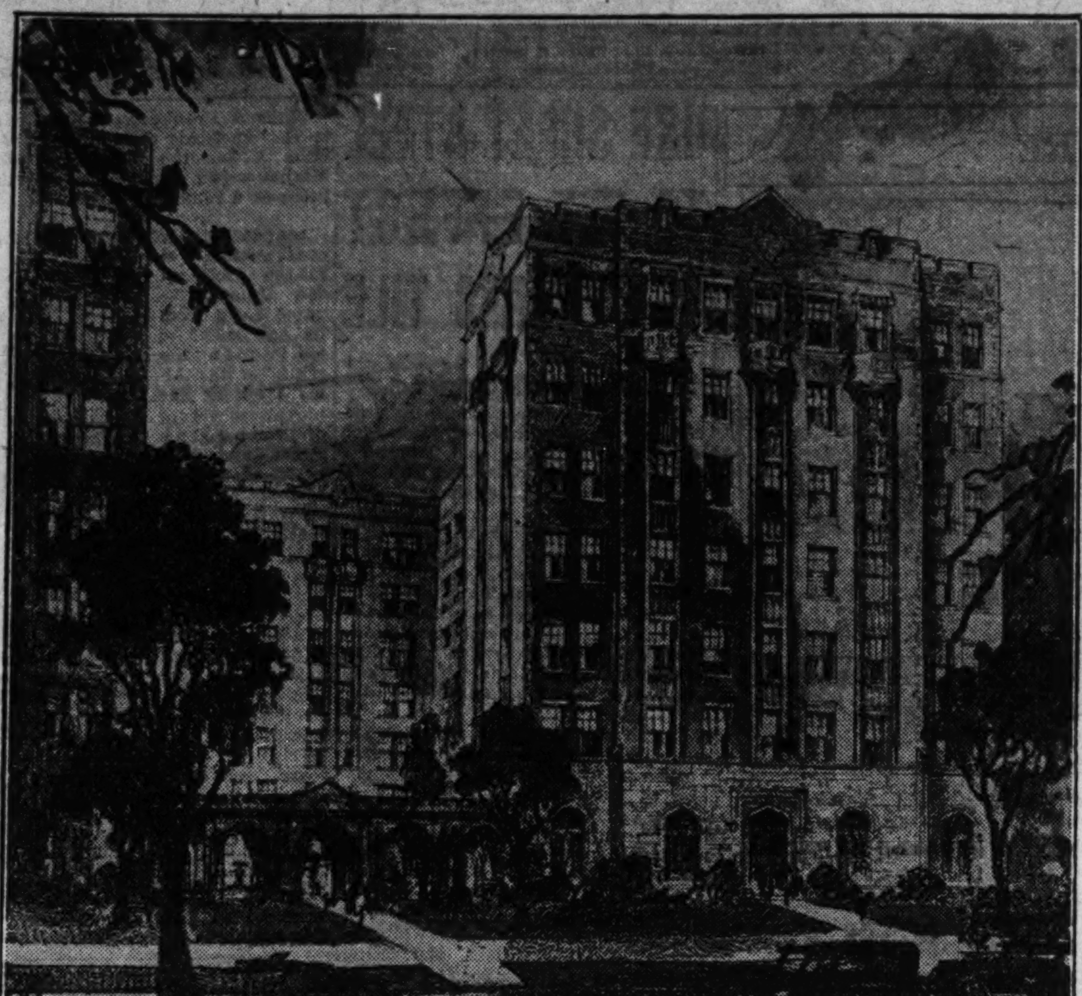
NEW WEST SIDE APARTMENTS



Picture of seven story apartment building which is being erected at 5509-17 Washington boulevard from plans by Leichenko & Esser. A feature of the enterprise is a landscaped court between the building now under way and a seven story apartment completed about six months ago at the southwest corner of Washington and Pine. Charles Morgan prepared this perspective.

WORK UNDER WAY ON 7 STORY FLAT ON WASHINGTON

Landscaped Court to Feature Project.

The Washington Plaza is the name of a new apartment building on which construction is now under way at 5509-17 Washington boulevard, just west of Pine. The structure is to contain eighty-four apartments of two, three and four rooms and it is stated will represent an investment of $700,000.

Designed by Leichenko & Esser, the structure, seven stories high, will be of modified English Gothic architecture. The base will be terra cotta laid in random ashlar. Above the second story the material will be face brick. There will be ornamental balconies of terra cotta at the seventh floor.

All the roof penthouses will be treated architecturally and will be done in face brick.

On the ground floor there will be two large lobbies, a restaurant to seat 250 people, two private dining rooms and a large kitchen. Electrical refrigeration will form a part of the equipment. Bathrooms will be finished in colored tile in conformity with the present mode.

An arcade will connect this structure with a seven story building completed about six months ago at the southwest corner of Washington and Pine. The court between the two buildings, about 100 feet wide, will be landscaped. Among the adornments will be a good sized fountain of terra cotta and tile. Walks and benches will be included, and a picturesque touch will be given through colored awnings.

The Washington Plaza is being erected on a lot fronting ninety feet with a depth of 137 feet. The owner is the Washington Plaza Building corporation. The Lind Construction company has the general contract and financing is by the National Republic Mortgage company.

FARM AND GARDEN

FARM FIGURES OFFER VALUED LESSON TO MANY

Show Exactly How Profits Are Made.

Two hundred sets of books kept on an equal number of central Illinois farms tell a story that should be read by every midwestern farmer who is trying to increase the profits on his farm. High spot intrepretations have been made recently by H. C. M. Case and M. L. Mosher who have charge of the books, showing what the coöperating farmers do to make profits and why the profitless farms lost money.

Out of eighty farms selected there was a difference of approximately $3,000 in the average net earnings for each of the forty most profitable and the forty least profitable. Individual factors credited with having made up this difference were: Crop yields, $735; kind of crops, $146; amount of live stock, $57; efficiency of live stock, $625; efficiency of labor, $215; efficiency of power and machinery, $269, and other expenses, $93.

In noting these differences Case and Mosher point out that the operators of many of the more profitable farms have spent from five years to a generation in improving the soil, selecting good seed, establishing a good cropping system, developing efficient herds of live stock and in equipping their farms for economical operation in accordance with a carefully worked out plan. "Even though it may require some time to bring a farm from a low profit to a high profit farm, the difference in earnings justify the effort in developing a well balanced farm," according to these experts.

Tips for Farmers.

Crop yields had more to do with the differences in income of the most profitable and least profitable farms than any other factor. Here are the things central Illinois farmers do to get good crop yields:

Use varieties and strains of corn, wheat, oats, etc., which long time investigations of the experiment stations have proved to be high yielding and adapted to the conditions.

Make germination tests of representative samples of all seeds.

Test for disease at least enough seed corn to plant a small field on which no corn has been grown for two or more years from which to select the next year's seed. Treat seed oats and wheat for smut each year.

[Case and Mosher throw in this comment: "Any tennant or land owner in difficult financial condition can do the above things almost as easily as the most prosperous land owner."]

Use, cropping system, which provides that each field is left in some deep rooted legume at least once in four or five years.

Use a definite plan for the efficient use of all available manure.

Use limestone and rock phosphate on soil types when investigations show that they can be used profitably.

Corn, the Big Crop.

Nearly forty-seven per cent of the tillable land of the forty most profitable farms was in corn. These experts in their report of the farmers' records say that it is doubtful if it is ever wise to have more than fifty per cent of the tillable land in corn or any other one crop, because of the uneven distribution of labor, difficulty of maintaining soil fertility, difficulty of controlling weeds and insects and the risk of storms or other uncontrollable conditions which may seriously injure one crop, but do little damage to others.

It is not always the farmer with big flocks and herds who makes the biggest net profits. Animals must be efficiently cared for and fed for the best net return. This is shown in the records of these Illinois farmers. Those farms having a small amount of live stock well handled had larger net incomes than farms having large amounts of live stock poorly handled. The report of Case and Mosher shows that with the favorable prices of live stock in relation to prices of grain during 1925 and 1926 the farms that fed most of their grain to well handled live stock had net incomes about $2,000 higher than farms having small amount of live stock poorly handled.

Methods Used.

The farm management authorities single out these few important things which the coöperating farmers do to get high returns for feed fed to their animals:

Use the best type of breeding stock.

Study market conditions carefully as a guide to the purchase and sale of cattle, hogs and sheep.

Follow proved plans for keeping live stocks healthy, such as the McLean county system of swine sanitation and the growing of chicks on clean ground.

Use rotated legume pastures which provide clean feeding grounds and the necessary protein and minerals in the rations.

Grow their own feeds, especially legumes, for the proper feeding of the live stock.

Purchase sufficient unmixed high protein products, such as tankage, oil meal and cottonseed meal to balance the home grown feeds.

Loafing men and idle horses eat up the profits on many farms. This situation is common on one crop farms but it can be done away with in the corn belt where a variety of crops is grown and where live stock can be kept and fed.

Labor Skillfully Utilized.

Man labor is made use of effectively on some of these Illinois farms in this way:

Adopt cropping systems which will tend to make use of labor evenly throughout the year.

Grow and feed such live stock as will make use of available labor throughout the year, especially to provide productive winter work.

Fit the cropping system to the available labor supply. For illustration, farmers having boys in high school and college coming home for summer vacations may safely increase the alfalfa and clover acreage above what could ordinarily be grown.

Plan ahead so as to have odd jobs and other work out of the way when the rush seasons for field work come.

Arrange the size, shape and location of the fields so as to save time in taking live stock to pasture and in doing field work.

All of these factors must be watched if a farm is to be run successfully. Case's and Mosher's studies of farmers' records indicate that the trouble common among many farmers is weaknesses in some parts of the farm business which often offsets the advantages gained at other points.

On Your Marks, Gardeners! Judging Starts Wednesday

Company is coming this week and Chicago's metropolitan area is all abloom. Final touches are being put on the flower gardens entered in THE TRIBUNE contest. Next Wednesday 243 judges, representing garden clubs in various parts of the contest zone, will start their search for the ninety and nine best gardens in the territory within a radius of approximately forty miles of Tribune Tower.

Six thousand dollars will be paid by this newspaper for the finest thirty-three gardens in each of the three divisions of the contest area—north, west and south.

$2,000 Prizes in Each Division.

The $2,000 in prizes which will be given in each of the three divisions will range from $25 to $500 as follows:

First prize	$500
Second prize	275
Third prize	200
Fourth prize	150
Fifth prize	100
Sixth prize	75
Seventh prize	50
Eighth to thirty-third prize, inclusive, each	25

Names of all the judges have been published in THE TRIBUNE, except the following committee, which is representing the Lake Forest Garden club: Mrs. R. E. Sturtevant, chairman; Mrs. Leverett Thompson, and Mrs. Louis S. Hubbard.

The entire group of judges will start their task on Wednesday morning. They will work in committees of three. The gardens have been so assigned to the various committees that most of them will finish their tours in one day. Every garden competing for the cash prizes will be visited.

Uniform System of Judging.

Instructions and the lists of gardens assigned, route maps, and score cards were placed in the hands of the judges last week. Competitors will have their gardens put to a test under a uniform system of judging carried out by club members who have been picked by officials because of their practical knowledge of gardening.

According to the rules of the contest, each garden will be judged on its merits as a whole—not on any particular plant or flower or other outstanding feature. The judges are prepared to check every detail and give full credit to the originality of the gardener regardless of the amount of money and material or of the plot he had to use in making the garden.

How Judges Will Score.

In scoring the judges will emphasize design, color harmony, balance, appropriateness of plants, and neatness. Proper allowance will be made for fading and immature blooms, because it is impossible in a contest that covers a large area to visit all the gardens when each one is at its best.

This unique midsummer flower garden contest gives home gardeners a chance to show their skill in pulling their gardens through the summer regardless of weather conditions, pests, and other handicaps.

STOCK MARKET RISES DESPITE CREDIT QUALMS

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net change.
25 railroads	119.08	118.86	118.98	+.14
25 industrials	259.10	258.19	258.67	+.41
50 stocks	189.09	188.52	188.82	+.27

New York, Aug. 4.—[Special.]—The stock market ended the week with another moderate advance in prices. Bull traders and pool operators again bid up their issues following the opening. Some profit taking appeared in the second hour, but it was readily absorbed and served only to reduce somewhat the earlier gains.

Final quotations disclosed a considerable list of issues with net gains ranging up to more than five points and a small list with net losses running to three points. The volume of trading was moderate, with total transactions of 968,[illegible] shares. Bull traders were encouraged by yesterday's firmness of the market in the face of an increase of $75,000,000 in brokers' loans. The weekly mercantile reviews also inspired cheerfulness by their confident tone.

Credit Policy Experimental.

While uneasiness over the credit situation still existed, it was frankly admitted by leading bankers that the action taken by the New York clearing house banks to restrict the lending of corporation funds in the call loan market is experimental. It will be some time before it can be known what degree of success the policy will attain.

Although the market today held few noteworthy features, the motor group afforded a good exhibition of group strength. Success of the Chrysler-Dodge merger was reflected further when Chrysler advanced 1⅞ points and Dodge preferred gained around 2 points. Pierce-Arrow preferred advanced 4¾ and the common moved up 1⅜ points. Gains of a point or two also were made by American Bosch Magneto, Indian Motorcycle, Motor Wheel, Packard, Stromberg, Studebaker, and Timken.

Industrial Issues Strong.

Most of the standard industrials moved narrowly, although Allied Chemical had an upturn of 3½ points. American Can, American Smelting, American Telephone, General Electric, General Motors, Pullman, Radio and United States Steel showed only mixed fractional net changes.

In the general industrial list, Mathieson Alkali was a feature with an advance of 5⅛ points. Union Carbide moved up 3¾ points and lesser gains were recorded by American Ice, American Linseed, Archer Daniels, Brunswick Dock, Childs, Commercial Credit, Commonwealth Power, Congoleum, Consolidated Gas, Coty, Drug, Inc., Freeport Texas, Gillette, Gimbel, Gold Dust, Goodyear, Interborough Rapid Transit, Kroger, Lima Locomotive, Ludlum Steel, Macy, Manhattan Electrical Supply, National Biscuit, National Distillers, South Perto Rican Sugar, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Victor Talking Machine, White Rock, and Wright Aero.

A Few Issues Decline.

A few issues ran counter to the upward trend. Atlantic Refining dropped back three points on profit taking and losses of a point or more were incurred by Advance Rumely, American Republic, Commercial Solvents, Container A, Liggett & Myers B, May Department Stores, National Radiator, National Supply, and Wilson preferred.

The railroad group was irregular. Wabash advanced 2¼ points and Texas and Pacific gained more than a point. But Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis was off 4 points and Canadian Pacific lost a point.

Urge New Freight Rates on Iron and Steel Articles

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—(AP)—A new schedule of freight rates to apply to the transportation of iron and steel articles in the northeastern quarter of the United States was recommended today by interstate commerce commission agents. The schedule suggested will be thrown open for criticism by shippers and railroads and will be further considered by the interstate commerce commission before any action is taken.

The commission was advised to revise steel rates in eastern territory on the basis of a mileage scale. The scale suggested would impose a charge of six cents per hundred pounds for shipments of steel articles over distances of five miles, the charge rising to 15½ cents per hundred for distances of 100 miles, to 35 cents for distances of 500 miles, and to 56 cents for distances of 1,200 miles, proportionate amounts being prescribed for intermediate points.

Indiana Limestone Co. Sets Record for New Business

The Indiana Limestone company booked more new business last month than in any other month in its history, Frank S. Whiting, treasurer, stated yesterday. Since the company began business on June 1, 1926, its mills have shipped slightly less than 40,000 cars of limestone. In the same period, plant improvements have been made, exceeding $800,000 in value. The company has charged off, for depletion and depreciation, a total of almost $2,000,000, and has reduced its outstanding funded debt by $800,000. The cut stone department has on hand unfilled orders to keep the mills busy at normal capacity for eight months.

Kimberly Clark Co. Shifts to Delaware Corporation

Neenah, Wis., Aug. 4.—A certificate of dissolution of the Kimberly Clark company has been filed with the register of deeds, completing formal action in changing the name of the company to that of the Kimberly Clark corporation, incorporated under the laws of Delaware. The resolution for dissolution of the Kimberly Clark company, a Wisconsin firm, was voted unanimously by the stockholders at a recent meeting. An indenture providing for the issuance of $[illegible]0,000,000 of first mortgage gold bonds by the Kimberly Clark corporation to the First Wisconsin Trust company and George B. Luhman, trustees, has also been filed.

New Financing Lags as Firms Clear Shelves

The new note and bond market has practically reached the stagnation point as a result of uncertainties of the credit situation and effort being made to reduce call money loans through new rules and higher charges for bank service.

A good sized amount of the total of brokers' loans are understood to be tied up in undigested bond issues which have been resting on the shelves of dealers throughout the summer. Consequently, dealers are pushing their salesmen to dispose of present securities on hand while nearly all commitments on new financing are being held in abeyance until such time as conditions warrant.

New Offerings Almost Vanish.

This is reflected in the total of new bond issues offered last week, which established a new low record in several years as well as being by far the smallest amount of any week this year. The total came to $3,360,000, and compares with $31,124,000 in the previous week, and $35,233,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

The offerings, by groups of last and the previous weeks, follow:

	Last week.	Prev. week.
State and municipal	$2,200,000	$5,528,000
Public utility	1,000,000	1,000,000
Industrial	160,000	5,000,000
Foreign	....	18,396,000
Investment corporations	....	1,200,000
Totals	$3,360,000	$31,124,000

The situation in the bond market is also reflected through the list of new state and municipal financing scheduled to be sold this week. Many governmental bodies have postponed the sale of securities while dealers buying those which are auctioned off are putting them away for future sale. The total to be sold this week comes to $8,891,850, compared with $13,583,000 last week, and $5,342,000 in the week ended July 28.

Three Issues Over a Million.

The only issues reaching the $1,000,000 mark are an issue of $2,000,000 Los Angeles 4½ per cent bonds, and $1,000,000 of Tipton, Tenn., 4½s. A $1,000,000 issue of Jackson county, Missouri, 4 per cent road and bridge bonds maturing serially from 1933 to 1943 will be offered tomorrow by a syndicate including the Illinois Merchants Trust company and the First Trust and Savings bank. The bonds will be priced to yield 4.20 per cent.

Only one public utility issue, a $1,000,000 offering of the American Utilities company, was made last week. Little more of this type of security is expected in the new bond market in the next week or so, although it is understood that one of the larger power pools of the country expects to bring out some short term financing totaling more than $25,000,000.

New stock financing for the consolidation of five large vending machine companies recently merged under the name of the Consolidated Automatic Merchandising corporation will appear in the market this week. F. J. Lisman & Co. will offer 200,000 shares of $3.50 cumulative convertible preferred no par stock and 200,000 shares of no par common stock voting trust certificates. The issues will be offered in units of one share of preferred and one share of common.

Foreign Capital Issues Find Best Market in U. S.

New York, Aug. 4.—The ascendancy of the United States as a market of foreign securities is reflected in the fact that foreign capital issues floated in this country in 1927 established a world record and were twice as great as the total of foreign securities absorbed by Great Britain, according to the national industrial conference board.

Foreign securities of every kind marketed in the United States during 1927 amounted to $1,376,000,000, against only $674,000,000 taken by Great Britain. For the first six months of 1928, the total amount of foreign securities underwritten in the United States was $1,053,000,000, while Great Britain absorbed only $293,000,000. The United States now holds claims on foreign governmental revenues and on property and on profits of foreign enterprise amounting to approximately $25,000,000,000.

Atchison Buys Up Rights of English in Orient Line

New York, Aug. 4.—Possibility of any substantial opposition from Kansas City, Mexico and Orient stockholders to the acquisition by Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe of the Orient road has been removed by Atchison's purchase of all the rights, titles, equities and interests of the English note holders' committee concerned in the acquisition proceedings.

Atchison reported to the interstate commerce commission today that it had become sole owner of the interest of English note holders' protective committee in the Orient. Application for authority to acquire the Orient is now pending before the commission. Approval of acquisition, it is understood, will mean the acquisition by Atchison of an extensive area of timber land and other land holdings of Orient's Mexican properties which are included in the purchase.

Says Pacific Northwest Gains Purchasing Power

New York, Aug. 4.—Farmers, banks, and business in the Pacific northwest will have more money to buy with and more money for investment this fall and winter than they have had since 1920, in the opinion of C. H. Farrington, chairman of the investors' syndicate of Minneapolis. Harvest of a 124,000,000 bushel cereal crop is already under way in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, which combined with excellent profits from the sheep and wool industry particularly, will complete liquidation of "frozen loans," which embarrassed hundreds of inland banks.

New Welland Ship Canal to Be Completed by 1930

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 4.—That the new Welland ship canal will be completed and ready for traffic in 1930 is evident from the progress of work on this great waterway as disclosed by a report of the expert in charge to the department of railway and canals. The canal will when completed cost a total of about $120,000,000, of which $94,000,000 was expended to last March.

YANKEE STOCK BUYING BENEFITS LONDON MARKET

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Strong American support chiefly in industrial specialties such as gramophones and tobacco, influenced a cheerful windup of a week particularly lacking in interest and outstanding features.

New York orders on the eve of the holidays sent Columbias, Victors, and H. M. V. gramophones jumping vigorously. Victors passing the century mark to the accompaniment of more big merger rumors and bonus distributions talk.

Other Influences Quiet.

Otherwise the stock exchange business of the week generally was inactive, showing evidences of holiday influences. The gilt edged market was kept under a cloud by the persistent gold withdrawals from the Bank of England, stocks being reduced by considerably over 2,250,000 sterling [about $10,800,000]. This week's efflux has been the heaviest outward movement for some time.

It is understood here that as a result of the monetary stringency in the United States American leaders have called in large sums from the continent, particularly Germany, and it is believed that the gold sent abroad from London has gone to replace the balances withdrawn by American banking institutions.

Considering the circumstances, the steady rise of the 5 per cent war loan is remarkable, with buying not always easy to satisfy, as the amount of stock in the market was not large.

The funding loan was affected by some New York selling, the price being about a point down to 89.5. A quite good feature was the active demand for the new City of Dublin loan, which has steadily advanced to 1 5-16 premium over the issue price of 96.

Chinese Bonds Benefited.

Foreign bonds were not disturbed by large business. The feature was that there was a much more cheerful tone in the Chinese section of the market, now looking generally more settled than for some time. Japanese and Mexicans lapsed into quietude, but the Peruvian corporation issues suddenly sprang into activity on rumors of debenture reorganization which would bring the common stock nearer to dividend possibilities.

British rail shares received more attention on evidences of economies furnished with interim dividends, combined with an agreement regarding wage cuts, but the early burst of optimism was not maintained.

Many New Issues.

Despite the fact that July usually is a close month for new issues, capital last month provided an exception to this rule. A number of new flotations, more than double that of 1927, and it has been eclipsed on only one previous occasion—March, 1920, a boom year. The total amount of issues exceeded £107,500,000 [about $516,000,000] last month as compared with £87,500,000 [about $420,000,000] in July last year.

Public loans accounted for about £47,500,000 [about $228,000,000], against £53,500,000 [about $255,600,000] a year ago. Industrial issues accounted for £32,900,000 [about $157,820,000], against £43,250,000 [about $207,600,000].

Wireless and cable stocks were little affected by the government's agreement to a merger scheme. The Marconi company issued a statement intimating that it was not intended to liquidate the existing cable and wireless companies. Shares of the merger company will be offered in exchange for those of the cable and wireless companies, but the undertakings themselves will continue to operate separately.

Art silks are quiet. Rubber is firm. Oil is inactive, and mining shares are steady. Newspapers improve.

Paris Market Improves.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Aug. 4.—After a quiet opening the Paris bourse accelerated and took on a comparatively cheerful tone by the middle of the week, considering the vacation season.

The month end settlement Tuesday passed off easily, as was expected, while the tone of the market was definitely firm throughout the week. Money was available in an abundant supply with the carryover rate fixed at 2⅞ per cent on the official floor and at 7 per cent on the curb.

After two calm days sharp improvement was noted Wednesday due to the technical condition of the market as revealed by the month end settlement. Short covering was advanced, trading comparatively brisk, and prices ending up on an optimistic level. This pace maintained a regular flow of buying orders in a narrow market, resulting in general recovery.

Banking Shares Strong.

Banking shares made a good showing all week, while French rentes were in demand, nearly all making substantial gains.

Suez Canal advanced, rail and shipping shares were firm, while wines advanced slightly, and oils and rubber, after an irregular start, showed a favorable tendency. The whole week showed but small change, with the tendency generally upward.

The Bank of France statement shows that the gold reserve has advanced to 29,913,300,373 francs, an increase of 256,122,318 francs over the preceding week. There is a 569,302,345 franc increase in notes in circulation, with outstanding credits of more than 83 billion. The proportion of gold reserve to sight liabilities is 39.54 per cent, safely above the legal limit of 35 per cent.

Tanning Industry Active for First Half of Year

New York, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Most of the branches of the American tanning industry have been active the first half of the year. Tanners of sole, calf, kid and sheep leathers all have produced more than in the first half of 1927, and have done so without building up the stocks which so harassed the industry from the close of the war until last year, American Leather Producers, Inc., reports. Tanners of cattle hides for shoe uppers, who form the other major division of the industry, reduced their production, but increased their finished stocks.

TOPICS OF FINANCE AND TRADE

Safety.

The most important element in any investment is, of course, safety.

Safety of principal is practically possible.

No matter what purpose is sought in an investment, safety must not be sacrificed.

Of course the demand even for this element can be carried unnecessarily far, as in the case of one who will invest trust funds, for instance, in 2 per cent United States bonds, while a municipal bond yielding 5 per cent would have insured the necessary security and at the same time given a higher rate of return.

Many investors believe that because a bond is a specific lien on property it is secure.

This is not necessarily true. Safety must not be confused with the selling value of the property—it is the earning power that counts.

Even after the bondholder has exercised his rights of foreclosure, the value of his security still depends on what the property can earn; i. e., its value as a going concern.

Safety of principal and income normally are interdependent.

The ability to pay interest regularly usually indicates that the property has value.

Although bonds and mortgages upon real estate may have ample margins to insure absolute safety of the principal, an irregularity in the tenancy of the property may not give assurance of safety of income.

Even in the case of municipal bonds issued under certain conditions in some states it is possible for the interest to lapse and action can be brought only for the defaulted interest payments. One must wait until after the date of maturity before suing for the principal.

Railroads frequently have guaranteed securities of smaller lines in order to obtain control of them and such practice has often caused higher prices than were justified to be paid for these securities.

The erroneous idea that safety of principal and of income are one and the same thing was often the basis for such supposed reinforcement of credit.

The investor should never take a guarantee as an assurance of absolute safety.

The value of the guarantee lies, first, in the company's ability to meet its charges independently of the guarantee and, secondly, in the guaranteeing company's ability to pay the income.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $736,600,000, a gain of $114,000,000 over the previous week, but a decline of $41,500,000 from the corresponding week of last year. Balances totaled $67,100,000, an advance of $20,900,000 over the preceding week and a gain of $17,500,000 over the same week in 1927. The figures for the week, day by day, with last three ciphers omitted, follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	90,200	7,800
Tuesday	114,900	10,100
Wednesday	180,500	26,300
Thursday	122,200	10,700
Friday	126,800	6,000
Saturday	102,000	6,200
Total for week	736,600	67,100
Corresponding last year	678,100	49,600

'COMFORT COSTS TENTH OF PRICE OF 100 YRS. AGO'

BY LEVERING CARTWRIGHT.

The cost of living, through the application of chemistry to daily life, has been reduced more than 1,000 per cent since 1828, W. T. Read, professor of chemistry at Texas Technological college, declared yesterday. He is one of the speakers on the program of the American Chemical society institute at Northwestern university.

In support of his estimate Prof. Read detailed some of chemistry's contributions to the average daily routine. Through the use of these contributions the cost of an existence today, he said, has been lowered to a point 1,000 per cent less than a style of living approximating it 100 years ago in comforts gained from natural sources.

Takes Daily Life Actions.

Prof. Read pointed out specific reductions that chemistry has made possible by considering the day of an individual from the time he rises in the morning until he retires at night.

For the morning toilet chemistry has developed a germicidal compound, hexyl-resorcinol, which is 66 times as powerful as carbolic acid and has none of its poisonous qualities. Colloid chemists and bacteriologists have perfected the process for purifying water which 100 years ago was brought immediately to the table from muddy rivers.

With the development of commercial fertilizers higher grade cereals are served at the breakfast table at less cost. Modern methods of refrigeration insure better meats and better milk is available.

If the individual is taken to his office by train he is enjoying chemistry's development of high grade steel. Or if he drives to work his automobile is operating on fuel which chemistry has reduced from heavy lubricants.

The Synthetic Age.

The leather of his car is artificially made and chemistry is turning its efforts to producing on a commercial scale artificial rubber for the manufacture of tires. The automobile paint, too, is a cellulose product, a mark of the advancement of chemistry.

At his office the business man uses paper which is a cellulose product and his ink is artificially made instead of being procured as of old from indigo. At night he is home again for a meal for which the foodstuffs may have been kept in an artificial ice chest.

Sir James Irvine of St. Andrews university, Scotland, told the members of the institute that the British government has entered upon a systematic program for encouraging the study and practice of chemistry.

Britain Values Chemists.

"Vast sums of money," he reported, "are being spent for government support of promising students who ought to be kept in their universities. In Great Britain, too, the way is open for a good chemist to keep on with his research for as long as he does profitable work without having to turn to industry for his living."

"Up to about 50 years ago," he continued, "training in chemistry in Britain was unsystematic, difficult to obtain, and expensive. There were few definite openings for the man of modest attainments. But today the position is one which is not only well organized, but can be regarded as eminently satisfactory.

"Since the war capital grants and recurring votes for annual budgets are made from treasury funds. The government is now taking such a practical interest in chemistry that it is willing to make financial votes in favor of the subject.

Research Is Encouraged.

"Pure or disinterested research in chemistry is confined largely but not exclusively, to the universities and here again a marked change is evident in the course of the past fifty years. Whereas formerly the chemical investigator was a solitary worker engaged on his own problems which he mastered by the labor of his own hands at such times as he could spare from his university duties, today, it has become a case of 'schools of research.'

"The result has been that today Britain is training and producing a vast army of competent young investigators in chemistry."

Chicago Bank Stocks Score Sharp Upturn

A brisk demand developed for bank stocks in the late trading last week and the shares of a few of the popular institutions scored sensational gains. Illinois Merchants jumped 94 points to a record high of 980; at the close stock was offered at 970 with buyers at 960. Union Trust enjoyed a 50 point rise when it changed hands at 900; while Continental National Bank and Trust scored a 35 point improvement in selling at 580. It relinquished a portion of its gain, closing 560 to 565.

The trend in the remainder of the list was mixed. Chicago Trust was in favor and added 15 points to its previous rise between 495 and 500; while Bank of America scored a 10 point advance in being dealt in at 394. National Bank of the Republic improved 10 points to sales at 560, but it surrendered a portion of its gain in closing at 542 to 546.

Foreman National Advances.

A better tone was noted in Foreman National, as 820 was bid for stock, but sellers did not appear interested. First National was neglected at 792 to 796, as was State Bank of Chicago at 663 to 668. Union Bank of Chicago was strong at 410 to 415. Central Trust Company of Illinois was an exception to the general course, losing 20 points over previous sales. The new stock was traded in at 430, and the rights between 75 and 77.

Trading was of a desultory sort in the miscellaneous group. Borg Warner preferred was again in demand and added another point to its previous advance in closing at 102½ bid, offered at 103. Birtman Electric was traded in at 23. Sales ranged in Chicago Daily News common between 59 and 61, and in the preferred at 102½ to 103¼. Continental Steel improved to 37, but it later receded to 34⅞ bid, offered at 35½. Elgin National Watch was a point better at 64½ to 65½.

Godchaux Sugar Active.

Godchaux Sugar continued active, transactions being recorded between 58 and 60. Greenebaum Sons Investment at 570 to 575 was 5 points lower. A. E. Staley after changing hands at 230 was offered down to 225 with best bids at 220. Northwestern Yeast declined 4 points to closing sales at 190. McCord Manufacturing common was unchanged at 9¾ to 10. Offerings of 69 for the class "A" preferred failed to attract buyers, as did offerings of 17½ for the debenture shares.

There has been a good underlying demand for the Federal Electric issues recently. The preferred was 2 points better at 108 bid, 110 asked; while the common at 49½ to 51 was 2 points improved. Van Ess Laboratories capital stock was wanted at 13 with offerings at 13½; while the voting trust certificates were quoted 12½ to 13¼. Wahl preferred was wanted at 79 with limited offerings at 81.

Canadian Trade Largest in Dominion's History

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The total trade of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1928, was valued at $2,359,412,000, the greatest in its history, the Dominion bureau of statistics announced today. The total is an increase of $60,946,000 or 2.2 per cent over 1927, and $103,383,000 or 4.6 per cent over 1926.

Imports in 1928 show a decided improvement over 1927 and 1926, while exports show a decline due to lower prices, with the result that Canada's favorable trade balance on March 31, 1928, was reduced to $141,500,000. This favorable balance was largely with the British empire.

Soviet Blames U. S. Grain Juggling for Panic Rumors

MOSCOW, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Nicholas Kubiak, commissar of agriculture for the soviet government, said today that juggling on the New York and Chicago grain exchanges, aimed at manipulating prices of American crops, had given rise to the "panicky rumors" about the Russian crop situation.

PROSPECTS FOR BIG CROP CUT PRICE OF GRAINS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A depressed condition prevails in the grain trade at present, with a lack of outside interest, and weather and crop comments extremely favorable for a large yield of spring wheat and also of corn, prices declined sharply. All deliveries of wheat as well as December and March corn sold at a new low price on the crop. September wheat dropped to $1.15⅝, or 51⅝c under the top figure made early in the spring and it closed at $1.16⅛ to $1.16¼, and 3¾c under the December. Net losses were 1½@1⅝c for the day.

Scattered liquidation was on in September corn, with commission houses persistent sellers in small lots, and the close was within a fraction of the bottom with a net loss of 1¾c. Deferred futures were ⅝@¾c lower with December leading the latter selling down to 75⅝c, and closed at 76@76⅛c. Oats were dull and ⅛@¼c lower, while rye lost ½@1⅛c.

Foreigners Sell Wheat Futures.

There was hedging pressure and selling of futures by houses with foreign connections, and while there was fair buying on the break it was largely by shorts and by holders of bids, and the undertone was distinctly heavy, with the trade looking for liberal receipts on Monday, and for a large gain in the visible supply. Spot wheat basis at Kansas City was 1c lower, and reports indicated that that market and Omaha were trying to sell cash grain to come here.

Clear and warmer weather in the Canadian northwest was favorable for the new wheat crop, and conditions continue to suggest a yield of 500,000,000 bu or more. Export demand at the seaboard was distinctly slow. Liverpool was closed and will remain so until Tuesday, and Winnipeg will also be closed Monday.

September Corn Weakens.

The continued liberal run of old corn to terminal markets, and the failure of large shipping sales to be reported has resulted in considerable change in sentiment regarding the future of the September delivery, and scattered longs were persistent sellers, and there was also pressure attributed to local operators. December, however, received good support at 75c and under from commission houses, shorts and holders of bids. Weather conditions were again ideal for the new crop, with beneficial rains over a good part of the belt.

Action of other grains was the main influence in oats and rye, and with scattered selling both grains ranged lower. Shorts were the best buyers.

Real Estate Board Acts to Avert Oct. 1 Moving Jam

In an effort to forestall the Oct. 1 moving jam, a conference of real estate men and others will be held Monday night at the Chicago Real Estate board to discuss the situation. Oliver S. Turner, chairman of the Chicago Homes Economic council, states that 80 per cent of tenants whose leases expire Oct. 1 move, and the problem is to get them to take leases for from thirteen to fifteen months as was done in thousands of cases last spring, thereby ending the seasonal moving peaks. Warren T. Easter will preside at the meeting.

Electrical Contractors Convene Here This Week

More than 3,000 electrical contractors and dealers from all parts of the country are expected to attend the annual convention of the Association of Electragists International this week at the Stevens hotel. John F. Gilchrist, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company, and Frederick P. Vose, secretary of the National Electrical Credit association and also a Chicagoan, are among the speakers. Leo E. Mayer, president of the White City Electric company, is convention chairman.

RAILROAD NOTES

A new record for coal loadings at Lake Erie ports was set July 31 when 5,089 cars or about 260,000 tons were dumped. At the present rate loadings may reach last year's figures. Coal loadings at ports for the season, including July 30th, totaled 14,146,597 tons against 18,246,741 in the same 1927 period and 14,024,386 in 1926.

Complaint has been filed with the interstate commerce commission by the Maine Central and Boston and Maine railroads, alleging divisions of the joint through rates received by them from the Bangor and Aroostook railroad are unreasonable. The roads were unable to negotiate a new agreement on a more satisfactory basis to replace the divisions agreement which expired July 1.

Atchison handled 187,365 revenue freight cars in July against 165,027 in July last year. The Atchison also handled 40,761 revenue freight cars in the week ended Aug. 3, against 37,806 in the same week last year. The Chicago and Eastern Illinois handled 35,257 revenue freight cars in July, compared with 37,688 in July last year.

LARD AND MEATS HIGHER

Packers were moderate buyers of bellies and they closed 10@20c higher. Ribs were neglected but finished unchanged to 5c higher. A little trade was on in lard with some changing from September to December and the close was at gains of 2½@5c except for January which declined 2½c. Liverpool was closed. Exports of lard from the seaboard were 788,400 lbs and bellies 27,500 lbs.

Cash trade during the week was fairly good but shipments of both lard and meats decreased from the previous week but were larger than last year while hogs finished around the best of the week. Prices follow:

Donovan wires Logan & Bryan from Paxton, Ill., from Bloomington to Springfield, Champaign, and here oats and wheat all cut and threshing just getting a general start, with indications of early movement to market. WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat continues to meet the same class of selling that it has for several weeks, despite the fact that prices gradually are sagging to lower levels and are down to the lowest prices in many months. The only support comes from shorts and spreaders with nothing to encourage a large class of buyers.

Commissions house liquidation of September corn was responsible for the break of over 2c from Friday's finish with houses who have not heretofore appeared in the market, selling liberal sized lines. The local pit element are aggressively bearish and are selling both September and December. There is no evidence of bull support. Traders are becoming more bearish as the season advances and the condition of the crop suggests an early harvest.

A Chicago Board of Trade membership sold at $10,000 net to the buyer.

The committee that is to fix the settling price on July corn has not finished its work, but is expected to reach a decision on Monday. There have been many important factors to consider and it has been difficult to secure all the information desired owing to the absence from the city of one of the largest holders.

J. K. Riordon is bullish on corn. He believes that with September corn selling around 95c it is too low and that eventually September corn as well as the cash article will sell materially higher. He considers the market as heavily oversold.

There has been an increase in the open interest in December as well as September corn in the last two days, while the open interest in September wheat has shown practically no change, and in December it increased nearly 1,000,000 bu on Friday. As compared with a month ago, the interest in corn has decreased slightly, and in wheat, is around 16,000,000 bu larger.

The government crop report for August will be issued on Aug. 9. The figures on Kansas and Missouri will be released Aug. 10 at 9 o'clock. Secretary Mohler of the Kansas department of agriculture desires to hold back his figures and to give them for publication to afternoon papers on the day of issuance, otherwise they do not get the publication desired. By this method the reports for that state are delayed a day for the country in general.

Harvey Williams, out on a crop investigating tour, wired Thomas & McKinnon from Yankton, S. D., "Extreme northwestern Iowa and eastern South Dakota uniformly good stand, color, and well advanced except in an area about 30 miles between Tripp and Yankton, which shows spots injured by hot winds of Wednesday, and tassels scorched. This apparently is entirely local."

Kansas City reported that a large part of north central and northwestern Kansas has been flooded and quite a lot of wheat has been lost by too much rain the last 30 days. Some of the wheat will probably never be cut.

COTTON PRICES ADVANCE

Rains in the Texas Panhandle with little elsewhere were a factor in making a stronger and higher cotton market, the trade being more disposed to take the buying side on price dips as a decline has been on for a week and a rally was regarded as due. Buy and advance early was on the rains which it was claimed were favorable for weevil development. This appears to be the main feature in checking short selling for the time being. It is claimed that the foundation for weevil development has been laid and a wet spell will make it more of a factor.

The market is said to have been well liquidated of late and selling pressure was more limited.

Reports from the dry goods market indicated a quiet situation with some irregularity in prices.

A fair reaction from the top prices made the finish at intermediate figures with net gains on futures in Chicago, 15 to 22 points, and other markets at gains of 8 to 15 points. Spots were up 10 points, to 19.95c in New York, 19.70c in New Orleans, 19.65c in Galveston and Houston 19.55c.

A Dallas bureau estimates a crop of 14,300,000 bales and the Daily News Record, 14,973,000 bales. Prices follow:

SHEEP — Western range lambs yesterday	14.50@15.50
One month ago	15.25@17.00
One year ago	13.00@14.25

Hogs yesterday took the usual week end price cut, due more to the poorer quality of offerings at the close than to any decline in the market. Choice kinds were absent and best available stopped at $11.40, against $11.60 for fancy selections Friday. Quality also forced the general average down 10c at $10.65, against $10.50 the previous Saturday, when top hogs were at $11.35.

Receipts Below Normal.

Hog receipts have been running below normal for several weeks, last week's total at 119,200 comparing with 138,018 a year ago, and with 130,157 two years ago. However, with local packers determined to hold the general average price of hogs down to $10.00@10.50, any show of strength in the market recently has been bitterly contested.

The week's general average at $10.60 equaled the lowest since the last week of June, but is only 20c under the highest of the year. Weights are 8@10 lbs heavier than a month ago, but are still below normal. The July average at 239 lbs was heaviest of the year, but lightest for July since 1924, when 239 lbs was lightest for the month since 1917.

Cattle, Best Grades, Steady.

With the exception of high priced specialties, which held a firm position in the cattle market all last week, tendency ruled lower, common and medium grades showing the sharpest losses at the close. The week's general average was forced down 10c at $14.95, but still shows a $2.90 advance compared with 10 weeks ago. Cattle a year ago averaged $11.65 and two years ago only $9.35.

Range of prices reached a still wider point and fewer sold at top quotations. A total of 530 steers brought $16.50 and above, against 863 a week earlier and 900 two weeks ago. Steers of beef merit brought $11.00@16.80, against $11.40@14.90 six weeks ago. Demand so far this summer has shown a marked preference for light weights, a reverse of conditions a year ago. Top in July at $16.85 was paid for yearlings, while best heavy stopped at $16.40. A year ago heavy topped at $14.50 and yearlings at $13.75.

Lambs at Season's Low.

The largest sheep receipts since middle of May sent lamb prices to new low levels for the season during last week. The general average moved down 10c to $14.85, against $16.10 six weeks ago and $17.90 the first full week in June. Supplies on the range being in strong hands, with most of the fall crop located in 13 western states, has given the trade a better tone and few look for any further sharp losses in the near future. Lambs in the south are practically all marketed.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 16,732 cattle, 45,650 hogs and 18,680 sheep, a week ago and 18,576 cattle, 37,438 hogs and 12,504 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 44,000 cattle, 125,000 hogs and 80,000 sheep, against 56,375 cattle, 130,586 hogs and 75,653 sheep a year ago.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS FIRMER; BOND MART DULL

New York, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The curb market closed the week with a brisk display of strength in today's short session, a number of industrial specialties pushing ahead in active trading.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass shot up 20 points to a new high at 255 on announcement of a 4 to 1 stock splitup. Automotive shares, led by Safe-T-Stat, showed renewed activity. Warner Brothers Pictures and Columbia Graphophone were still in heavy demand, the former touching a new high on a small gain. Servel was also a favorite. Blumenthal advanced more than 3 points in good demand, and Industrial Rayon went up more than 4 points. National Rubber Machine registered a new high on a small gain.

Radio Issues Active.

Sobel displayed strength on announcement of an exclusive contract to supply "hot dogs" for Madison Square Garden. Radio stocks were active, Spanish and General rallying in renewed demand. Chain Stores were quiet, but Kobacker touched a new peak. Fox Theater A was in supply, and Triplex Glass dropped 14 points to a new low.

Vacuum, Humble and Standard of Indiana showed strength in the oils, while Gulf of Pennsylvania sagged. Noranda was active in the mine group, but lost a small gain and closed unchanged. Utilities were stronger, United Gas Improvement going ahead nearly 2 points.

Bonds Quiet But Firm.

The bond market was quiet today, although prices were somewhat firmer in reflection of the strength of stocks. Dodge Brothers 6s again attracted most trading in the industrial group, but after opening at 97⅛, the issue sagged to 97. American Agricultural Chemical 7½s, Kayser & Co. 5½s, and United States Rubber also moved lower.

Cuba Cane Sugar debenture 8s and convertible 7s advanced about a point each. Utilities were firmer, with American Telephone and Telegraph debenture 5½s, Detroit Edison 5s and Public Service of New Jersey 4½s leading the advance.

Rails were not especially active. New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 5s advanced more than a point, and Pennsylvania 4s, Frisco 4s and St. Paul 5s improved.

Government Bonds Soft.

United States government bonds again were soft. The dullness of the group, particularly the Third Liberty 4¼s, which are exchangeable for the new treasury 3⅜s issue, is said to have disappointed the treasury, which had hoped no further long term financing would be necessary in connection with retirement of the Third Liberty loan. However, exchanges to date have amounted only to around $100,000,000 and only $250,000,000 worth of the new issue was sold for cash, whereas the outstanding volume of the Third Liberty loan is approximately $1,000,000,000. The foreign list was steady, but featureless.

Foreign exchanges showed some improvement. Sterling was fractionally higher and the yen moved upward from yesterday's low of the year, but lire and belga were somewhat lower.

More Business Failures; Bank Clearings Increase

New York, Aug. 4.—Failures this week are somewhat above the total for a year ago and the total for last week, the number reported to R. G. Dun & Co. this week being 424. This exceeds the number for the preceding week by 11 and is 38 above the insolvencies of a year ago. All geographical sections show increases this week over those for last week.

Bank clearings still continue slightly above those of a year ago. The total of $10,294,406,000 for principal cities of the United States this week is 5.7 per cent more than the amount for the same period of last year. New York City clearings are $6,849,000,000, an increase of 8.5 per cent over the figures for 1927, and the gain at outside cities, where clearings totaled $3,445,406,000, is 0.4 per cent.

Northern Pacific Finishes Big Development Projects

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 4.—The northwest, particularly western Montana and eastern Washington, will be stimulated industrially and agriculturally through the completion on Aug. 9 of the second of two large development projects by the Northern Pacific at a total expenditure of $4,000,000.

At Stevensville, Mont., will be celebrated next Thursday the completion of relocation of the pioneer Bitter Root branch. This relocation project was carried on at a cost of $1,225,000. Early in June the Northern Pacific in eastern Montana completed its new 62 mile Redwater Valley line from Glendive to Brockway via Circle, at a cost of more than $2,500,000.

Smoked Meats Lead Trade in Packing House Lines

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions, says:

"An improved demand for bacon was one feature of continuing strength and activity in smoked meats generally was notable among leading packing house lines. All kinds of smoked meats were in good demand at firm to higher prices. Dry salt meats likewise showed a good business at the continuing steady market. Demand for beef continued to be curtailed by prevailing high prices. Fresh pork, too, was affected by recent price increases and the demand was slow."

N.Y. Clearing House Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House association shows: Total surplus and undivided profits, $20,356,500 increase; net demand deposits [average], $41,668,000 increase; time deposits [average], $14,648,000 decrease; clearings, week ended Aug. 4, $7,034,516,524; clearings, week ended July 28, $5,555,724,654.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Cotton goods sales for the week exceeded production. Many mills were closed during the entire period. The markets closed fairly steady and quiet. Moderate amounts of suedes and broadcloths were bought for ladies' coats. Business on fancy tropical worsteds for men's wear for the coming spring has been fair, but staples have been quiet. More interest developed in silk and fancy fabrics for the coming spring and a larger inquiry for sample lots resulted in the gray goods division. Silks are being cut up very freely, chiefly velvets, satins, and Canton crepes, and some of the high novelties in metallic silks.

Stopping Treatment Too Soon Is Dangerous to sufferers from "Social" Diseases

THOUSANDS of sufferers from "Social" Diseases are facing the most serious consequences imaginable because they discontinued treatment too soon. Not realizing that it takes time to cure a "Social" Disease, they made the mistake of stopping treatment as soon as the early symptoms had disappeared.

Therein lies one of the greatest dangers of "Social" Diseases. The early symptoms may disappear, so far as the patient himself can recognize, and with the disappearance of those symptoms he all too often thinks himself cured.

The disappearance of symptoms does not necessarily mean that all the germs have been killed. Hence to stop treatment too soon is to run the risk that months or years later the disease may reappear, perhaps in a form which is much more destructive and much more difficult to cure. Insanity, blindness, paralysis, apoplexy, epilepsy, heart disease, kidney trouble and crippling rheumatism are only a few of the dangerous consequences of uncured "Social" Diseases.

Likewise, many of the still-born, deformed and feeble-minded babies ... many of the cases of infantile blindness ... many of the pelvic operations on married women ... can be traced directly to "Social" Diseases which never had been cured.

Thus, in addition to being in grave danger himself, the uncured victim of a "Social" Disease is a source of danger to his loved ones. Not only may he infect his wife and children, but as time goes on he may develop a disabling affliction which will make it impossible for him to provide for them any longer.

If any reader of this advertisement ever had a "Social" Disease and stopped treatment before being pronounced cured, he is urged to consult a reliable physician or come to the Public Health Institute. An examination will show whether or not he still has the disease, and if he has he should immediately resume treatment and continue it until the attending physician pronounces him cured.

Organized NOT FOR PROFIT, the examination and treatment fees of the Public Health Institute are so very low that any one can afford them. When protection from "Social" Diseases can be had economically, privately and conveniently, don't run the risk of wrecking your health and that of your wife and children.

Women and Children

A special department exclusively for women and children, with men and women physicians in attendance, is located at 72 E. Randolph St. Every facility is provided here for effective treatment, and the utmost privacy with the highest degree of comfort is assured.

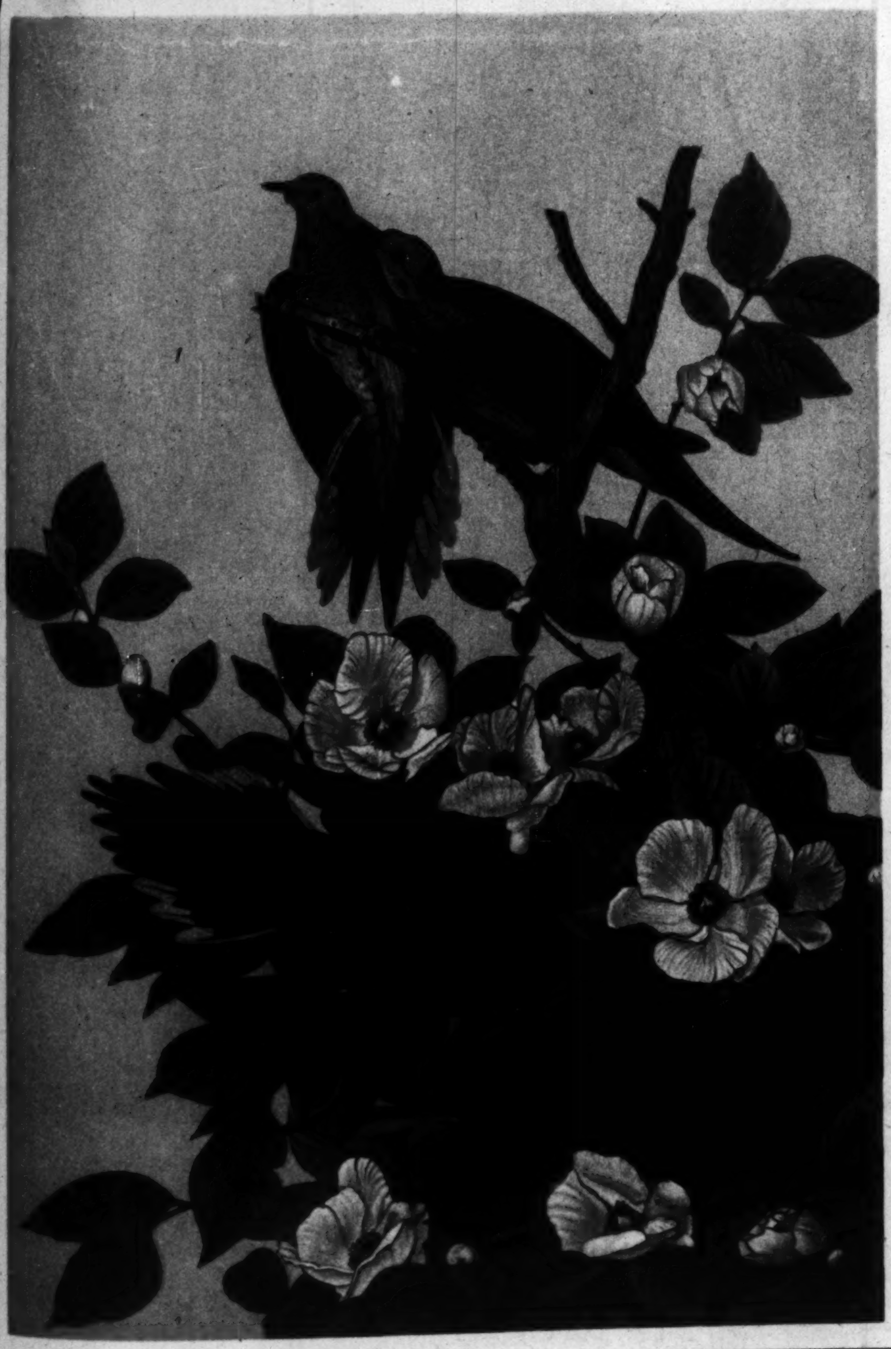
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

August 5, 1928

SCENIC CHICAGOLAND is a golfer's paradise, abounding in picturesque courses which attract thousands upon thousands of players. Here you see a natural-color photograph of the eighteenth fairway and green at the Kildeer Country club, one of the newer courses off the north shore.



THE CAROLINA TURTLE DOVE, now with us for the summer, is noted for the beauty of its color, its soft cooing, and its affection for its mate and young. This John J. Audubon sketch, drawn from nature, is reproduced, by permission, from the files of the John Crerar library of Chicago.

MISS NYDIA WESTMAN has been engaged for a new version of the Uncle Tom piece named, when here, "Fly-by-Night." She is known in Chicago for her performing of quaint rustics in "Pigs," 1925, and "Two Girls Wanted," 1927.

ANOTHER PICTURE FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK of the birds and flowers of Chicagoland. Bismarck stocks like these can be developed to enormous size if given room in the home garden. The Bismarck is a new variety grown in lawn borders in this section. It blooms in June if started in greenhouses, and in July and later if started outdoors. This variety is one of the best for greenhouse use.

BURYING THE HATCHET—With Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg looking on, Dr. Hernan Velarde, Peruvian ambassador to the United States (left), shakes hands with Senor Don Carlos G. Davila, Chilean envoy, by way of celebrating the resumption of relations between their nations. Peru and Chile had been at outs for seventeen years. (Photograph from International.)

WHAT WILL THE HARVEST BE? Charles W. Bryan, brother of the late Commoner and Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1924, is seeking his old job as governor of Nebraska, and to get himself in trim for the campaign he levels the grain on his farm near Lincoln. For once he doffs his famous skull cap. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

THE SAFE AND GENTLE WAY TO END A CORN

THE new Evans Automatic Lighter is smart enough to attract admiring glances at the Country Club, thin enough to ride inconspicuously in the vest pocket, large enough to give you more lights per filling. And it's so quick on the trigger, so certain in performance.

A fascinating lighter — distinctively EVANS in its mechanical refinements—concealed from the eye but manifest to the judgment of every discerning buyer. There's a hidden spring, unique in design, that makes misfiring practically impossible: there's a hidden tube that protects the wheel and flint from moisture when filling; there's the wick itself—not of fuzzy cotton but of durable asbestos.

These are only a few of the striking improvements that make the EVANS Automatic the greatest advance in design, construction and performance ever embodied in a lighter.

SPECTACLE! The bellicose Bruins may—or may not—win out in the grueling grind toward Pennantville this year, but at the least they will have written into the archives of baseball a season packed with thrills. Here is a remarkable visualization of stirring pageantry in the north side park—the Cubs, officials, and tens of thousands of fans come to cheer on their idols in one of those hair-raising battles that have made crushes at the turnstiles the customary thing throughout the summer. The Cubs were encountering their traditional rivals, the New York Giants. (Photograph copyright by Kaufmann & Fabry Co.)

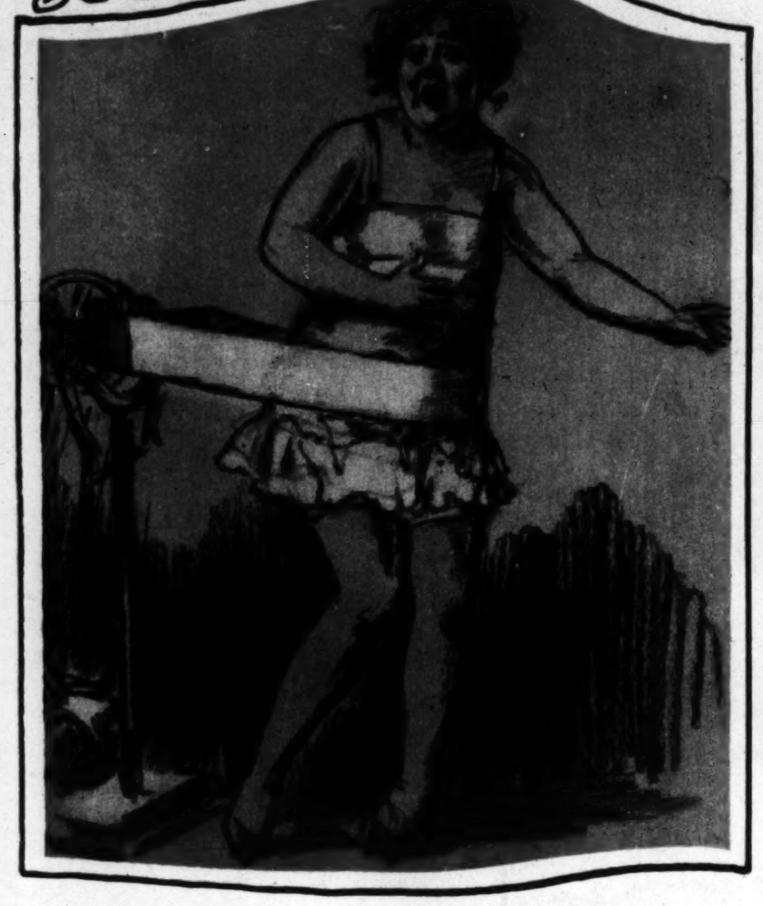
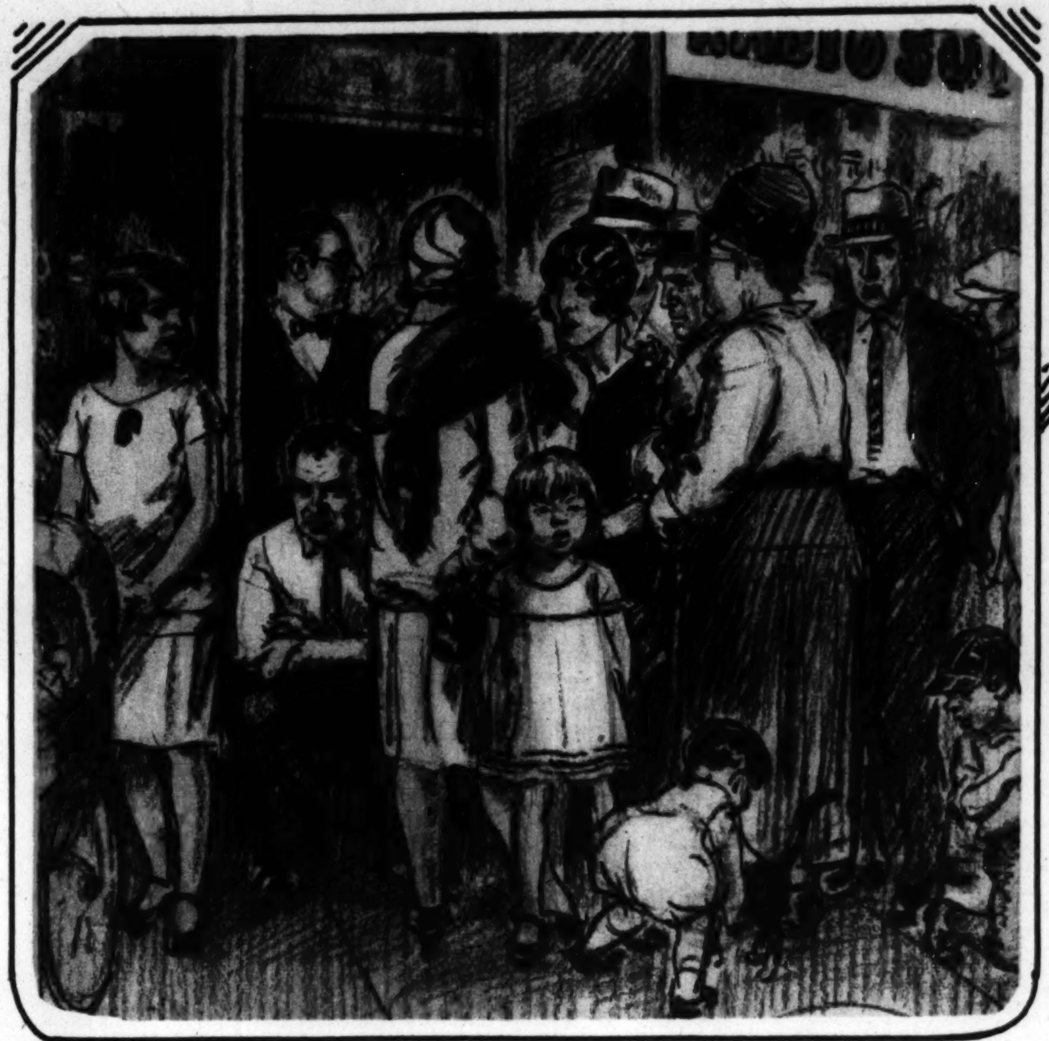
The Machine Age

By W. E. Hill

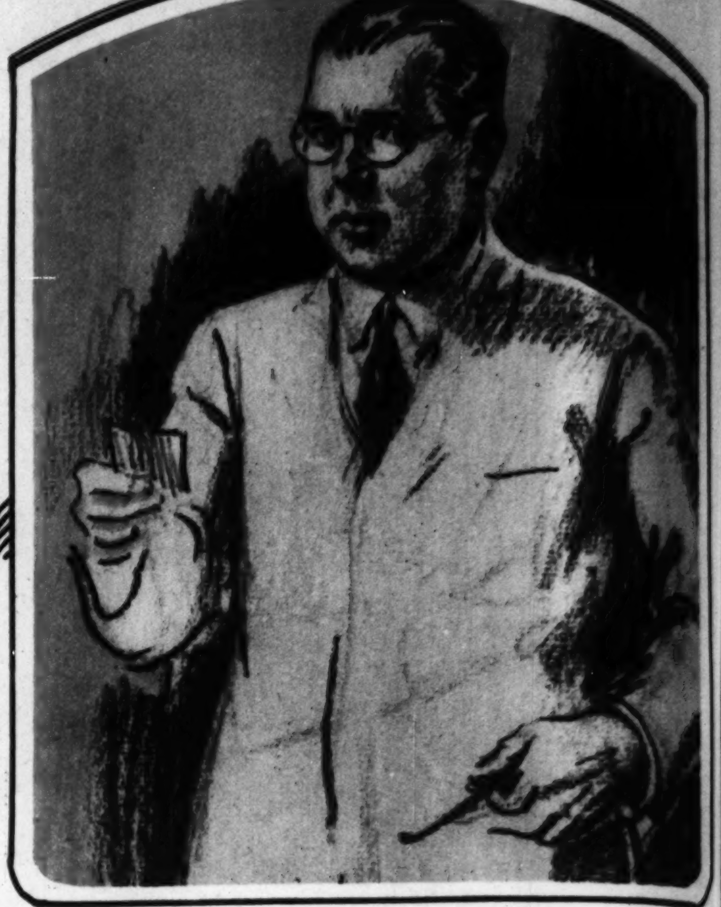
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



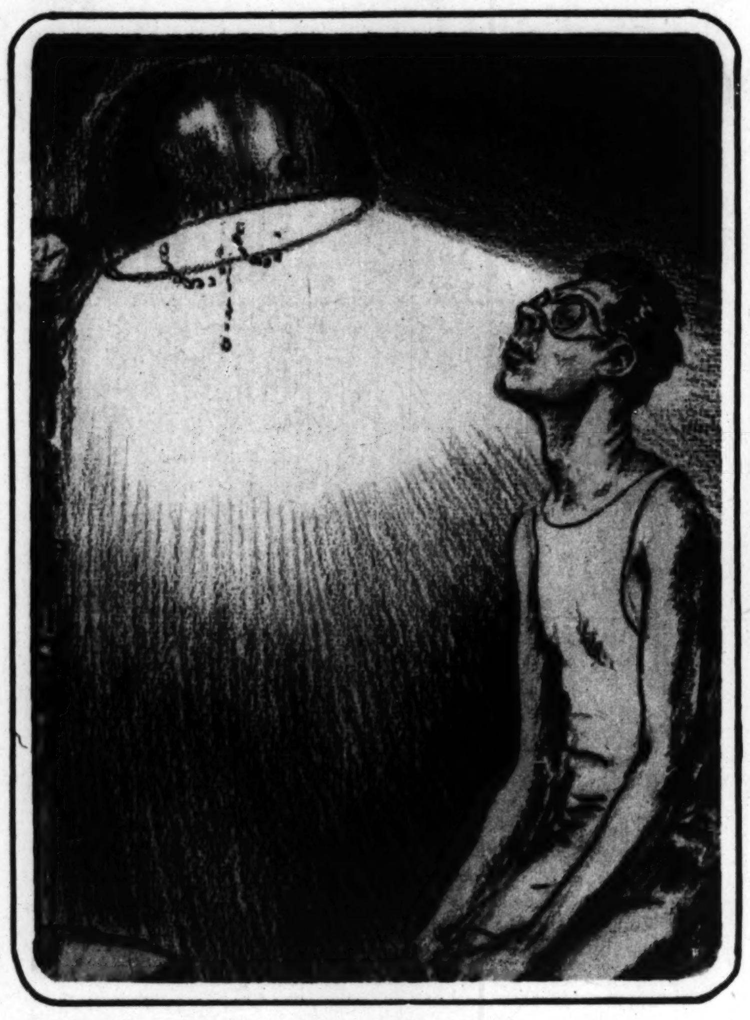
Reducing machine. Just a beautiful girl reducing with one of those machines you see so much of in the advertising pages. Poor girl, she has forgotten how to stop the thing.



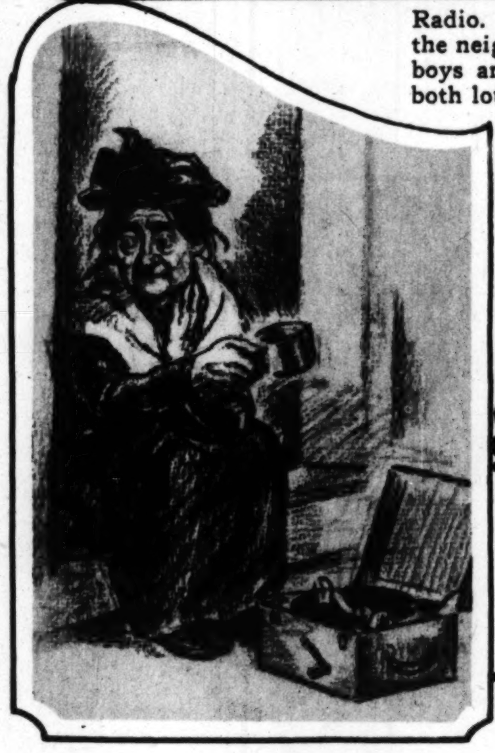
Radio. Just a song at twilight via the amplifier at the neighborhood radio shop. The red hot Craziness boys are offering "Play in Your Own Back Yard" both loudly and hotly.



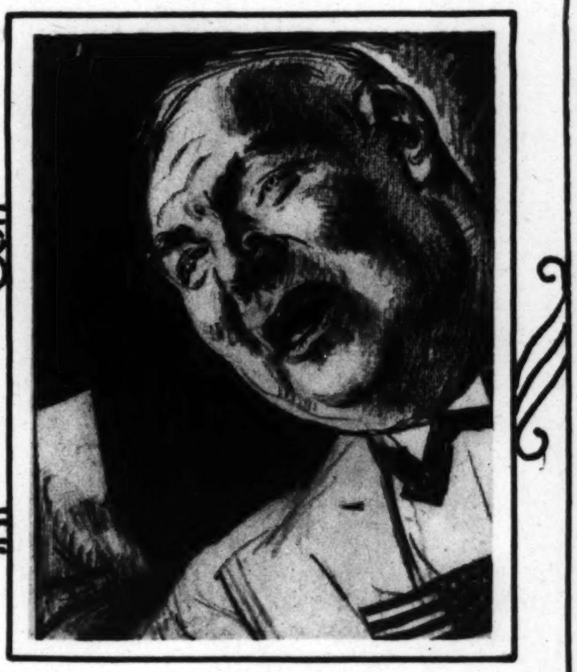
X-ray. Before the days of the X-ray machines dentists had a pretty hard time of it keeping the customers happy in the dental chair. Now when a patient begins to show peevishness the dentist gets out the X-ray pictures, and before you can say "Jack Robinson" everybody is happy. "Now here," says the dentist, laying off your bridge work for the moment, "is a very good picture I took yesterday of a bicuspid that had gnawed down into the gums!"



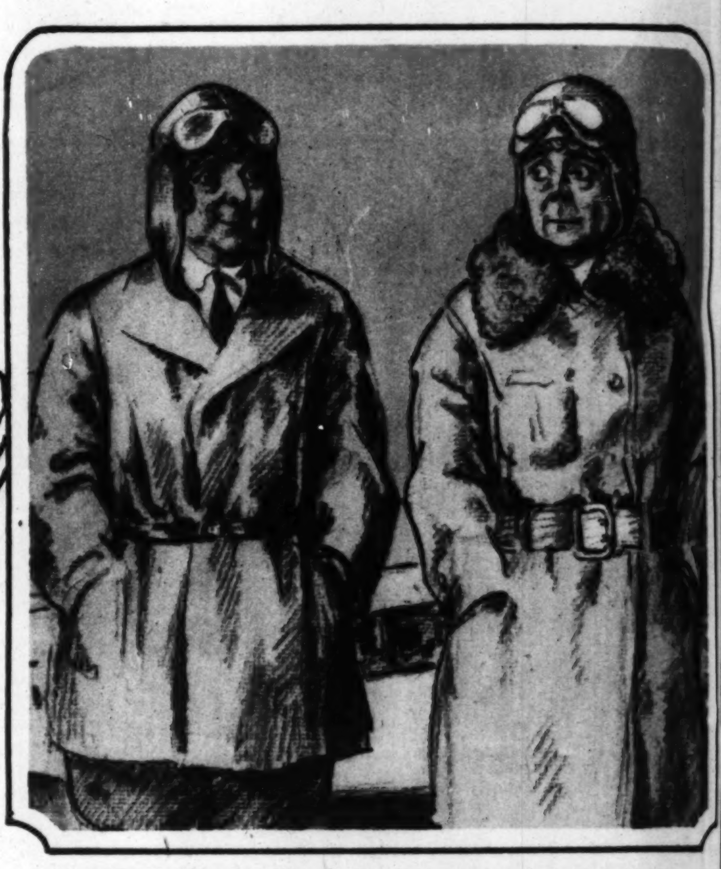
Artificial sunlight. Those sun machines are great stuff for the boys who don't want their friends to know they've been in town all summer. There are sunburns going about that never even saw the sunlight!



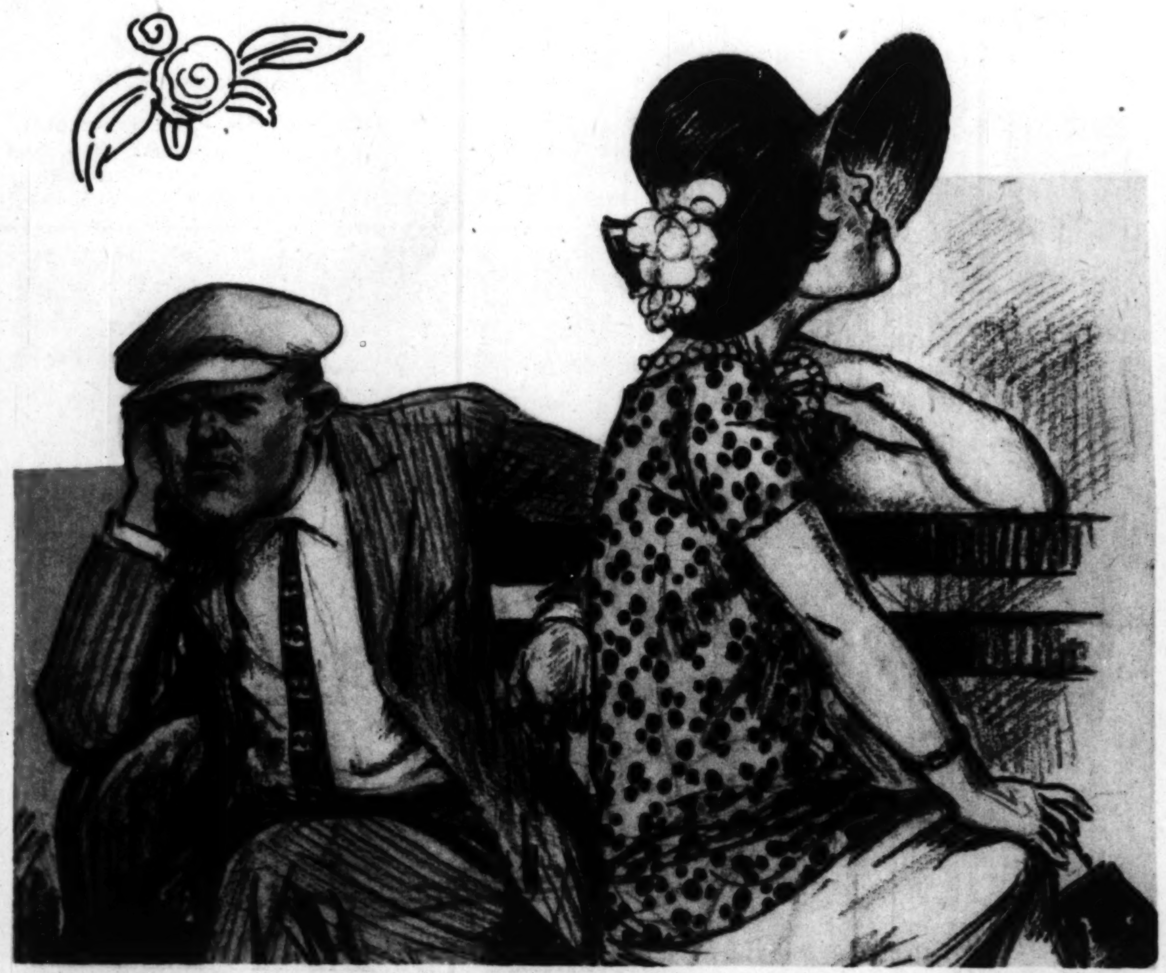
Phonograph. The begging profession isn't what it used to be in the good old days. Take it from Panhandle Pansy, whose sad face wheedles the dimes and the nickels from stony hearted passersby, drat 'em. Pansy has a portable phonograph now, presented by a rich admirer, and Pansy wheedles the coin to tunes. The old hand organ gave out at last, after a thirty years' rendition of "Mr. Dooley."



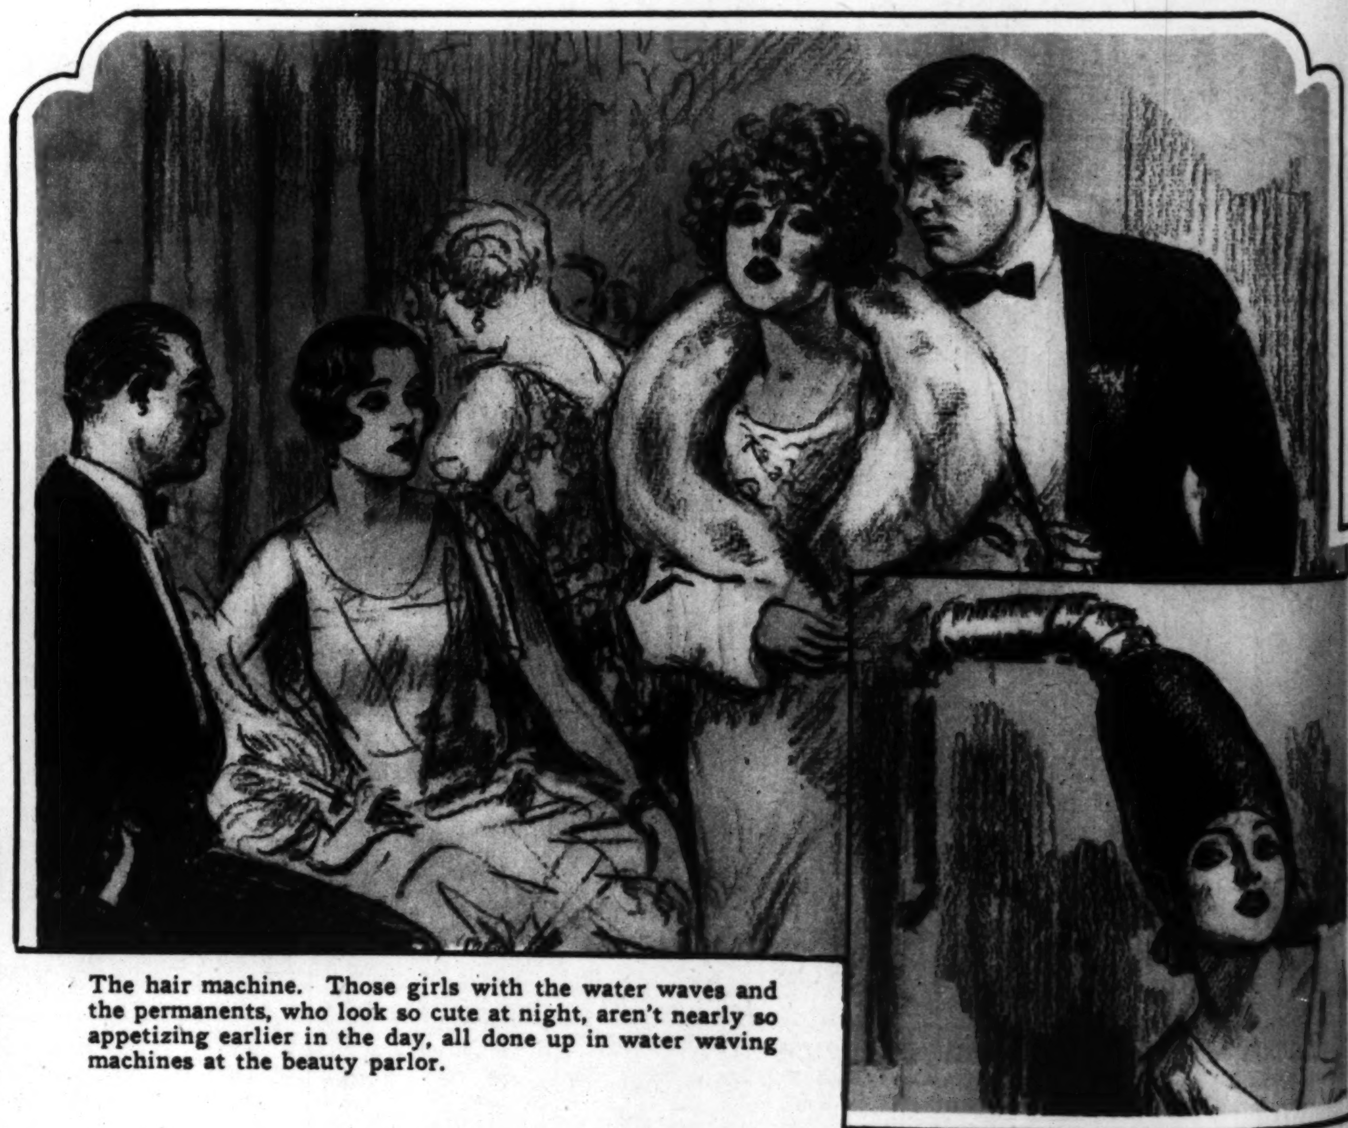
The talking movie. Many people prefer the radio to the "talkies." You don't have to sit and look at Senator Gulp delivering his speech when listening in on the radio. At the talking movie you get all of Senator Gulp's features, which are not so hot, thrown in for good measure.



Airplane. The freedom of the air has done a lot for those elderly girls who used to sit home reading Jane Austen 'way back in the '90s. In this age of machines and motors a grandmother will think nothing of flying from San Diego to Chicago before breakfast, and will even tell you she can't get a kick out of anything any more except a forced landing.



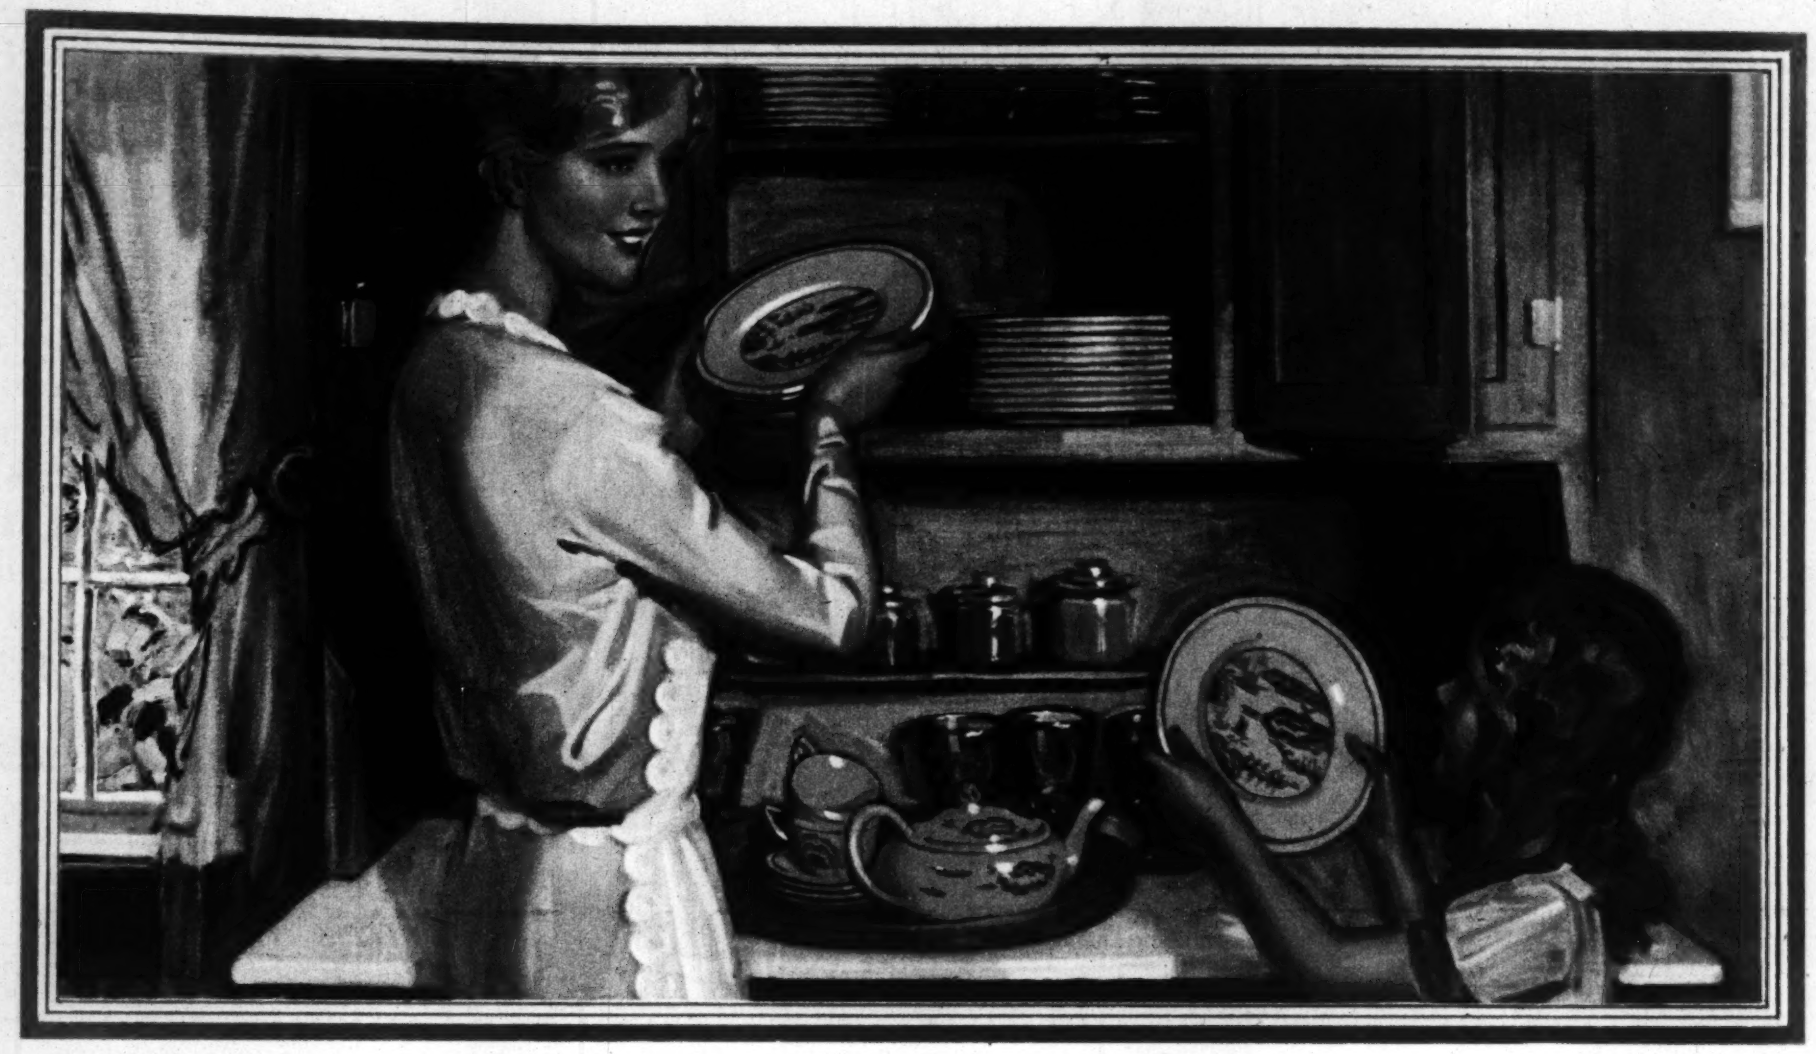
Manufactured ice. Inger, the lovely housemaid, and Olaf, the handsome iceman, are hardly speaking these days. It seems that the family for whom Inger is obliging at present has installed an ice machine, and Inger, silly girl, has grown very snobbish and is pretty condescending to Olaf. Harping on ice cubes and all that till one day Olaf had to slap her face. Just a short time ago it was that Olaf was calling Inger his Svenske dumpling and Inger was giving Olaf kisses.



The hair machine. Those girls with the water waves and the permanents, who look so cute at night, aren't nearly so appetizing earlier in the day, all done up in water waving machines at the beauty parlor.

Look! she has found a better way to do dishes . . .

New beads of soap discovered! They go to work instantly . . . china sparkles without wiping . . . pretty hands safe!



HERE is a word about dishwashing that will show you how to save hours and hours of tedious work every month.

We have learned how to make soap in a new form—amazing little beads of soap, called Super Suds. They dissolve the instant hot water hits them. Four times as thin as chips, Super Suds goes to work faster than any soap you ever saw.*

How Super Suds washes dishes quicker

Put Super Suds in your dishpan—about half a tea cup. Turn on hot water. Soap vanishes! Nothing but suds and rich soapy water in the pan! You can start washing instantly.

Glasses and silver gleam. No soap film on china. Dishes don't need washing—just hot rinse and drain. Super Suds rinses off easily and completely, saving you from slavery to dishes, keeping your hands soft and white, because they are in the water ⅓ less time.

No chip, flake, or powder can give you an idea of what Super Suds is like. Bead soap is different from any soap you ever saw. It looks different, acts different. Thousands of women have tried Super Suds and have found it even better than they thought it could be.

Super Suds is for your washtub too. No more cutting bar soap into small pieces, no more teasing slow chips and flakes into suds, once you use Super Suds for laundry work. The completely dissolved soap goes right to work, down under the water where the real work is done.

Super Suds is fine in washing machines too. Try Super Suds for your wash this week. Thick suds form instantly. Soap dissolves entirely. Rinses out easily and completely. No chance of soap spots. Super Suds saves one rinsing and gets clothes whiter in less time.

You will find Super Suds at any grocer's. Full directions on every package and a valuable premium coupon too—our discount to you. Do get a box of Super Suds today!

SOCIETY

HELPING THE WOMEN TO HELP THEMSELVES—The fashionable Watch Hill, R. I., summer colony sees the annual summer sale of the Chicago Woman's Exchange. This year the venture was held at Cove End, the warm weather home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard of Chicago, and these four were among those responsible for its success: Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr. of Chicago, Mrs. Lewis F. Harder of New York, and Mrs. Charles P. Lineaweaver of Philadelphia.

UNDER A BOWER OF PINK ROSES Betty Brown Tailer, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer of New York and Newport, was married to Walter Gurnee Dyer, son of Brig. Gen. George Rathbone Dyer of Long Island. The ceremony took place at Honeysuckle lodge, the Newport summer home of the Tailers. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

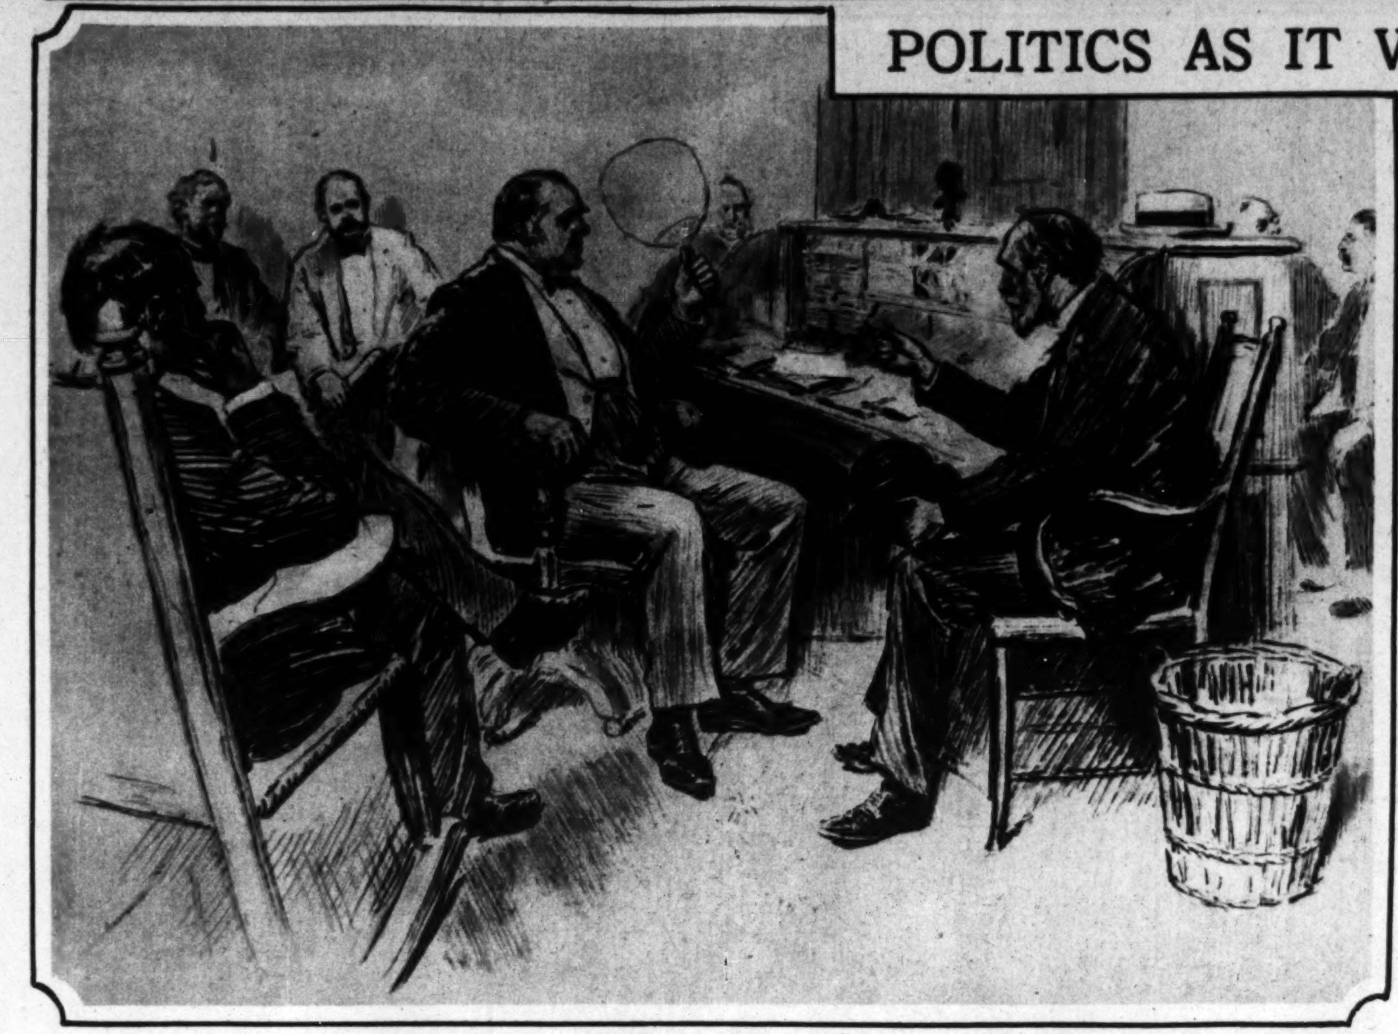
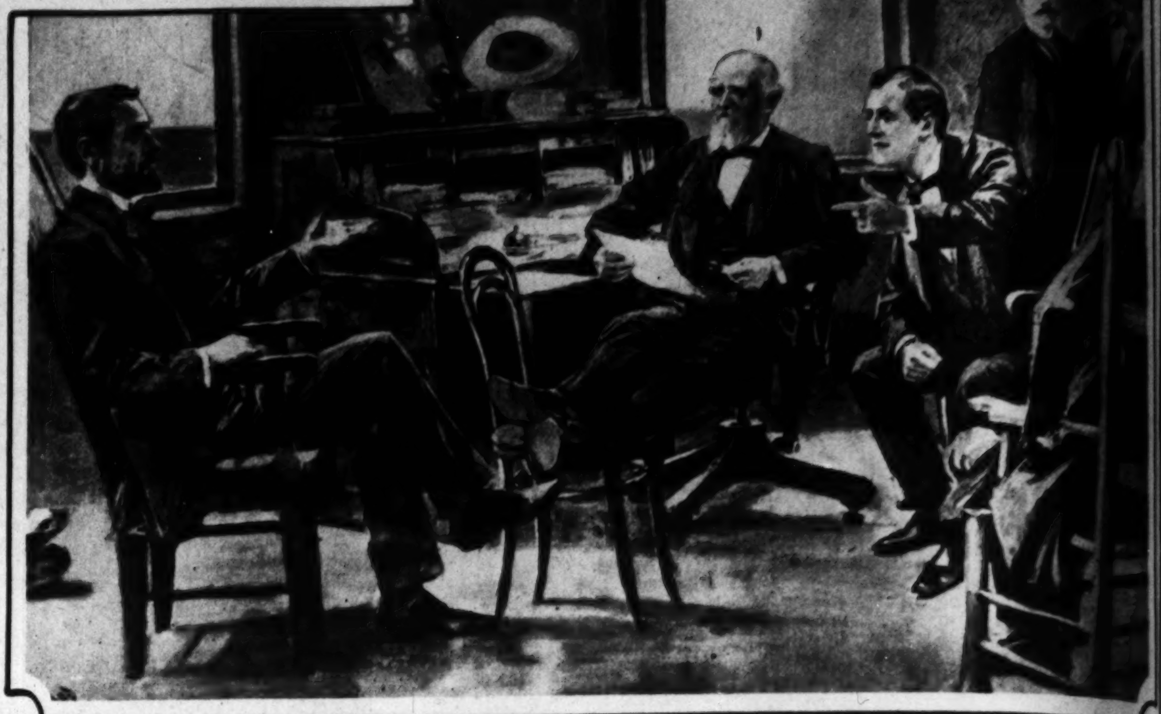
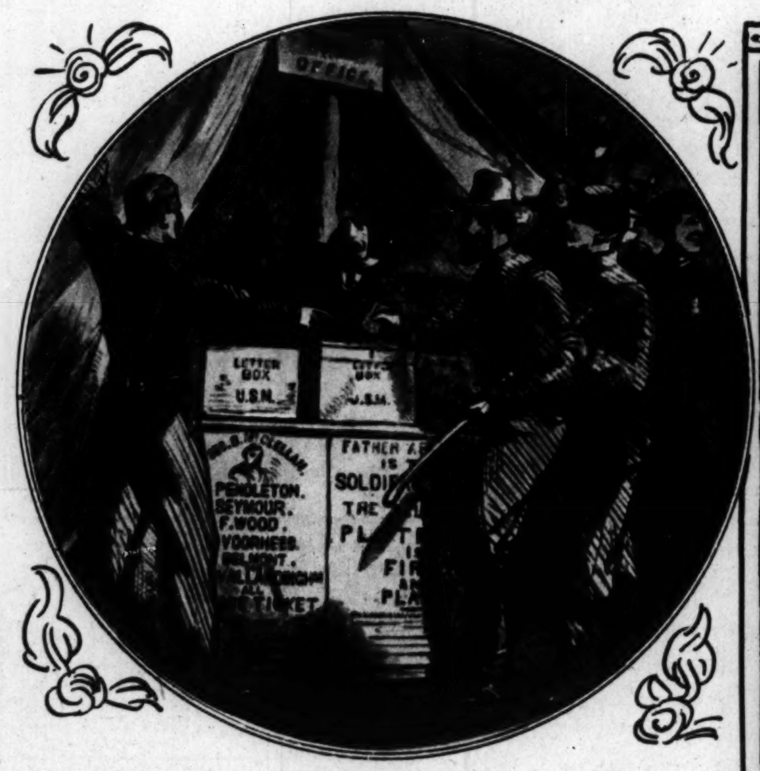
POLITICS AS IT WAS PLAYED



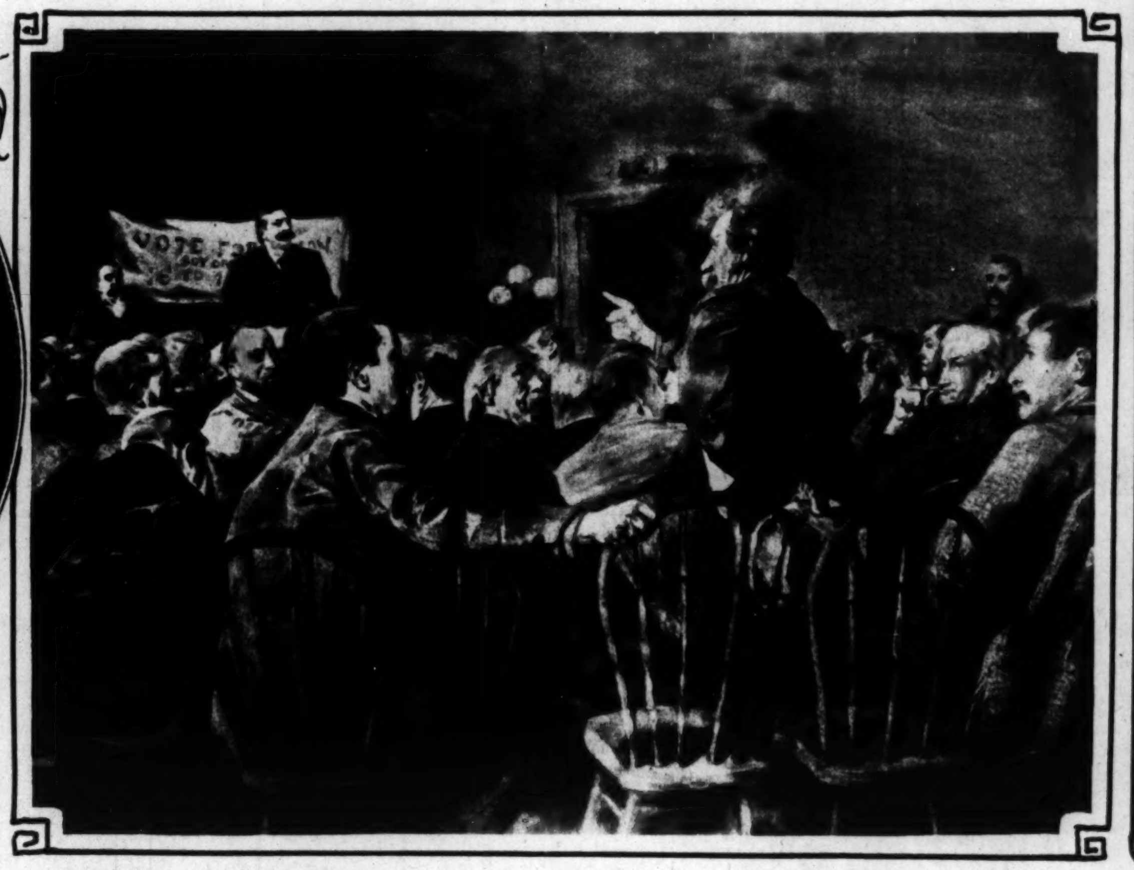
OLD-TIME METHODS OF PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGNS—In 1896 the big Republican bosses met to map out the campaign to elect McKinley and Hobart. In Charles S. Reinhart's drawing, Mark Hanna is wielding the fan while facing Tom Platt, Garret A. Hobart is sitting behind him, Matt Quay is at the extreme left, and Gen. Horace Porter is at the extreme right. All have long since passed from the scene; bosses have become "leaders," and in this day of equal rights Mark Hanna's daughter is one of the leading strategists of the G. O. P.



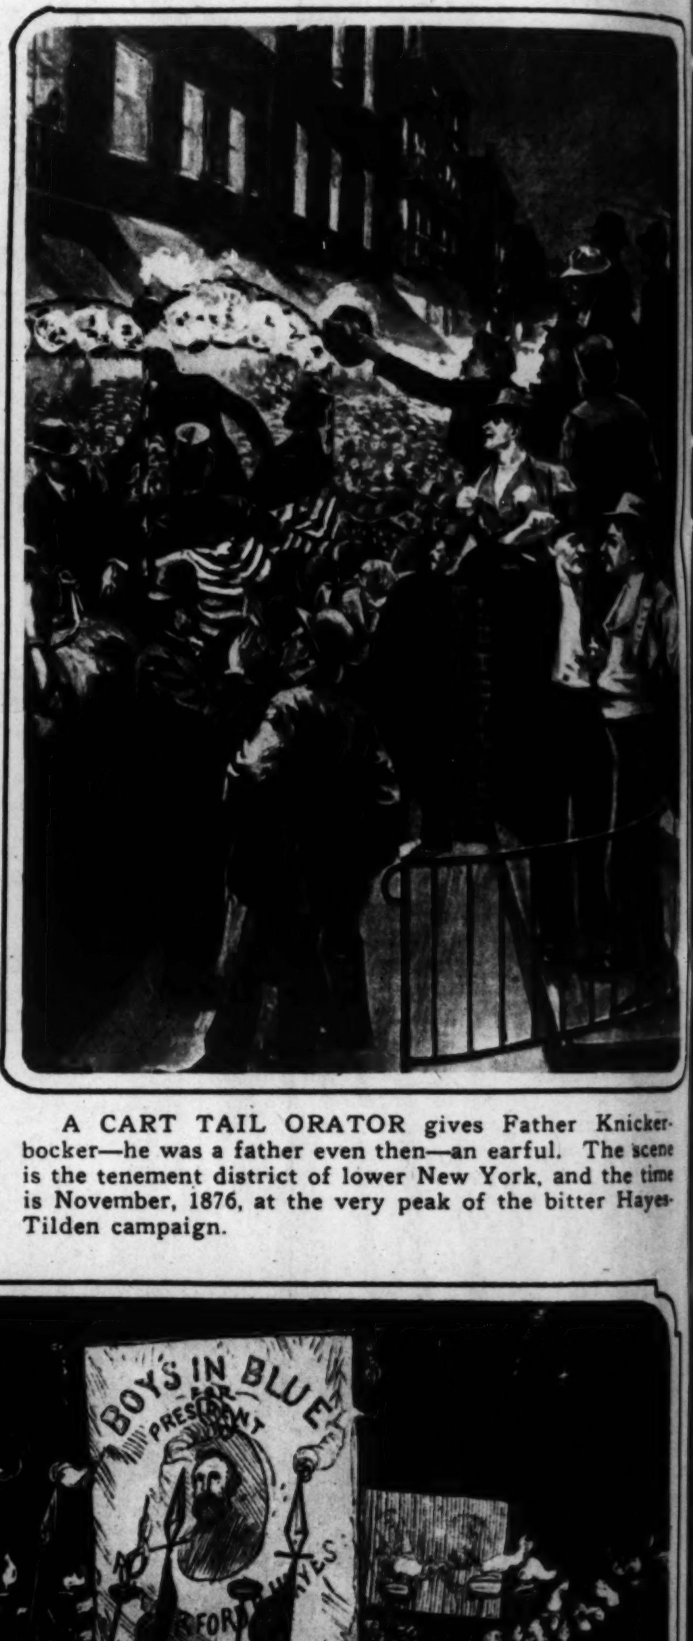
THE MAUVE DECADE—In the dying days of the nineteenth century William McKinley was twice opposed by William Jennings Bryan, the silver-tongued orator when oratory meant something. On a day when the Commoner was in his prime and free silver and 16 to 1 were magic words, he held a conference in Chicago with Gov. John P. Altgeld (left) and Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the Democratic national committee (center). The drawing was by T. de Thulstrup.



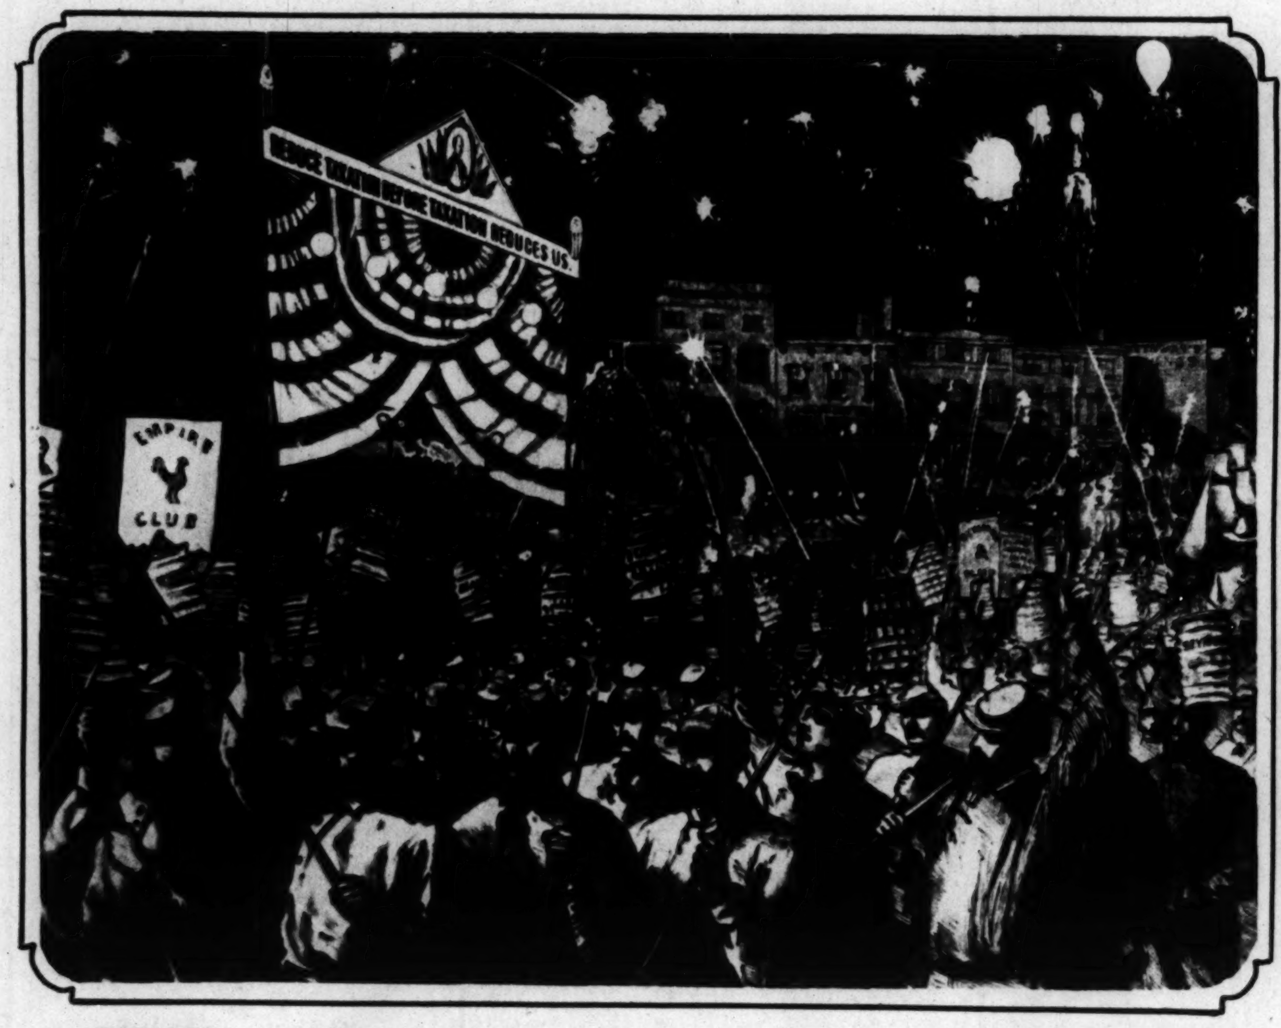
IN THE STIRRING DAYS OF '64 not many able-bodied men were left at home to vote. So booths were set up along the various fronts, and for one day the battles of bullets were suspended for the battle of ballots. Below the temporary postoffice where the soldiers mailed their votes may be seen the rival posters for Gen. George B. McClellan and Abraham Lincoln.



WALRUS MUSTACHES and clay pipes abounded in that period of the palmy past when Populism was rife and Sockless Jerry Simpsons came out of Kansas. Here is a smoker and conference at the height of one of Bryan's five or six unsuccessful attempts for the presidency. Note the banner: "Vote for Bryan; Boy Orator of the Platte; 16 to 1."

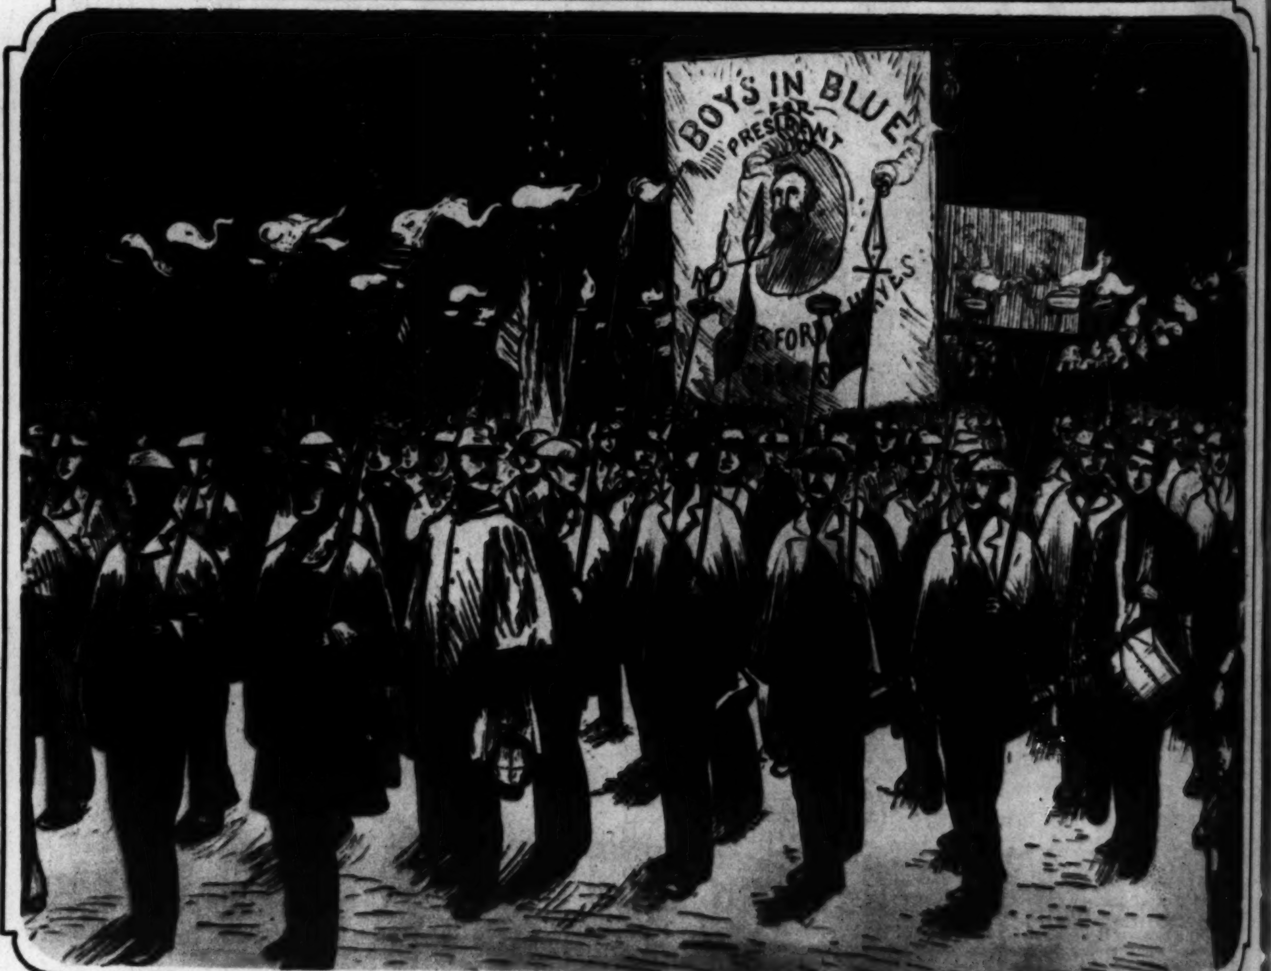


A CART TAIL ORATOR gives Father Knickerbocker—he was a father even then—an earful. The scene is the tenement district of lower New York, and the time is November, 1876, at the very peak of the bitter Hayes-Tilden campaign.



REDUCE TAXATION BEFORE TAXATION REDUCES US.
EMPIRE CLUB

DEMOCRACY DEMONSTRATES—In 1868 Gen. Grant, still fresh from his Civil war triumphs, was battling Horatio Seymour for the seat in the White House. To prove that he did not have the united backing of his former commands, however, these veterans joined in a New York demonstration in behalf of his opponent. And they did it "'mid the rocket's red glare."



TORCHLIGHT PROCESSIONS, except in celebration of gridiron victories, are almost a thing of the past nowadays, but when Rutherford B. Hayes was running against Samuel J. Tilden in 1876 the Brooklyn "boys in blue" used the fantastic lights to express their spirit of '76. They were on their way to a Republican barbecue, with Hayes as their hero.

For training purposes elements of the division were brigaded with English and Australians under command of Haig. REMEMBERING A ROOSEVELT—Quentin, youngest son of the fighting T. R., was brought down by the enemy July 14, 1918. On Aug. 9, at Chamery, France, Second Lieut. William P. T. Preston of the 42d division placed this cross on the gallant aviator's grave.

OWING TO BLOW UP THE SHIP- BEFORE THEY WILL SURRENDER TO THE PIRATICAL CREW - CHESTER AND CHING CHOW FIND THEMSELVES UNABLE TO LEAVE THE CABIN IN WHICH THEY HAVE STORED ALL THE POWDER AND DYNAMITE THEY HAVE TAKEN FROM THE SHIP'S STORE ROOM - THE PIRATES' GUARD THE CABIN DAY AND NIGHT HOPING TO STARVE THE DESPERATE PAIR INTO SUBMISSION - BUT THE TWO ADVENTURERS RESOLVE TO ESCAPE OR DIE FIGHTING-
IF WE SUBMIT TO THE WICKED ONES - OUR LIVES WILL BE UNDOUBTEDLY OF SHORT DURATION-
WE CAN'T LIVE FOREVER WITHOUT FOOD OR WATER- MAYBE THERE IS A CHANCE TO SNEAK PAST THE GUARD-
GUN POWDER
CAN YOU SEE THE GUARD, CHING ? IS HE WATCHING THE DOOR ?
THE WORTHLESS GUARD HAS VANISHED FROM HIS USUAL PLACE - IT IS MY ROCKLIKE OPINION SOME SNARE IS INTENDED FOR OUR ADVANCING FEET-
I THINK THE GUARD HAS LEFT HIS POST- I'M GOING TO TAKE A CHANCE AND TRY AND GET A SUPPLY OF FOOD AND WATER-
MY UNWORTHY HEART TREMBLES FOR YOUR HIGHLY REGARDED LIFE- IF ANY HARM COMES TO YOU- THIS PERSON'S HAPPINESS WILL BE FOREVER EXTINGUISHED-BANG!
DYNAMITE
WE ARE IN A TIGHT FIX- IF WE STAY IN THE CABIN - WE'LL DIE OF STARVATION- IF WE OPEN THE DOOR THEY'LL SHOOT US-
THIS PERSON GAZES INTO THE FUTURE WITH UNSMILING EYES-
I SMELL SMOKE
IT IS DOUBTLESS THE PERFUME OF THE MISERABLE GUARD'S MOST UNLUCKY BULLET-
LOOK - CHING- THERE IS SMOKE COMING IN THE WINDOW-
THE SUPERIOR MAN BOWS BEFORE THE WINDS OF MISFORTUNE- THE COUNTLESS ONES HAVE SET FIRE TO THE BENEVOLENT SHIP-
IF THE PIRATES DON'T HELP US TO FIGHT THIS FIRE- GOOD NIGHT!
THE EVIL ONES WILL USE EVERY EFFORT TO SAVE THEIR OWN WORTHLESS HIDES-
SIDE BY SIDE CHESTER AND CHING CHOW LEAD THE BATTLE TO SAVE THE SHIP FROM THE STEADILY INCREASING FIRE- HOTTER AND HOTTER GROW THE FLAMES- BUT THE TWO FRIENDS KEEP UP THE FIGHT WHILE THE DOOMED SHIP DRIFTS ON THROUGH THE NIGHT-

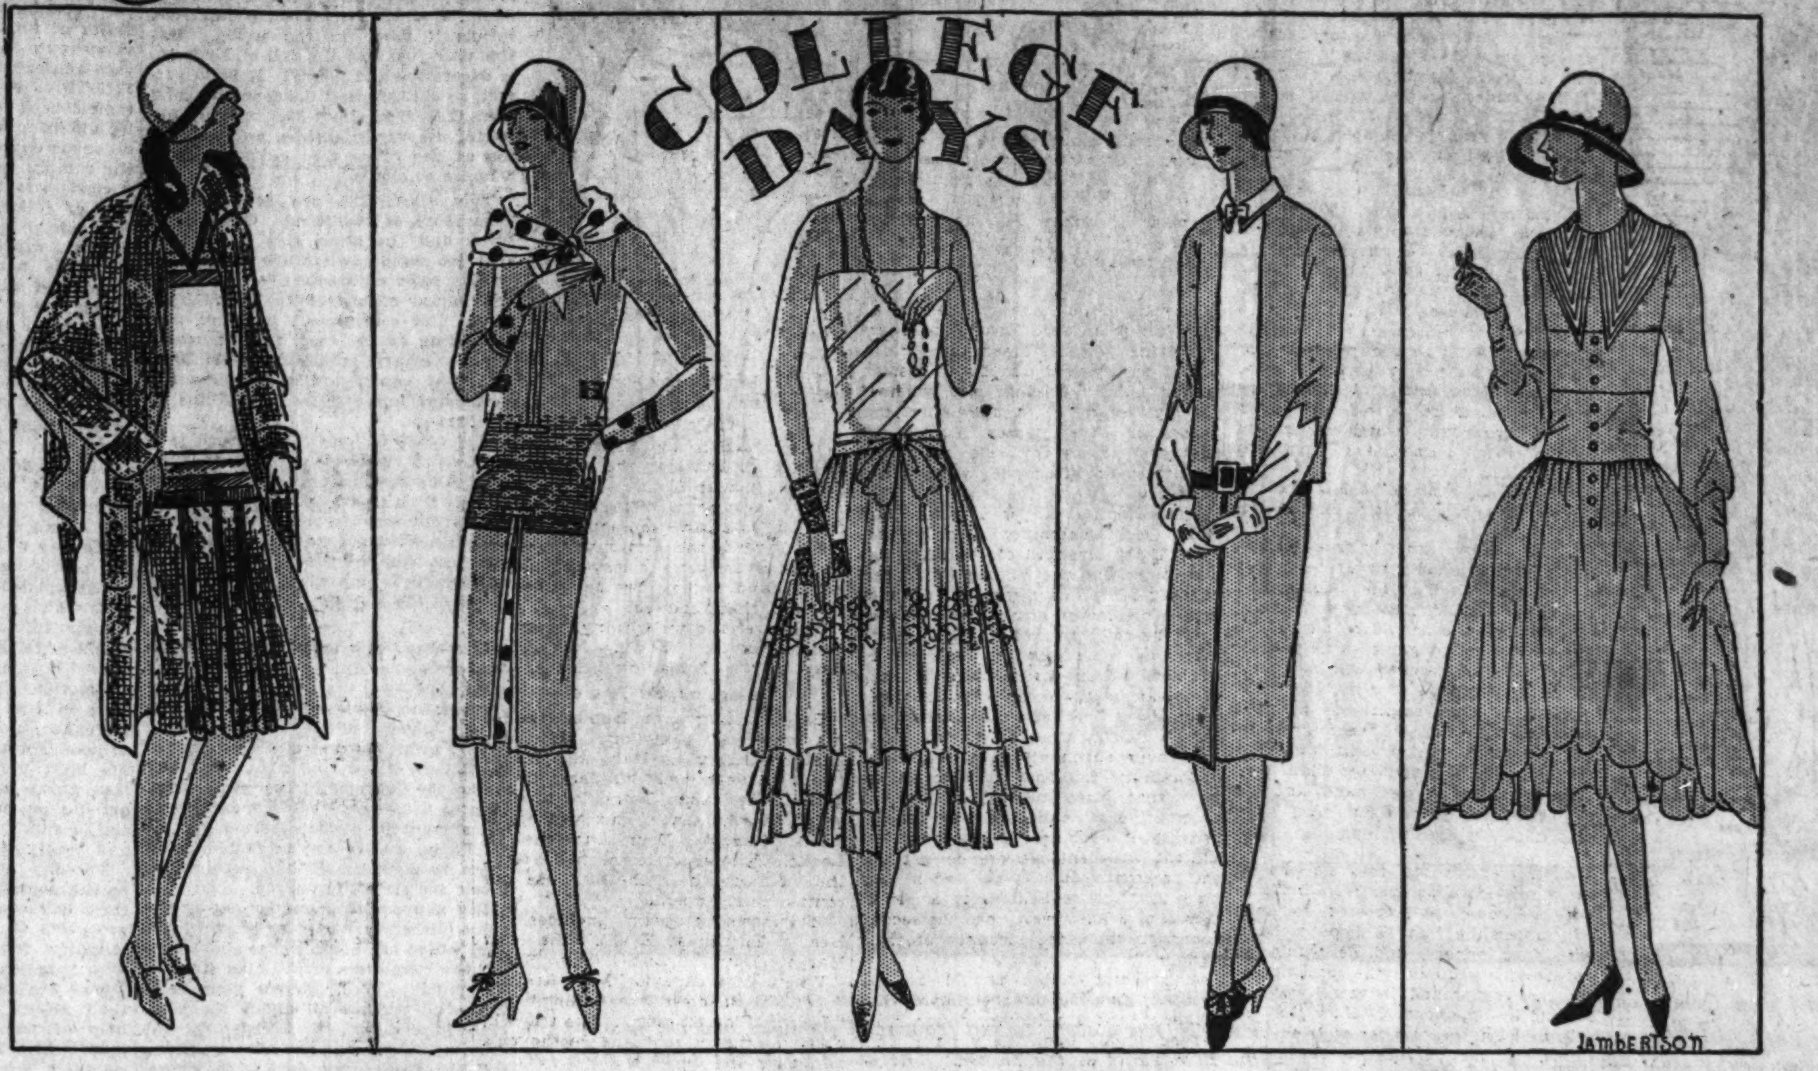
The College Girl Collects Her Wardrobe

Here Are Costumes for Outdoor and Indoor Events, and Suggestions for Others.

By Corinne Lowe.



At the left a smart tweed ensemble is completed by a sweater in harmonizing tones.

Next, a charmingly youthful frock from Beer is developed in wool crepe combined with figured silk and stitched in original fashion.

Fourth, a suit from Jenny is here executed in blue rep in combination with white crepe de chine blouse.

Last, a taffeta period frock from Francois is set off with a cavalier collar of white organdy trimmed with soutache.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—There is one gruesome situation which even the gloomiest of Russian novelists have overlooked. It is that of being the father of three daughters all in college at the same time. What a pity! Can't you imagine Turgenieff, Tolstoi & Co. extracting the last precious bit of morbidity from poor Paterfamilias Smith or Brown trying to provide an adequate college wardobe for Phyllis, Cressida, and Amaryllis?

Yes, Alma Mater presents a tremendous challenge to Paterfamilias. One daughter in college is a sufficient tax on the average resources. But if you had three working simultaneously for a degree—well, let us call it the third degree for Paterfamilias and let it go at that.

Now to see these dear young things scampering about on the campus one doesn't dream of the expense involved in their wardrobes. One says, "Well, after all, they dress altogether in sports clothes." And, of course, too, this is partially true. Sports clothes are undoubtedly the backbone of the modern college woman's wardrobe. Yet even this is no simple undertaking for the father of the college woman. Not when you consider that the candidate for B. S. or B. A. must have this type of costume for two seasons and for a variety of sports, both passive and active.

Hockey, tennis, golf, gymnasium, swimming, often horseback riding—all these present separate sartorial necessities. Only occasionally are costumes for active sports interchangeable. And when one takes into consideration the need for football and motoring togs it will be noted by even a bachelor that the collegiate sports wardrobe is an impressive item in itself.

And, after all, the sports wardrobe must be supplemented by many other types of clothes. Two or three dance frocks and one evening wrap are the least one can do for a young woman whose holidays are compounded of "proms" and whose frequent week-end visits are bound to involve a dance. The afternoon receptions of the faculty and the same week-end visits impose an equal necessity for one or two "dress up" daytime frocks. And these latter, frequently donned for the dinner in college halls, are completed by a third genre of costume—that which is donned for the Saturday in town.

Naturally, the problem here is the same as that which brings untimely furrows to the brow of even those sisters who do not have to meet the extensive social and athletic schedule of the undergraduate. It is that of condensation. How shall we make half a dozen costumes so overlap that they will do for a dozen occasions?

In the matter of evening clothes such condensation is impossible. But in daytime attire a great deal may be done by three agencies. One of these is the fur coat. Another, the cloth ensemble. A third is the separate skirt. If you add to this economical trio a color scheme built sedulously about one tone you are bound to obtain a satisfactory solution to a vexing problem.

As we all know, the college woman's fur coat costs almost as much as her tuition. At least, it should. For here is a detail in which there is no good of skimping. The fur coat is the exterior which the college woman presents most regularly to the outside world for the major part of her college term and it is important that it should be as costly as one's purse can buy.

There are some privileged undergaduates who command two of these garments—one for dress and one for sport. Since, however, no such formality is demanded of the college woman as of her sisters beyond the halls of learning, it is quite possible to have a compromise wrap. Leopard, shaved lamb, caracul—here are the salient pelts to be recommended for general service. All three of these furs will do equal duty by football game and the afternoon in town.

I, myself, am of the opinion that next winter the shaved lamb sports coat will be just as smart as it was throughout last winter and I think that if I, myself, had a daughter on her way to the sheepskin I should be tempted in favor of the lambskin—a lovely beige one trimmed perhaps with a soft fur or else left to its own devices. However, with economy in mind, I should certainly be swayed by the enduring qualities of leopard, for I have always said that leopard coats should be handled by the hardware stores—there's really no wearing them out.

Having selected one of these two pelts, I should then go farther along the tones dictated by their coloring. That is to say, I should build the wardrobe of this hypothetical daughter of mine on the key of beiges and tans. In these tones would be the tweed ensemble which I mentioned second in my list of economical factors.

The advantages of such an ensemble as we are showing at the extreme left are, of course, obvious. Wear it with a harmonizing crêpe de chine blouse and in those autumn days before the fur coat is mustered out, this ensemble is perfectly good form for the Saturday in town. Wear it with a sweater and it will serve any outdoor sports occasion.

Another advantage to this type of costume is that one may dissolve the partnership between wrap and skirt without doing violence to any fashionable instinct. In the intermediate season that tweed coat may be worn over the one piece frock of any kind—from the simple sports model to the frock for a day in the city. Similarly, the skirt with its sweater is ideal for a tramp in the country or over the links.

That tweed skirt will, of course, have many little companions. One or two of marocain crêpe, for example, in some tone of beige that will consult the possibility of being worn with the tweed coat of the ensemble. These crêpe skirts will in themselves possess two alternatives of action. They may be worn either with matching jumper or with some kind of sweater. Right here, indeed, one may say that through the possession of several separate skirts with numerous sweaters and blouses it is easy to do away with a number of one piece frocks.

Yet there are certainly many delightfully youthful one piece frocks that tempt us from the sweater-jumper-separate skirt trust. For example, what could express better the spirit of youth than our second model from the left—this little frock from Beer made of light blue wool crêpe and trimmed with polka dotted silk crêpe and stitched in the most ingenious fashion with black silk?

And naturally there must be at least one afternoon dress for the inevitable afternoon receptions of the college year. There are lovely little models of crêpe—often finished with the bolero—for this occasion and there are also creations of the stiffer silks. Period frocks of taffeta, for instance, are worn by many smart young collegians of an afternoon, and in support of this fact we point to the model at the extreme right.

Here is an imported frock from Francois which may be developed either in navy blue or in a lovely tone of rosy beige. Its distinguishing features are the cavalier collar of white organdy trimmed with soutache braid to match the gown and a skirt distended at the hip line, scalloped about the hem and dipping farther in the back than in the front. Notice, also, the seaming of the fitted corsage, the original formation of the sleeves, and the self covered buttons.

For the dance frock we cannot overlook the present fashionable emphasis upon tulle. All of the other favored media of yore are still present. Taffeta and chiffon and georgette are ever with us. But the college woman is almost bound to include in her evening curriculum some such tulle creation as we illustrate in the center. All sorts of degradé effects are still in active circulation and so this gown is made of three tints of green shading from the lightest of sea foam to a lovely emerald. Around the skirt you see an inset band of ciré gold fabric in floral design and the metallic touch is repeated in the simple girdle.

For the intermediate season a trig tailored suit set off with a fox scarf will render all its usual returns to the college woman. As an alternate to this classic tailleur we find many charming and youthful models completed by a bolero. To this latter group belongs the Jenny model of navy rep shown fourth. This suit with its white crêpe blouse finished by a tie of self material under the boyish collar and by a red suede belt is excellent for early autumn wear and in the winter, of course, it may be worn under the fur coat.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

In the Latest Modes the Scarf Is Ever Present, Lending a Charm and Grace to the Feminine Wearer

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—In days of old when knights were bold and barons held their sway, knights used to go into battle or on their bold adventures with their ladies' scarfs decorating their helmets. Any guide you take along on your visit to the chateaux of the Loire will tell you this, and will add that the scarf on the helmet showed that the knight was in the good graces of the lady who gave the scarf. And in the quaint parlance of the day, this scarf as a gift from a lady to her knight was called a gage.

Here, today, in this twentieth century when aviators do the boldest deeds of prowess that the daily newspapers register, ladies wear their scarfs, themselves. The scarf is still a symbol of grace, and how well a woman wears it is a gage of how smart she is. Of course, there are scarfs and scarfs. Some of them take a good deal of wearing, and some are easy to wear, some of them seem to grow out of garments and drape or flutter about the wearer. Some of them seem to ooze into necklines in the most complicated and intriguing folds. Some are mild and modest in their colorings, and some combine colors that give an effect like the cymbals, the cowbells, the five bottles and triangles in a well equipped jazz band.

We saw a deep red scarf, during the season, that had an effect considerably like a big bass drum. And then there are little wispy, pale colored chiffon scarfs that float and weave around their wearers just the way a piccolo tune sometimes comes out of the orchestra and rivets our attention for a moment. All of which goes to say that it's the clever woman who knows how to harmonize her scarf and the wearing of it with her own personality and with the particular costume with which she wears it.

By far the most frequent scarf is the one that is separate from the costume, yet related to it by strong bonds of color, texture and size. Paris offers an enormous variety of these. There are the Rodier scarfs printed with gay daisy designs or landscapes, which illuminate sports costumes with their subtly brilliant colors. There are others of kasha, patterned with plaid designs, or Persian trees and animals. There are yet others knitted of that remarkably glossy soft kasha wool in honeycomb or zig-zag patterns.

And there are immense soft scarfs that can serve as a beach bournous, if one wishes. There are lace ones, oblong, square or circular, and often their openwork tissue is shot with gold threads that make them sparkle like the dew at night (which is the proper time to wear them). There are scarfs patterned in gray and black, or beige and brown, or blue and white to match the two color hats milliners are offering us this year. There are also some in three colors.

It is a three color scarf that appears on our second figure. It comes from Chanel, originator of the tricolor scheme, and the scarf is absolutely a twin to the coat lining, which bears the same harlequin checks in red and beige as the scarf does. This costume is one of the most striking and one of the loveliest which has come from the hand of this great designer. The coat, with its fine cross workings, and the dress with its slenderizing panels of plaiting running from shoulder to hem, are both of red crêpe marocain.

The slender line is also stressed by the pattern of scarf and lining. You see how the red and beige squares are arranged in rows that lead the eye down and up, down and up. The way that scarf is draped about the neck also contributes to the slender effect. It is knotted in one loose tie under the chin and the two pointed ends hang down, crossing the upper belt (you will notice that the frock has three belts, I hope) and mounting up towards the shingle back of the neck in a line which would make even a short neck look longer. This drooping line, which echoes the curve of the chin is one of the most effective and devastating devices which fashion has given us of late years and nothing but a scarf will give it. So the moral to that (as the white queen said) is "Watch your scarf line."

Our first figure shows a scarf of quite a different temperament, from Callot. It is as long and slim and lissome as the heroine of a best seller. It begins its career at the hem of the coat that it ornaments, and it rises rapidly in the world [just like the hero of a Henty book] till its gets to the neckline. Then it turns to the left [though few Henty heroes have even a moment's divergence] but this is only to allow it to turn to the right again, and then it takes a fall that brings it down in the world. But that fall, just like the fall of Niagara, is decorative and useful. It is so perfect, so skillful, that it keeps admiring eyes flickering about the wearer, following its varied course, and marveling at the grace that eminates from a figure so clothed.

This scarf, like the coat that it ornaments, is two-faced. One side is black and the other side is blue, so that its supple twists are dramatized by the color contrasts that appear in the varied course of the scarf's career. The coat, itself, is black, and the lining of the coat, that shows in narrow revers at the front is blue, and that contrast also stresses the horizontal line, which is the line of slenderness.

The scarf on our third figure is a twin scarf, for there are two of it, as Aunt Dinah said about the new born twins. Both grow symmetrically from the parent stem, which is the blouse. Madeleine Vionnet made the dress, and with her inmitable skill she cut the twin scarfs in one with the twin front pieces of the blouse.

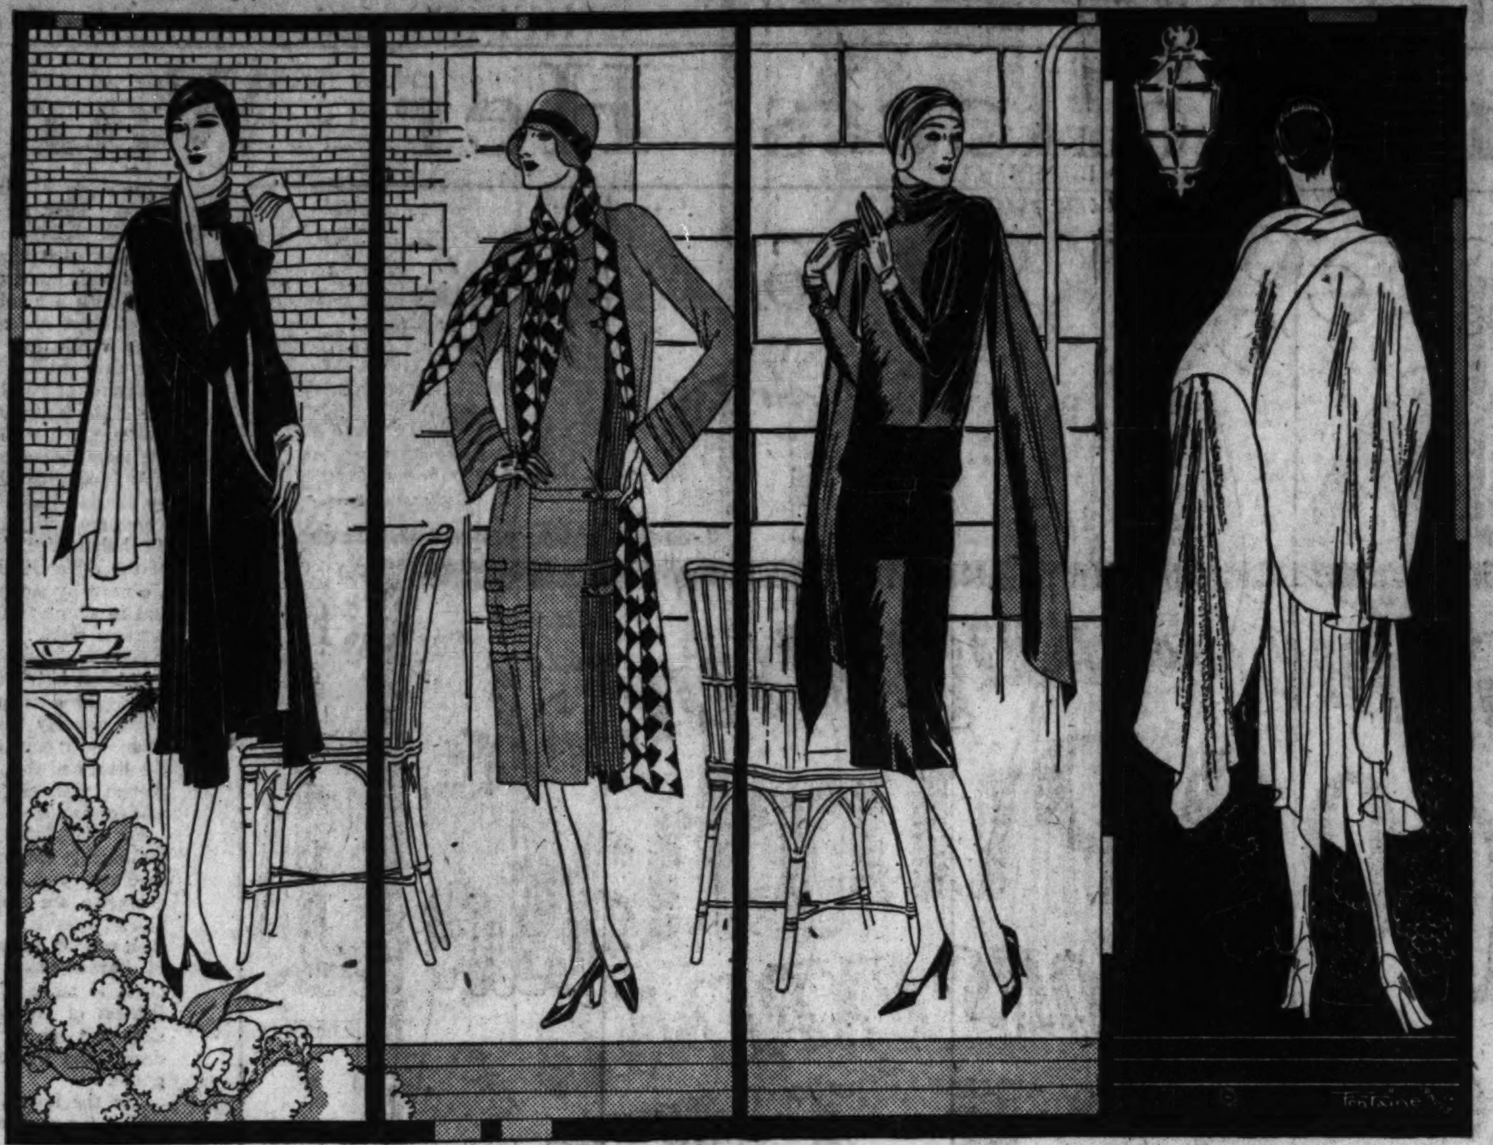
Like many of Vionnet's most marvelous creations, this model is of one color, but two textures. The upper part of the blouse and the skirt are of the glossy side of that versatile fabric, crêpe satin. The sections of the blouse below and above the belt are of the dull side of the crêpe satin. This is a masterly solution of one of the current problems of dress, for, as we know, curves are in fashion, and there is no material like satin faced fabric for stressing curves.

But suppose that one is just at the point [either near banting or still banting] where one doesn't care about having the roundness of the hips stressed too much. Well, there's your solution—full texture all about the hips, making a decorative division in the dress and flattening the hips, in effect, and about the upper part of the dress, about the arms, and about the cleverly slender folds of the skirt there is the gloss of the satin, stressing the roundness of the form. The scarf, of course, is of brilliant satin texture on one side, and of crêpe texture on the other—both of the scarfs are, I mean.

Our last and most intricate scarf illustration is a scarf wrap from Cheruit. Our artist has shown you better than I can describe the marvelous way that the four round end scarfs meet, and cross, and fall in melting folds. These are of georgette, patterned with little golden moons—O, more moons than you can see after a night in Montmartre.

The foundation, which shows in pointed end plaits, is of rust colored georgette. This wrap has a number of virtues. Personally, we think it is one of the most sterling solutions of what to wear over a drooping hemmed evening gown.



A coat and scarf from Callot are shown at the extreme left. Both are of black crepe lined with blue crepe which shows in the narrow revers of the coat and in the supple twisting of the scarf.

Next, a Chanel ensemble of red marocain with a scarf matching the coat lining, which is patterned in harlequin checks of red and beige. The scarf, worn high at the back of the neck and loosely knotted with falling ends, is a smart touch.

Third, an afternoon gown of black crepe satin, from Madeleine Vionnet, has a scarf falling from each shoulder, and cut in one with the two fronts of the blouse. The dull side of the satin is used for the section about the hips, and shows in the inner sides of the scarf.

Last, a scarf wrap from Cheruit is made of round-end scarfs, combined as only Madame Wormser, designer of that house, can combine irregular forms to make a perfect whole. The scarfs are of moon-patterned georgette over a rust colored georgette foundation.

Born in August? Expect Much

Marion Meyer Drew's weekly articles are presented solely for the entertainment of readers. Separate answers to individual questions cannot be given.

By Marion Meyer Drew.

TODAY marks a birthdate for those who celebrate on Aug. 5, which inaugurates a year full of strange occurrences, sudden shifts of fortune, and mysterious developments in both business and private affairs which cannot fail to brand 1928-'29 as a period worthy of being remembered long into the future for its differences from the average run of occurrences and events. Possibly the coming twelve months will not be as fortunate for the sons and daughters of this date where money matters are concerned, for the planet Jupiter, which governs material fortunes, is not strongly aspected for them just at present and they will experience a time when matters will seem much depressed and delayed.

This, however, will be a temporary condition, and the attention at this time must be directed to the really remarkable circumstances which surround them in the field of thought and spirit. Probably this set of happenings will take place about the last of October and the entire month of November; the month of March, 1929, will be an eventful time, also.

Monday will be a birthday much like the preceding one in the unusualness of its conditions and the suddenness with which events will turn about into strange influences which will blend to produce tendencies never before imagined by these people.

Emotional affairs for those people born on Aug. 6 will be highly exciting. Here, too, money matters may not be so good, for the brilliant Jupiter hides his light under a bushel as far as this group is concerned; but travel, artistic or professional interests, social or family affairs will all be active and highly diverting.

Tuesday and Wednesday also will be the doorways to eventful years for their children, slightly better in their prospects for financial progress, particularly for the women connected with these dates. Men who claim the 7th or 8th as birthdays will find that their affairs will be benefited by the help of women related to them or upon whom they may depend for assistance.

The fortunate period of the coming year seems to be around the spring months of 1929, but this is decided by the individual time of birth and cannot be stated in a general article with accuracy. I would consider the last of April and the first part of May fortunate for all this group, however.

The 9th of this month may introduce a rather dull year—accidents or injuries to the limbs seem among the coming possibilities, and precautions to avoid such things would be wise, the winter months being rather dangerous.

Those who celebrate on the 10th need to watch out for poor judgment and hasty conclusions in their vital interests, for while their business affairs may seem at first glance to be all right there is grave danger of impulsive acts which will sadly confuse all the important matters of impulsive acts which will sadly confuse all the important matters [illegible] present period in their lives. [illegible] of this date have little luck [illegible] them, and men whose anni[illegible] falls upon this date will suffer [illegible] fortunes through the women connected with their affairs.

The last day of the week—[illegible]—is a birthday which [illegible] again to shower striking events [illegible] its children. These tendencies [illegible] center about emotional and affectional affairs, and the results of these influences will be noticeable and quite extraordinary. The time for these activities is due about the middle of September, but the entire winter and spring will be sensational, depending upon the individual's moment of birth, as is often the case in a horoscope. All these people must be extremely careful in affairs of the heart this year, for deception and concealment will be common.

Those of us whose birthdays come at other times of the year will find this week a period of rather changeable, somewhat pleasant everyday interests, doubtless tending toward social or domestic activities and good for women's affairs and home matters. It should be a favorable time for those born near the first of May or the last of December and first half of January; it should also favor those whose births fall near the first five days of September, but to a lesser degree.

The position of Uranus at this time should stir the interests of those born near the last week of March into great confusion, which they would do well to disregard as much as possible; likewise those born near the last few days of June. Saturn, too, will oppress the group born near the middle of December or the first week of that month; they should watch their health and avoid new business ventures.

These influences will be noticeable in the affairs of Newton D. Baker, Heywood Broun, William S. Hart, and Helen Keller; while Norma Talmadge, Mary Astor and John T. McCutcheon will find this a very good time for new projects or alliances.

OLD IDEALS AND MODERN LIF

"Should a Woman Tell?" Here Are Some Answers—an Actual Case, and One from Fiction

By Doris Blake.

TO one of the "advanced" type of girl to whom the word conventions means something that ought to be consigned to the junk heap, the question "Should women tell?" would be met with a loud guffaw.

"Tell WHAT?" she'd probably say.

Yet such is the constitution of this great country of ours that there are people within it who ask if a woman should reveal a dark stain on her past life. Yes, and they call it a stain.

In the face of so much irregular living around us, so many queerly distorted valuations of people played up in print, and so much sloughing off in the matter of religious convictions, it is a wonder that the query repeats itself with the frequency it does.

Or is it? What is it that brings a woman face to face with the question when she is the one to answer it who, at the same time, might dismiss the problem lightly were a friend of hers involved?

How do you explain a Miss X whose identity will be no further revealed? She was one of the early victims of that after-the-war period when the advanced young moderns started throwing their hats over the mills with brazen abandon. She played about in a group that stood for freedom, the kind of freedom that is now being widely labeled at its own proved license and liberty. And while she wasn't one of the predatory females to whom any woman's husband was her property for the getting, she roamed wide of the standards set her by her excellent mother.

She talked of the shackles of sentiment, of the unadulterated folly of saving one's self for a man who might come and who might not come, and she laughed at the old fashioned ideals and practices.

She Got a Job.

Bored, as one is bound to be in a group where the practice of ideals must be done secretly if done at all, she was persuaded into some work, the nature of which was to bring her into contact with an altogether different kind of people. After a time this contact brought a man into her life.

The man subscribed to the conventions she had been familiar with in her youth. That is, in his personal life. But in his social contacts he gave the impression of being one of those broad minded, understanding souls whose motto is to live according to his ideals and let the other fellow live according to his.

So the girl and this man, at her invitation, accepted members of the old group as companions on occasional evening celebrations. Their ways of living were openly discussed by the man and the girl, and the fact that one of the young women was known to be carrying on an illicit affair was simply dismissed with the gesture that such things do go on in modern society. That action, which is the point of my story, is still pretty close to the girl discussed.

In spite of this broad understanding of human nature (as such alliances are explained) when it came right down to marrying the man, also of an understood deep sympathy with human life and its frailties, Miss X underwent a complete nervous collapse brought on through worry over whether she should tell of her past indiscretions.

With other people's moral fitness she was unconcerned. But when it came to the big issue of marriage, herself, she reverted to the old fashioned ideals about woman's chastity. It wasn't fear of being found out, she honestly confessed. It was a reversal to her mother's standards and measuring her own fitness against them as wife and mother of the man's children.

And Now in Fiction.

It's a bit curious, too, in a day when the market is flooded with literature expressing this great broad-minded attitude toward human frailties (sex, of course) there should come from the pen of Homer Croy a novel called "Caught" with the theme: "Should women tell?"

Connie Webb is living in a small town, happily married and the mother of two youngsters. Her adored and adoring husband is about to be elected to the board of directors at the country club. At 30 it was an honor for Walter. An exemplary young couple—the Webbs.

On the eve of the important election at the irreproachable club Connie runs into Ed Floto.

There is a flashback of eight years when Connie was 20 and dreamed of a career. She had a voice. She went to New York. There, instead of conquest, she found the tragedy which silently stalks the streets of New York—loneliness. A girl student urged here to live in Greenwich Village. There she met Floto, a vagabond scene painter. He brought life and living to discouraged, lonely Connie.

Not So Beautiful.

"At first she told herself that it was very beautiful—two people who loved each other, she going to her singing and he to his studio, but soon she knew it wasn't beautiful. It was squalid, the dodging of people, the pretenses, the subterfuges. She went back to her home town and married Walter.

"Deeply and intensely Connie wanted to confess the cheap and sordid misstep she had made in New York; the words trembled on her lips and then as she looked at Walter, so genuinely stirred, so deeply repentant of his own small sins, so eager for his absolution, she could not bring herself to utter the damning words. The next day it had been harder.

"During the first few months she had thought of it often; time after time she had framed the words, but when the actual moment came she could not utter them. After a time she had decided not to tell him at all. There was no danger; no one in their world knew; she was perfectly safe.

"And now, suddenly, Floto."

The torture of the woman's soul, now filled with the deadly fear of being found out and the agonies suffered for Walter's broken faith in the one person he trusted more than any other on earth are pages of misery that countless other women have gone through.

So far as the solution of the query about whether women should tell or not is concerned—the answer appears to be, as one clever writer put it:

"She will be damned if she does and damned if she doesn't."

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

FOR a sports dress made of printed pique this pattern, No. 3,291, seems especially adapted. The chemisette could be made of a plain silk pique, and the result should be a smart and inexpensive dress. Bodice and skirt are cut separately and joined at a low waistline—a narrow belt of the chemisette material covering the joining. The sleeves are long and at the wrists are gathered into narrow bands that stand out beyond the fastening, instead of lapping in the usual manner.

The two piece skirt is quite plain in the back, while in the front it is pressed in youthful plaits and stitched to the bottom of the bodice. Instead of the usual straight line across the bottom, this bodice is cut in a point either side of the center and the plaits in the skirt come exactly under these points.

Two surfaces of crêpe satin, printed and plain sheer crêpe, printed and plain silk crêpe, printed and plain crêpe de chine, men's silk shirting fabric, printed linen, challis, washable silk crêpe, and georgette crêpe are smart suggestions for this chic design.

Two pieces of the chemisette are cut, and laid, right sides together. They should be carefully basted so they won't slip out of place. Then mark with a basting thread the line down the center where the opening is to be. Stitch from the neck on one side down to the end of the marking, then on up to the neck on the opposite side of the basting. Begin at the neck stitching about three-eighths of an inch from this basting, bringing the stitching to a point at the bottom end, just below where the basting ends, and so on, in the same way up the opposite side. Cut between the lines of stitching, and turn the chemisette right side out. Baste the stitched edges carefully so that the seam will be exactly on the edge.

This should be well pressed before going farther. Perforations on the chemisette pattern show just how much the edges are to be turned in, and this is the next step. Then the chemisette is pinned and basted to the front bodice piece, being careful to match notches or perforations. Stitch it to the front, stitching close to the turned in edge, and put a second row in about one-quarter inch inside the first one.

After the shoulder and underarm seams are finished, stitch the collar pieces together, turn right side out and press, then baste to the neck of the dress, first pinning the middle back of the collar to the middle back of the neck of the dress, then pin in place at each end. Of course this refers to the outer collar section. Baste and stitch in a wrong side seam, then press this seam up towards the collar and hem the opposite edge down over the neck seam across the back—first stitching the inside collar part to the inside edge of the chemisette, and pressing this seam open flat.

Pattern No. 3446 is for an unusually pretty little bloomer dress for small tots. The dress is sleeveless and there are only two major parts to the pattern. Front and back are cut in at a shallow yoke depth, and the lower slashed edge is laid in tiny tucks. Then the slashed parts are seamed together. A piping may be set in this seam, and it must be a narrow one at the armhole end, running off to a point at the opposite end.

An especially strong way to fix this sort of seam is to take a strip of the dress material, cutting it a little longer than the slash and about three-quarters of an inch wide. Turn in all four edges, baste it to the dress on the wrong side, and stitch close to the edge on the four sides. Then have a similar piece for the right side of this slash, making it a fraction of an inch longer and wider than the one underneath. Baste this and stitch on all four edges. Sometimes this upper piece is made of a contrasting color, or else the dress material is used, and a cross stitch design embroidered through the center, or else the tiniest single featherstitching outlining the edge.

The neck and armholes are finished with a narrow binding, and the bottom of the dress with a deep hem. The pattern shows clearly how the small bloomers are cut and made. Dimity in a sprigged flower pattern, voile in an orchid, peach or light blue shade, or flesh colored crêpe de chine will make up prettily, while for play select candy striped cotton broadcloth, chambray, gingham, or printed sateen.

Pattern No. 3,316 is a most attractive design for a dress for every day occasions. It shows a smart arrangement of a box plaited skirt and a comfortable neckline in diagonal effect, finished with a youthful collar. The long waisted bodice gives the idea of a hip yoke, and the narrow belt is most cleverly made to slip through a slash at the left edge of the right front. Two materials can be used with good effect, using something contrasting for the collar, belt, and cuffs. Printed silk crêpe, plain and figured georgette crêpe, shantung, wool crêpe, crêpe satin, silk pique, and the noncrushable linen are interesting suggestions for its development.

Women the World Over

Of the nearly 800,000 agricultural workers in England and Wales, more than 100,000 are women and girls.

Mrs. Melvin Gemmill has just been appointed as the first woman special deputy sheriff in Baltimore, Md.

In order to earn money to swell the exchequer of their club, members of the Woman's Civic club of Walsh, Colo., have been making billboards and painting them and putting them up as well.

In Victoria, Australia, the law fixes the salaries of women at four-fifths of the salary paid to men filling similar positions.

Dr. Ida Mellen of the New York aquarium is probably the only woman in the country who practices the profession of physician to fishes.

Perfect Day at the Fair Awaits 100 Youngsters

By Sally Joy Brown.

HERE'S a glorious time, girls and boys, for our next party! A wonderful ride in the country, rides, shows, everything you want for a perfect day, because we're going to visit the big Central States Fair at Aurora, August 16, a week from next Thursday.

Think of what fun that will be for all of us! First there's the ride out we'll take in motor busses. It's through some of the most beautiful country around Chicago—hills, woods, beautiful farms and picturesque towns. It is just long enough to be satisfying, and not so long that we'll get tired. And then when we get to Aurora there'll be more fun than you could ask and we'll see everything our day will let us.

The Central States Fair, you know, is the biggest thing of its kind in this part of the country. There'll be hundreds of the finest animals, exhibits of model aeroplanes, machinery, furniture, and dresses that girls and boys made in school, and a style show. The Midway has 64 shows and rides and we'll visit all that we can. There'll be a circus, too, with wild animals, acrobats, trapeze performers and clowns.

So you can see what fun we'll have and all that you must do to share in it and be included as a guest is to write me a winning letter. I can take a hundred girls and boys and all I want to know is which hundred girls and boys think they will like this party. So start your letters now, tell me anything that will show why you'd like this party especially. Give your full name, street address and age, and mail the letters in time to reach me next Thursday morning at the latest. Of course, the sooner the better. The names of the winners will be in next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

Now here are the names of my hundred guests to see Jackie Coogan and the other great acts next Thursday, Aug. 9, at the Uptown Theater. Your letter and invitations should reach you no later than Wednesday morning. If you do not receive it by that time, please telephone me at THE TRIBUNE.

For 70 Years the Largest Selling LAXATIVE PILLS in the World

A Laxative for Sluggish Systems

To Free Sufferers from Sluggishness, Which Often Causes Sick Headaches, Dizziness, Nausea, Biliousness, Indigestion, Bad Breath, Muddy or Sallow Complexion!

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are the oldest and most popular laxative pills sold today. It is also unmistakable proof of their merit that the same tiny little pure white pills, which Dr. Carter prescribed for his patients 'way back before the Civil War, are recommended today as the pleasantest, most natural and thorough treatment for Constipation.

DR. J. S. CARTER
Originator of the world-famous Carter's Little Liver Pills—Used by Five Generations as Quick Relief for Constipation and its Attendant Ills.

For seventy years of continuous service, this marvelous old formula has never been changed. Nor has the price been advanced in all this time. You pay the same for Carter's Little Liver Pills as did your grandparents and great-grandparents.

The tremendous and still growing demand for Carter's Little Liver Pills is responsible for maintaining the old low price. Imagine nearly 600,000 used today, and every day in the year. That will give you some idea of their popularity. Over 200,000,000 were sold last year in the United States and 24 foreign countries.

Dr. Carter was, perhaps, the first physician in America to recognize the superiority of a natural vegetable laxative over the old, violent mineral purgatives so generally prescribed in his day. He also saw the advantages of a concentrated formula which reduced the size of the pill, made it so much easier and pleasanter to take and, at the same time, permitted its use in graduated doses—according to the user's need.

● ● ● ● Actual Size of Pills

This idea was a distinct stride forward in the profession. The huge sized, unpleasant tasting, difficult-to-swallow pills which so many of the older generation well remember, simply went out of use and left Dr. Carter's Little Liver Pills the field to themselves.

To thousands today, the Carter trade mark—the familiar black crow pictured above—is as well known as our nursery rhymes. Imagine this old, old prescription still the leader in its field in spite of the scores of so-called remedies that followed in its wake. No formula has ever been developed that more thoroughly frees sufferers from Constipation and its attendant ills.

If you are constipated—if, due to Constipation, you suffer from Sick Headache, Dizziness, Nausea, Biliousness, Indigestion, Bad Breath, or if you have a muddy or sallow complexion, Carter's Little Liver Pills should quickly rid you of the trouble as they have thousands in the past half century and more.

Try these little sugar-coated pills today. Adults and children alike can take them with assurance of pleasant and thorough results—not the least bit violent like old-time purgatives. Carter's Little Liver Pills merely aid Nature to function as it would normally. You'll feel like a new person after your first trial.

Your Druggist sells Carter's Little Liver Pills in the same old, well-known red wrapper. Ask for the convenient pocket size container. The price everywhere is 25c for 40 pills. INSIST ON THE GENUINE.

The PEACE STONE by HENRY C. ROWLAND

THE STORY HITHERTO:

THE PEACE STONE is a priceless rose diamond, a traditional sacred talisman that has been in the custody of the French family of De Marsac for two centuries. Originally it was confided to a De Marsac on pilgrimage to Palestine by a dying holy man of a mystic order for delivery to Esteban Mordecay, Cadiz banker; but Mordecay had vanished, and the De Marsacs through the years sought the rightful heir to the jewel. The Comte de Marsac, present custodian of the stone, has a son, Vicomte Armand, French naval lieutenant, and two daughters, Jacqueline and Annik. Jacqueline is in love with Raoul de Rimbec, a distant cousin. Raoul calls on Easter Mordecay in Washington, posing as Armand. He announces that Easter has been proved heir to the jewel and that the comte wishes to present it to her. Easter voyages to France with her guardian, Wayne Carter, and Mrs. Carter. They are accompanied by Carter's son, Devlin, a nomadic savant. Easter accepts the diamond. Raoul abducts her and holds her and the Peace Stone aboard a fishing vessel for ransom. Devlin Carter charters a boat and, in company with Jacqueline, goes in search of Raoul and Easter. During a storm both vessels take shelter in an island haven. Raoul and Easter go ashore. Devlin finds them and, after a struggle, forces Raoul to surrender.

INSTALLMENT X.

A Sudden Turn of Events.

DEVLIN had not those properties of the popular hero who, through love of the chivalrous gesture, and a whelming conceit, endangers the heroine, his trust, himself. Emotional heroics had no place at all in Devlin.

A surge of phosphorescence just off the shore showed the dingey approaching. Devlin flashed his light. The mousse with that clumsy adroitness in boat handling typical of the Breton fisherman brought the little shallop into the bight and beached her.

"V'la, M'sieur."

"Les demoiselles are aboard?"

"H'oui, m'sieu."

"Get aboard," Devlin said to Raoul, and steadied him into the boat, then took an oar and helped the mousse shove off. As they cleared the beach a little a puff of colder air smote against them, striking in, as it seemed, at a different angle to that of the gale.

Coming first to the Grace-a-Dieu, Devlin directed the mousse to pull up alongside her. Devlin smote the high freeboard with the butt of an oar. Yves stuck his head up through the hatch.

"Qui, ca?"

"Your patron and the young lady are to sail back with me aboard the yac'," Devlin said. "You are a brave liar, Guillonec, but the next time you had better sweep loose buttons off your deck."

"Sacré!"

"The wind's hauling," Devlin said. "If it swings much more this berth will not be so good for honest fishermen."

"The gentleman owes me money," Yves said.

"I believe you, and the state owes you food and lodging in the prison at Quimper. One does not kidnap American young ladies."

"I knew nothing about that, m'sieur," Yves protested.

"Perhaps. Go back to your wife, bonhomme, and help her with the red cow and her new baby, and be thankful if you are not disturbed." Then to the mousse, "Allons-y."

The windy dawn did not show much improvement in the weather. The gale's force had if anything increased, and the bay was a frothing mass of tormented water.

In all humanity David had been obliged to free Raoul's wrists. Safe custody of his prisoner demanded that he be locked up in the tiny forecastle. This left the cabin to shelter the rest of them, including Jules and the moldy little mousse.

At noon the wind had hauled with a lightening sky, and in a trend soon to make what had been a safe shelter a precarious berth. Devlin was tempted to commandeer the Grace-a-Dieu but disliked the burden of watching constantly his prisoner and three men partisan to him, also a very resolute girl even more partisan.

Then in the middle of the afternoon the Grace-a-Dieu hauled out, made sail and stood away for the Odet river on what was now a broad reach, but might soon become a dead beat to windward.

Devlin waited, hoping that the gale might moderate. The prospect of another night where they lay was not only intolerable but dangerous. Both the girls were by this time thoroughly seasick from the wallowing about in the back swell. If the wind hauled northerly, there would be the risk of dragging on to the rocks.

He decided, therefore, about an hour before dark to haul clear and run in for Concarneau. Jules affirmed the boat to be equal to it, though they must get a proper mauling.

The trend of the wind enabled them to draw clear of the island without difficulty when the rough treatment began. The little yacht, somewhat of a racing type, with comparatively low freeboard, deep keel, flush decks, with a low trunk cabin and a shallow self-bailing cockpit, was swept continually.

In making the passage she must have suggested a miniature submarine with a sail rig, did such an anomalous craft exist. The mousse for the first time probably since his birth not so long before enjoyed more or less a thorough bath. Less, to judge from the obscene words in guttural Breton that poured through his infantile lips with each succeeding douche.

Thus, more under sea than on it, they made the run without mishap, and glided through the breakwater into shelter as darkness fell. Devlin sent the limp Easter and Jacqueline ashore to look for a car, himself remaining aboard with Raoul until transportation should be found.

Jacqueline tried to telephone the chateau for the Carters' big car. But the telephone wires were down from the gale, and no communication was possible. The cars for hire in the port were all in use. It was, therefore, nine o'clock before one was finally secured, this evidently a war cripple badly wrenched and strained and gassed.

About half a mile from the chateau this veteran was seized by so smothering an attack of asthma that it was unable to negotiate a fairly steep ascent. Devlin, impatient, suggested that they get out and walk the distance that was left. Their driver would be able, he hoped, to get back the old ruin, lightened of its load, and manage to get along on its two remaining valiant cylinders where the road was fairly level.

AS a promenade en auto the ride had been no more successful than that en bateau. Conversation languished, or rather it did not languish because there had been none from the start. Raoul was unbound, unarmed, and in close contact to Devlin all set for any desperate move.

Raoul seemed to have sunk into a lethargy. Jacqueline's Gallic blood, that was by nature passionate and swift, was overborne by Devlin's grim silence.

Yet she felt Easter to be the one hope of salvation for Raoul. Easter was obviously sorry for him. Sorry for her. Sorry about the whole wretched business.

And Easter after all was the one to make charges against Raoul. Devlin, as Jacqueline saw him, was no more than an inexorable captor. Something between a professional rogue catcher and an automatic steel jaw trap.

It is probable that Jacqueline had found occasion to urge on Raoul absolute passivity to whatever might now occur. Raoul for his part seemed utterly indifferent. Despite his self-sufficiency, he seemed sunk in the burden of those very qualities on which he may previously have felt himself to hold a sort of copyright.

It was dark and still windy as they started to walk the remaining distance to the chateau. The road was strewn with broken branches that testified to the violence of the gale. They reached the tall iron gates, and were about to ring the big bronze bell when Raoul, who had scarcely spoken since his capture except for a word or two at Concarneau with Jacqueline, said in a low voice: "Look."

"What is it?" Devlin asked.

"There's a car. The other side of the road, over against the hedge."

Peering through the dark, Devlin was able to distinguish the vague hulk of what looked to be a large sedan or limousine, partly hid a thick growth of genet that was covered with its yellow bloom. It seemed a curious place for a car to be left at that hour, apparently abandoned, and with its lights out.

Raoul walked over to investigate. Devlin had not subjected him to restraint since landing, partly because he trusted in his own ability to meet successfully any desperate offensive on Raoul's part, and even more because all reason dictated that Raoul would attempt nothing of the sort. Obviously, Raoul's one hope now lay in the clemency of Easter. And so far as an attempt merely to escape was concerned, Devlin no longer cared two sous whether Raoul escaped or not. It might even simplify the situation for them all. Revenge was not included in Devlin's sterner traits.

They reached the car and examined it in silence. Raoul said briefly: "This looks bad."

"Why bad?" Devlin asked.

"I know this car."

"Whose is it? Why do you say it's bad?"

"Because what I told Easter to persuade her to come with me was true. I overheard two men in the garage of the hotel at Pontivy talking about the Chateau de Marsac."

"What about it?" Devlin asked.

"One said, 'c'est bien isolé.' Why should a man mention the isolation of a property unless he wanted to buy it or had designs on it?"

"Then you think it's a mob after the diamond?"

"I do. This is the same car because I noticed that night that the rear mudguard had been freshly broken off at the after brace. Also, it was this make."

"Then you believe that gang in Washington has followed us?"

"It looks so to me. I think this all started with my cabin steward on the ship. He got a glimpse of the stone. I believe now that he was not my cabin steward by accident but detailed to follow Armand and steal the jewel. Somebody besides myself must have known his errand."

"IT seems to check," Devlin said slowly. "You called at our house and went to the embassy. I came home later with my luggage and a man detailed to watch mistook me for you. He saw me go for a ride and hung round Massachusetts avenue, where the bridle path comes out, to get me on the way back. When that missed fire they tried again that night at the house."

"Yes," said Raoul, "and getting the replica, they have followed us back here."

They had been talking rapidly in low tones. The two girls had crossed the road to join them in time to hear the last of what was said.

"You think there are robbers here?" Jacqueline whispered.

"Yes, if Raoul is telling the truth," Devlin said shortly. He was under stress to do some quick thinking. It occurred to him instantly that this gang of Apaches might have been working with or for Raoul and that he had seen fit to gyp them. It was possible, Devlin thought quickly, that Raoul might have impersonated Armand before this affair for certain nefarious dealings, had relations with a criminal mob of superior abilities, international operations. These crooks, still believing him to be Armand and suspecting him of treachery, might have followed them all, crossed on the same ship and he with the double purpose of settling their score with their presumable vicomte associate and securing the diamond.

Devlin now briefly stated this idea. "I believe you're a worse egg than I thought," he said to Raoul. "You've been working with a gang of apaches under the identity of Armand. They've come now to get you and the stone. Am I right?"

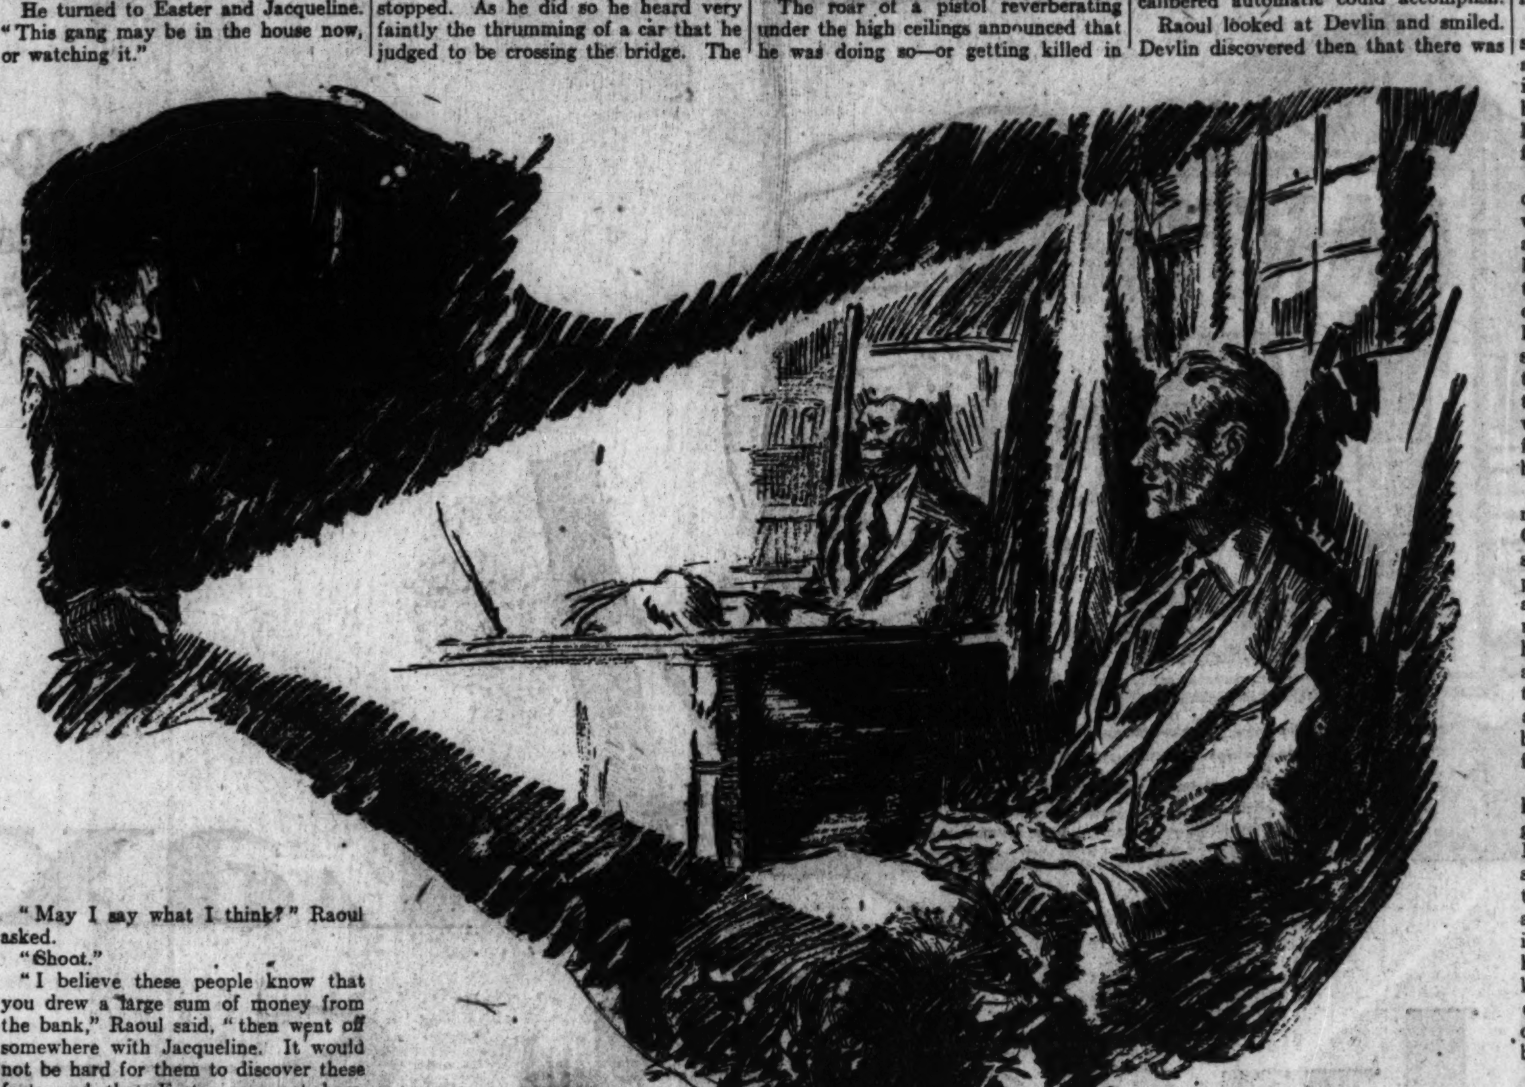
Raoul said nothing.

"Another reason for your wanting to clear out before they got you. Well here's your chance to get them, if we work close."

"Will you trust me?" Raoul asked.

"I wouldn't trust you on a bet," Devlin said. "I think you're a wrong un, but just now you're a wrong un in a jam. Besides I give you credit for two things. Your treatment of Easter and the fact that you chose not to steal the Peace Stone when you had a perfectly good chance."

He turned to Easter and Jacqueline. "This gang may be in the house now, or watching it."



A strange spectacle presented itself.

"May I say what I think?" Raoul asked.

"Shoot."

"I believe these people know that you drew a large sum of money from the bank," Raoul said, "then went off somewhere with Jacqueline. It would not be hard for them to discover these facts and that Easter was not here. If so, they would guess what actually happened: that you and Jacqueline went to ransom Easter and the jewel. So they are watching for your return."

Devlin considered this. The idea seemed to stand scrutiny.

"Then, for all we know, we may be watched now," Devlin said in a low voice.

"That's possible," Raoul agreed.

But an instant's thought told Devlin that this was probably not the case, thanks to their hired rattletrap having broken down so that they had come for the last mile quietly afoot. Considering the comparative isolation of the chateau it would scarcely occur to anybody that a young girl would be brought there at about midnight other than in a vehicle, especially as the roads were bad after the tempest. It would be the house itself and not its grounds that must be watched.

Devlin's decision was taken instantly. He said in a low voice to Easter: "Can you drive this car?"

"Yes. Any car."

RIGHT here in front of the grounds the road was level for about a hundred yards, then sloped down on a grade where a car could roll without power to the old stone arched bridge across the river. It seemed to Devlin that they ought to be able to shove the car along by hand until this gradient was reached.

"Come on," he said. "Let's shove her out on to the road."

With the two girls pushing and Devlin and Raoul twisting the wheels the car was rolled out on to the firm road.

They kept on until the top of the grade was reached, when the two girls got in. Devlin slipped off the satchel containing the ransom money and handed it to Easter.

"Take care of that," he said. "Drive into Quimper to the hotel; don't start the motor until you have to."

He and Raoul continued to shove the car along until slowly it gathered momentum and rolled of its own gravity. Easter looked back.

"Be careful, Devlin."

"Don't worry. We've got the edge now."

"Shall we send the police?"

"No. We can swing it alone. Why not?"

"There may be a band," Easter protested. "Why not the gendarmes?"

"Better for Raoul without."

"What do you mean?" Jacqueline asked tensely.

"Wait and see," Devlin answered briefly as the car gathered way.

For all his coolness Devlin was in a fever of anxiety. If Raoul were telling the truth about the car then here evidently were dangerous criminals lurking about and his father and mother in the chateau.

"Here's where we join forces, Captain," he said for the first time giving Raoul his naval title. "I'll take a chance on your shooting me because I can't see that it could get you anywhere. On the contrary, if you shoot square it may help your case a lot."

"Understood," Raoul muttered and examined the weapon.

"Remember you're shy three shots," Devlin said.

"Sapristi—you forget nothing."

"Follow me," Devlin said shortly.

They were at the angle of the wall. Raoul gave Devlin a lift up, then himself took the hand extended. They dropped quietly to the other side and started to pick their way stealthily through the park. This was composed of big trees, oak and beech and chestnut, cleared of underbrush and with patches of muguet, the lilies of the valley that in France do not require cultivation, the choice variety growing wild in the woods.

Presently the chateau loomed darkly across a strip of lawn, this selouse interspersed with arbustes of laurel and flowering shrubs. It was a better kept property than most old Breton ones in Finistere because of the family's solid prosperity. Also such a traveled one as might be expected of a race that for many generations had contributed naval officers, this ancestral home was to some extent modernized. Electricity had been led from the nearest line, but Devlin noticed that the house was plunged in darkness.

They had approached it on its western end and now at a distance of about one hundred yards Devlin stopped. As he did so he heard very faintly the thrumming of a car that he judged to be crossing the bridge. The sound was brought fitfully by the high wind that still roared through the treetops.

"Go round the house," Devlin said to Raoul. "Meet me by the stables. Keep under cover."

"Bon."

Raoul worked off to the side of the house that faced the river, Devlin passing round the front. There was now a little light from patches of clear sky over which great cloud masses were being driven. Still it would have been impossible to see any figure standing against the building itself, nor did Devlin think that he could be seen crossing the driveway. He was disturbed at the absence of any light at all from even one of the many windows.

Devlin reached the garage to find Raoul waiting there.

"I don't like the house being so dark," Devlin said; "even with wires down from the storm, there ought to be an oil lamp in the hall at least."

"Yes," Raoul assented.

"Let's circle it again, close to the wall of the house."

"If you wait here," Raoul said, "I will circle it, otherwise some watcher might get in the first shot because we do not want to risk firing at each other."

"Good sense," Devlin said. "Go to it."

He waited. That seed of sympathy planted in Devlin's breast when Raoul had mentioned sweeping in of a bad night ahead of an American convoy was germinating. After all, Devlin reflected, Raoul was not pure scoundrel. One could never tell about his sort of gentleman desperado, what might be his necessity born of some error that was not at its start so very great. At least Raoul had courage and a certain decency and when pinched in the trap he did not squeal. Raoul had offered no excuses nor apologies nor asked for mercy. Most of all he had not jumped eagerly at the fighting chance of grace, pardon.

IT seemed a long time before Raoul made his circuit. Devlin had let him go while himself waiting because he had thought it very probable that some watcher might be encountered and he wanted to give Raoul this chance. Devlin reflected grimly that at least he need not worry about the night marksmanship of this ally so recently his mortal adversary.

Raoul presently returned. "Nobody. But there is a flicker of light from behind the heavy hangings over the windows of the Comte's study."

"Did you listen?"

"Yes, but the windows are tight closed and there is a good deal of wind on that side. I could not have heard voices had there been any."

"All right. Let's try to get in."

They went first to the front door, to gain which it was necessary to mount the curved perron, heavy stone steps with an iron railing and a glass marquise over the stoop. Here Devlin paused, looked down then stooped and picked up a small white object that had caught his eye. It proved to be the stump of a thick gold tipped cigaret.

"My father does not smoke. What about the Comte?"

"Cigars only, and sometimes a pipe."

He tried the knob, very softly. The door was on the latch and swung in, Devlin entered, followed by Raoul. The antechamber was absolutely dark. Devlin closed the door softly behind him when he and Raoul as if in obedience to the same instinct moved quickly apart.

They had scarcely done so when they heard the murmur of a voice from somewhere back in the house. This came through a salon that opened off the antechamber at their right.

Devlin stood fast, listening. Raoul did otherwise. "Wait here," he said and swept past Devlin through the open door to the right. Devlin guessed that Raoul, familiar with the house, was making for the Comte's study. Devlin held himself in reserve. Here and now was Raoul's fighting chance to retrieve himself.

The roar of a pistol reverberating under the high ceilings announced that he was doing so—or getting killed in the attempt. Instantly another roar, as if an echo, then thunder like that of a storm bursting suddenly and the house struck in successive bolts, or a surprise attack on a general staff billeted in such a chateau during the war. The blasting outburst of quick firing made the separate concussions indistinguishable.

Throwing on his torch Devlin plunged through a dining room, not the one of ceremony but a more informal one, off one end of which was a glassed-in terrace. A swinging door went in to the pantry. Devlin burst through this and came to the Comte's study, to which the usual access was by the library.

A strange spectacle presented itself. Facing him gagged and bound in his desk chair was the Comte. Sprawled backward over the big buhl desk lay the figure of a man. Another body, prone, had fallen on the threshold of the door to the library.

But strangest of all was the position of Raoul. He was sitting in a big straight backed chair against the wall to Devlin's right as he burst in. Across his knees lay the body of a man in the position of a youngster about to be spanked. Raoul's two hands were gripping the carven lion heads on the arms of this chair against the back of which his head rested. His eyes were wide open, bright and alive, and they turned now to Devlin with an expression of amusement.

"Any more?" Devlin demanded.

Raoul did not answer. His gaze went to the Comte. Devlin rushed round the desk and tore the gag from the face of the old nobleman.

As if in answer to his question the Comte said in a dry croaking voice: "There were but three, m'sieur."

Devlin quickly loosed his wrists. He noticed as he did so that the Comte's face was bathed in sweat. There was an acrid smell of pungent smoke like burning paint. Looking down, Devlin discovered the fire poker lying on the parquet at the corner of the desk. Around this iron implement the waxed floor was smoldering and smoking. Devlin picked up the poker by the handle and placed it in the rack beside the hearth on which were some glowing coals.

"Raoul," said the Comte calmly, "is shot."

Love Conquers All

by Alta May Coleman

Devlin turned back to where Raoul was still sitting bolt upright in that tense attitude, the dead man across his knees. The body by the door moved convulsively, gave out a long sigh and was still again. Devlin disincumbered Raoul, observing as he did so that the head of the man who had fallen in so strange an attitude quite accounted for his immobility. There was a black powder smudge between his eyes.

"Raoul," said the Comte again, "may be a very bad fellow but he is a very good shot."

It looked so to Devlin. Three men in three shots so quick that their reports had blended almost in a single roar and each shot cleanly through the head—or at least as cleanly as a large calibered automatic could accomplish.

Raoul looked at Devlin and smiled. Devlin discovered then that there was a bullet hole in the upper part of his chest on the right side.

THE room was lighted by a big oil lamp of American manufacture in the middle of the desk—what was known before this form of lighting became almost obsolete as a Rochester burner. Also Devlin thought he understood the reason for Raoul's silence and immobility.

"That's right," Devlin said. "Keep still just as you are and don't try to speak. Might start coughing and hemorrhage. Hit anywhere else?"

Raoul made a slight negative gesture with his head. A rush of admiration for him swept through Devlin. The germinating seed bloomed, flowered.

Such a wound from a bullet of high velocity would be perforating and not necessarily fatal where no large vessels were torn. But the shock alone would be enough to cause collapse in most men. Evidently Raoul when shot had been standing in front of the big chair and had sunk back into it. But as he did so, it looked to Devlin as if he must have seized a man against him, emptied his pistol with the muzzle to the very face, then clinging to the body, dragged it down so that it fell across his knees.

"Stay as you are," Devlin advised, and turned to the Comte, who curiously enough was still sitting much as was Raoul, erect in the big desk chair.

"My ankles are bound, Mr. Carter," said the Comte quietly.

Devlin took a pair of big desk shears, stooped down and cut the ends of curtain cord by which the Comte's ankles were secured to the legs of the chair. He divided his admiration for Raoul, the scamp, with that for this old retired French naval officer.

"So they were all set to try torture? Burn you with the poker, sir?" Devlin said.

"Yes. They threatened to blind me unless I told them where to find the Peace Stone. You came just in time. I think I shall have to forgive this rascal. That was a bad trick he played on Armand. But I cannot believe that he would have dared come back here in time to save me mutilation if he had done any harm to my son."

"He had him shanghaied aboard a German bark, sir," Devlin said. "Are my father and mother here?"

"No, fortunately. This wretched affair that has turned out so differently from what I anticipated upset Madame Carter. They have preferred to go to the hotel in Quimper to wait for your news. Jacqueline and Annik are with friends at Pont-Aven. They felt constrained not only with your parents but with me their father."

"Are you alone in the house?" Devlin asked. "Where are the servants?"

"The maids' rooms are at the top of the house in the far wing from this. They sleep sound, these Bretonnes. Also the men servants who are lodged over the stables. You had better rouse my chauffeur, who sleeps over the garage, and send him for the police and a surgeon. The telephone wires are down from the storm."

Devlin went out immediately to do this. The chauffeur, a good sleeper, had not been awakened by the muffled concussions. Devlin told him briefly that the house had been attacked by thieves and Capt de Rimbec shot through the chest. He also instructed the man to go to the hotel and report to Mr. Carter what had happened.

Returning to the house he found Raoul in the same position, white, and his eyes closed but conscious.

"Raoul had better remain as he is, absolutely still until a clot forms," said the Comte. "I have heard that such perforating wounds of the chest sometimes heal immediately in the case of a strong man. He would be unconscious by now if it were to be fatal."

DEVLIN was inclined to agree with him. If there were much hemorrhage he thought it must by this time have manifested itself either in a fit of coughing and blood from the mouth or in Raoul's collapse. Taking his pulse, Devlin found it fairly strong.

"No stimulants," said the Comte. "Spirits in such a case might be a fatal error, engorge the blood vessels and provoke hemorrhage. Adrenalin is what he needs."

Raoul sat motionless. He seemed scarcely to breathe, was in fact making a conscious effort to keep his breathing shallow to strain as little as possible the damaged tissues and a right lung that must be collapsed from perforation of the pleura.

But there was more than mere precaution behind his utter stillness which was that of a statue, like one of the ancient Assyrian kings though beardless, straightly sitting on a meager throne that resembles a modern arm chair. Though his poise was not relaxed there was yet about Raoul a suggestion of infinite repose both mental and physical. Not the repose of the weary hand worker nor even brain worker but rather that of one eased from a crushing burden of ill foreboding.

Devlin, sitting informally on one corner of the big desk behind which the Comte had reseated himself, looked speculatively at Raoul. Where most people would have been solicitous about the condition of the wounded man, Devlin was reflecting that things had broken well for him. By nerve and surpassing skill, Raoul appeared to have shot his way out of his jam, as many a criminal has done before, but shot in the right direction in which few criminals have been so fortunate.

It looked as if the Supreme Arbiter had found worth enough in Raoul to give him another chance, employing Devlin himself as an instrument of sorts. Not only had they arrived in the nick of time but by Devlin's management of the affair holding himself in the background while permitting him to win his reclamation or get killed in the attempt, Raoul had rescued the Comte at the moment of crisis and thus bound that nobleman by a lien of noblesse oblige.

Raoul realized this, Devlin thought, and was for the first time in many days enjoying a beatific peace of mind. His wound, however serious, was, so long as it did not prove fatal, an added asset.

Something of this same sort evidently occurred to the Comte, a thinker, for he said presently to Devlin as if Raoul had been absent or unconscious:

"It is possible that I have greatly wronged this young man. You tell me that he caused Armand to be as the English say 'shanghaied' aboard a German bark?"

"Yes, sir. That is what he told me. I did not entirely believe him at the time, but now I am beginning to think that he told the truth."

"In the light of what has happened," said the Comte, "it would appear to be the truth. If he had dealt foully with my son he would scarcely have returned here barely in time to save me from torture and mutilation."

Devlin nodded. He saw no reason for telling the Comte that Raoul had returned under coercion and been given the leading rôle that he might retrieve himself, if he had the will and courage and ability. Possibly the Comte need never know the true facts at all.

"Considering the circumstances of which we are aware," the old nobleman proceeded in a judicial tone, "and continuing to ignore the rest, here is an hypothesis:

"Raoul, a relative, and the most intimate friend of Armand, goes with him to Bordeaux to wish him bon voyage. He is, of course, informed of all the details of Armand's errand to America. It would appear that he's informed of even more, that there is a band of Apaches likewise aware of it and determined to steal the diamond they believe to be in Armand's possession."

"I had not thought of that," Devlin said with perfect truth.

"Then consider the suite, the following events. Raoul contrives to get Armand shipped aboard this bark ready to sail and securing Armand's [illegible] and the replica impersonates [illegible] this errand. Still impersonating [illegible] to your deception, he returns with [illegible] to France. He comes here in the dead of night, gets access to mademoiselle, persuades her that the diamond is in danger of robbery and entices her away with him. He writes to ask a ransom for both. That on the face of it looks very bad. But what if he does this with a motive of which we are unaware?"

"Such as——?" Devlin queried.

"To lure away from the premises this dangerous band of Apaches, whose intentions he knows, and to save Armand, whom he had shipped off on the bark and assumed his identity."

"Your reasoning is ingenious, sir."

"Eh bien, why not? Would not such be the part of a valiant and devoted friend? One who trusts in his own resource but mistrusts Armand's? My son is a good officer but he is not quick. He has not the finesse nor the experience of Raoul, who was during the war a brilliant officer of our naval intelligence. He penetrated even to Germany, to Danzig, where he secured valuable information. He could cope with these voyous where Armand would have been a baby in their hands."

"You are yourself perspicacious, sir."

"But listen. Raoul evidently figures that these scoundrels are informed of his action in removing Easter and the Peace Stone and asking a ransom. Perhaps he managed that they be so informed. He counts on their awaiting your return with Easter and the diamond. Then instead of Easter and the Peace Stone he comes with you at precisely the right moment and by his courage and address he settles the [illegible] and removes a danger that might otherwise have been very grave."

THE Comte leaned back in his desk chair, brought the tips of his spread fingers together, and looked at Devlin over them. Devlin, amazed at this turn of events and infinitely amused by it, glanced toward Roaul. The closed eyes had slightly opened and Devlin caught a gleam of very clear consciousness. He read in it a sort of appeal.

"Now tell me," said the Comte, "just what happened. How you and Raoul joined forces and when and where?"

"There is not much to tell, sir. I discovered that Raoul had taken Easter aboard a certain boat. I hired one myself and found Raoul out in the bay and persuaded him to return with Easter. Your daughter, Jacqueline, insisted on going with me to prevent a clash between Raoul and myself. We arrived here, all four of us, a little while ago. We sent the young ladies on to Quimper."

"Raoul expected to find these voyous here?" asked the comte.

"He did, sir. He thought they would be watching the house. He did not expect to find them inside it attempting violence. He believed, as you have just said, that they were awaiting my return with Easter and the Peace Stone."

The Comte's ascetic face showed his gratification. He rubbed his hands together. His own crucial situation appeared to have left him entirely unmoved.

"I thought so," he said.

"Raoul," Devlin continued, "made a turn of the house while I waited at the garage. He discovered the light round the edges of the window hangings of your study. We entered, and leaving me to guard the door he came in here and did his job."

"Precisely," said the Comte, "and he made quick and thorough work of it. What would you have? A mere low Apache, even three of them, would be no match for a keen and experienced officer of our Information Navale."

Devlin looked at Raoul. Then disturbed by a sudden pallor of his face he stepped quickly to his chair. Raoul had slumped down a little and for a moment Devlin feared that he was dead. He took his pulse and was relieved to find it still perceptible.

"He is too weak for so erect a position, I think. I had better put him on the couch."

He gathered Raoul up with no great difficulty in his powerful arms, carried him across the room and laid him on a canape. Then as he lowered him down Raoul spoke for the first time in a voice audible only to Devlin.

"Sportsman——" His straight lips parted in a faint smile and a fine trickle of blood ran down their corners.

Golf Fan's Vision.

Ordinarily I am a "dud" at golf. My stance is rotten, my stroke is weak, my score is bum. Two weeks ago I dreamed I was back home on one of the best known courses in the country, and a man long since dead, who was my instructor when I first took up the sport, was giving me a lesson on the green.

My stance, as usual, did not suit him and he stooped down and turned my foot as he thought it should be placed for the stroke. It left me standing decidedly pigeon-toed, and even in my dream I felt embarrassed at the awkward placement of my feet, but I made the stroke as he directed, and landed within four inches of the cup. I made it in TWO. It pleased me mightily . . . but I woke up and found it had all been a dream.

I was in my home town this week and played on the old home course. I made it a point to stand pigeon toed as my old instructor had directed in my dream. AND I MADE IT IN TWO, just as per dream. It's a psychological phenomenon that has puzzled me ever since. L. W. K.

House on Fire.

One morning I was leaning out of my kitchen window talking to my sister-in-law, who lived next door to me. Suddenly she sniffed the air and said, "I smell wood smoke!"

"That makes me think of what I dreamed last night," I replied. "I thought Henderson's house was on fire. I saw it plain as could be."

Mr. Henderson was my neighbor directly across the road.

Just at that moment the colored woman who was to wash for me that day came hurrying across the yard exclaiming, "Why ain't yo' all out in front looking at de fiah? Dat man's house done ketched on fiah somehow and de fiah comp'ny better be gitting heah suddenlike!" And in truth that is exactly what it was doing. J. W. M.

An Active Mind.

I was a bookkeeper and had been off on my trial balance for 10 days. My employer, although usually kind, grew impatient, as I was tying up the work in several departments. I had checked every item in the book, and left the office one night about 10:30 p. m. exhausted in mind and body and a bit concerned about losing my position.

Sleep seemed impossible that night, but about 4:30 a. m. I finally dozed off, while praying fervently that I find the error. At 5:30 I awoke with a start, for I had been told in my dream to check over my commission account.

I arose immediately and was at the office by 7:15 and, sure enough, I found the mistake in the commission account, exactly as I had dreamed.

When my employer arrived at the office at 10 o'clock you can imagine what a grand and glorious feeling I experienced in handing him the completed balance sheet. E. L.

RAW MATERIAL

By EVELYN CAMPBELL

The Way to a Gourmet's Heart Is Said to Be Through His Stomach, but This Gourmet Had No Heart—for Hilda

WHEN Hilda had been in America three weeks, she learned to fear greatly two things, poverty and "mans." It would be hard to say which to her held the greater menace; the one which she saw, tasted, felt—or the other, whispered to her in guarded secret by experienced girls who knew their way about. Hilda, praying inarticulately, entreated God for safety and was answered almost at once by Mrs. Randolph. This was a long time ago in the halcyon times when all a housekeeper had to do was to telephone an agency and order, as she might a rib roast, a good strong, willing girl who would "do anything." They came, and if one did not suit she got another until the paragon developed. The paragon who did everything, cooked, washed, swept, cleaned windows and whitened steps that were eternally at warfare with the city's furnace. Brass railings that must be polished like gold and a hard coal range for the business of cooking that really was cooking went with the job. Work from 6 o'clock in the morning until the doors were locked at night, and real work, too, that called for broad shoulders and big red arms.

Certain ladies, Mrs. Randolph among them, while amply able to pay the $30 a month that purchased perfection, preferred to choose from what they called "green girls." A voiceless, shapeless, and often witless female creature, too frightened to bargain for her strength, could be acquired for what was a pittance, even in those good old days, and upon the training and molding of this clay their mistresses expended the efficiency and energy which twenty years later were to go into politics and auction bridge.

It was a warm topic for social calls. There were gentle rivalry, polite boasting, delicate triumphs over these $2 a week embryos, and there were also dangerous private warfare and malignant neighborhood feuds that followed the graduation of one of these grubs whose intellect developed amazingly in the matter of wages. A conscienceless woman without initiative to train one of her own would not scruple to hire the servant of another by dazzling her with an extra dollar or two, and it was after the successful raid of Mrs. Henry Evans upon the kitchen of the Randolphs and the capture of Sophia [illegible] in the very act of starting the Monday wash that Mary Randolph put on her hat and went in person to the fount of all labor on Walnut street where raw material could be found in all stages of willingness to learn the strange ways of an unknown world.

Mrs. Randolph could have paid the [illegible] a month that would have preserved her servant intact, but that was against her principles, she said. After she had taught Sophia all she knew, endured her stupidity, it would be too much to put a premium upon her. Over her husband's protests the paragon was allowed to go and Mrs. Randolph never admitted even to herself that what she enjoyed was total domination over terrified, inarticulate flesh! In the Walnut street waiting room she found Hilda.

Even the manageress protested against such foolishness. "O, but you will never make anything of her, Mrs. Randolph! She is not even strong. It wouldn't be worth your while." The two women looked at each other with perfect understanding, ignoring Hilda between them like a sawdust-doll.

Mrs. Randolph was very knowing. The big, brawny girls were not always the best scrubbers. Hilda's shoulders were thin and straight, but so is a steel cord. "I'll take her," said the lady, silencing the manageress with superiority.

Hilda was sixteen. She was as green as alfalfa and soft as a ripe tomato. Her blue eyes were suffused with tears at the thought of her homeland and listened to the babble that went on above her bowed head. The fear of "mans" predominated over the dread of hunger. It clutched at her heart and turned it into a slow, suffering thing. Strange thoughts bloomed in Hilda's mind behind the mask of her dumb features. Where would she sleep tonight? Would the mistress with the hard, bright eyes put her to sleep with the cows in the shed? Would it be a barn, a pigsty or a palace? Hilda knew nothing of America except as a kaleidoscope which had dazzled and bewildered her since she had stepped upon its shores. She was an orphan, forlorn, ignorant, helpless. She was ready to fall and worship at the feet of any one who would take her in. She expected blows and harshness and bitter, unremitting toil.

But the Randloph household was like nothing she had pictured. She had a warm, clean bed in a cubby hole that was secure behind a locked door. She had a large kitchen and a mountainous black stove to clean and polish. She had food in plenty and a window to look through while she worked. She had money, too, but true to an unrecognized instinct she hid this between the mattresses, bewildered by its unknown denomination. The first month she had $10, the second $20, and the accumulation promised to go on indefinitely. There was nothing to spend it for; she never went out.

Hilda was happy because she had a home and Mrs. Randolph was happy because she had an automaton who mercifully promised to remain one, and this condition might have continued to exist to the satisfaction of both mistress and maid but for the return of Mr. Bertie Randolph, who in his freshman year had already outstripped his parents in intelligence, learning, and the social graces.

The Randolphs adored Bertie. Why not? He was their eldest. He was handsome and clever. When he told them that they were out of date, that everything about the house was wrong and hopelessly different from the houses of his friends, they humbly admitted that perhaps he was right. There was mighty little that they could do about it, but they were willing to make themselves over if they could.

Bertie's advent had silenced the last throe of fear in Hilda's young bosom. What she had anticipated when she lay trembling in her bed at night was too dark and intangible to exist when she wakened to the bland righteousness of Mrs. Randolph's house. In Hilda's eyes Bertie was the heir apparent, and what he might have claimed or demanded would have been his. He was "mans" in the most subtle and dangerous guise, and the fact that he never once looked at her, but complained furiously of the stodginess of his family, was the beneficent gesture of a god—to Hilda.

SHE was so grateful for rectitude that she scrubbed her fingers to the bone for the reward of having him track St. Louis coal dust over the carpets and steps. The danger was that his feet would stray elsewhere. There might be an end to this lovely visitation of youth that had awakened the stiff, heavy red brick house to life. Not that Hilda thought of the Randolph mansion with anything but the most humble respect. It was all that luxury could be, but still she was not blind to sunshine and open windows and laughter. The condescension of the eldest son in remaining under the roof he constantly mocked meant dozens of soiled napkins and towels, muddied steps, and tobacco and ashes strewn everywhere, but she accepted this with joyful willingness as the little part of what she could do to keep him at home.

It was not enough. Mrs. Randolph worried herself sick over her son's late hours. Sometimes he stayed out until two o'clock. His mother feared the influence of the burlesque theaters, but his father was more afraid of drink. Many a morning there were traces of cocktails and gin fizzes about Bertie that could not be mistaken for anything else. When the young man could not endure the breakfast put before him and wailed aloud at the sight of broiled steak and biscuits and fried potatoes, his parents were sure that his health was being impaired by dissipation. All of his life Bertie had eaten such meals without a murmur; only since he had gone to college and picked up new ways had this trouble come upon them.

One morning Hilda found him alone when she came into the dining room with the coffee and for the first time he really spoke to her, asking feebly for orange juice and a coddled egg. Hilda, not daring failure, was obliged to produce both, and it was to this desperate predicament she owed much that happened to her afterward.

She could read a little by this time. How did she learn? She could not have told you herself. Subconsciously, perhaps, from the labels of tomato cans and the huge printed letters on flour sacks. She was able to spell out simple words and, through the medium of a cook book, finally produced an egg that was received by Bertie with some praise.

That was a year of importance in Hilda's life. The coddled egg was the first product of what was to be an extraordinary harvest, for, with painstaking care, slowly, and with labor, she read the cook books on the kitchen shelves from cover to cover and what she read she remembered. Once her eyes scanned the printed recipes, her mind became a page upon which each cup of sugar was indelibly stamped. After that year Hilda knew things about cooking of which her mistress never dreamed. In those good old days there was material in plenty with which to experiment, but Hilda wasted nothing. She was as methodical as a yard stick. She made no mistakes.

A large volume, the White House Cook Book earned an immense respect from her. She knew what the White House was and the perfection of its advice was undeniable. Another favorite was the Boston, from which she gleaned etiquette, as well as recipes, and in time she became before the unseeing eyes of the Randolphs a prim and pedantic hostess, serving them as guests at their own table. They were easy going people and, with Bertie safely at school once more, they were inclined to drop into careless ways from which Hilda brought them up short. As if she had said, "Really, I had no idea you did not know that in a proper dining room——" It was all in the Boston Cook Book and Hilda knew it by heart.

Through long winter evenings in her icy little room she would study, wrapped in a blanket and warmed only by her eager, glowing heart. She had begun to think independently of recipes now, and strange vistas of achievement unrolled before her eyes. If she could read and learn about cooking from books, were there not other things? She grasped at newspapers; she found the way to the public library, and spent her holiday afternoons surrounded by books which gradually became less than Greek to her.

At no time during that year did she think of Bertie with anything but meek and humble respect. She did not dream of loving him; he was far too bright and shining a mark for her humble eyes, but he was always in her vision as one knows that the sun is shining or that the evening star has risen.

Mrs. Randolph, folding a letter, glanced complacently over a perfect breakfast table at her husband. She did not suspect that it was Hilda's breakfast table and that she was merely occupying a place before its perfection. Bertie would be home in another week. "Maybe he'll be more satisfied now that we are living on raw fruit," she said. She had lost ten pounds and was really satisfied herself.

Hilda served grapefruit with her mind fumbling about through nightingale flights to the earthy details of a new sauce she had evolved. It should be ready for him. At the first dinner he should taste a sauce that would open his eyes. And each day would reveal to him his home, managed on the principle of the White House: irreproachable.

At nineteen Bertie showed symptoms of the gourmet he was to become later on. He had come home harboring a vague intention of persuading his old fogy parents to finance a summer in Paris where his attention had been enticed by stories of student life, but he discovered a changed atmosphere, where life moved on wheels and at the proper tempo, with perfect appointments and the cuisine of a small Rector's. Bertie forgot to dream about lovely models in dreaming of a menu that would surprise him from day to day. Dignified dishes, coquettish sweets, and languorous sauces passed before him in an endless parade, and when he tasted of each he remained to taste another day.

OF all the Randolphs, Bertie was the only one to see the source from which these blessings came. One night, returning late from a dinner to which he had reluctantly lent his presence, he was admitted by Hilda, who could not sleep until she knew that he was safely within. Bertie was feeling broad and tolerant that night and was not above giving praise where praise was due.

"I'll miss you after next week," he mumbled. "Tough lines on a feller eatin' boardin' house chuck after yours, Hilda, old girl."

And of this she understood only the first three words and remembered for years the touch of him as he steadied his way up the stairs leaning on her strong young shoulder.

After Bertie went back for his third year Mrs. Randolph made two or three discoveries. While she and her husband were growing thinner, the bills were proportionately larger, and Hilda was not the girl she had been. She was no longer interested in whitening the front steps with a bucket and brush winter mornings. She showed reluctance about the furnace fire, and when her mistress caught her with a manicure stick one day it ended everything.

"Hilda will have to go," said Mrs Randolph. "She is a good girl, but not exactly what I want. Extravagant. I have trained her well, but she is getting a little—er—out of place. I think I will ask for a raw, green girl, kind and biddable."

So Hilda went, but she went as a lady leaves a house where she has been entertained long and well. The department of social etiquette taught her how that is done.

On a day twenty years and some hours afterward, Thomas Q. Lansing, the oil millionaire who had often been quoted in ecstatic interviews as claiming that he made his first hundred thousand before he could read or write, picked up the telephone and called his house number and, through various departments, finally was able to speak to his wife. A fond smile hovered around his lips when he heard her voice and he waited anxiously as a schoolboy for the verdict to his request.

Thomas Q., who was a kindly, homelike soul beneath his plain exterior, dearly loved to invite his friends to share a meal with him without ceremonials; "pot luck," he called it, knowing well that no such thing existed in his stately, perfectly ruled household. Long ago, dating back to early marriage, he had learned soundly that, without due formality, his entertaining must take place where there were merely a head waiter and a flock of underlings, but upon this occasion he plead humbly for a reversal of the decree.

"It's like this, hon. Poor old Guthrie needs a little sniff of home air. He's all froze up with these state banquets where there's nothin' fit for a dawg to eat. You know how it is, hon——"

Mrs. Lansing said the usual thing in her sweet contralto voice that remained inexorable until she heard her husband add: "Nobody but him an' a feller from St. Louis, Bert Randolph——"

There was a queer sound in the phone: "Randolph, did you say?"

"Yas, honey, Randolph is writin' the old man's letters for him. He's a high educated hombre and maybe you might get along with him. If not, you don't need to mind him——" Thomas Q. scratched his ear as the receiver clicked. Did he hear aright? Had she really said yes? She had.

Mrs. Thomas Q. Lansing was a lovely blonde lady not very far from forty, but looking a good ten years younger by reason of her perfect poise, her perfect toilettes, and the exquisite certainty of her every movement. Her boudoir was in pale blue, her negligee was orchid, and the pearls around her neck partook of the faint pink that stained her cheek at mention of a name indelibly written upon her memory.

She released the telephone with something as close to agitation as she ever permitted herself. Breathing unevenly, she sat there on her blue satin sofa and looked back, as a person who has clambered from the depths of a deep well might look back upon its blackness.

With the ruthlessly accurate mind which was nearly all that remained of the Hilda of yesterday, she could see the Randolphs as if their parting had been measured by hours. But that indelible vision was not of the Randolphs as they actually were, but as they had seemed to be years ago when she was learning to read from the labels of tomato cans. It was no wonder that she had breathed a trembling consent to a Randolph dining at her table. When she thought of the house that had sheltered her ignorance and innocence she wanted to fall upon her knees and bless its paternalism. When she considered her silver and her linen and her Rolls-Royce, they seemed pitifully meager in contrast to that far off survey of Mrs. Randolph's enchanted possessions. When she remembered that in a few hours she would see Bertie again she blushed and smiled and trembled a little, hearing him say again "I will miss you——" as he leaned on her shoulder climbing the long, dark stairs.

SHE took up a Venetian hand mirror and looked at herself a long while in the crystal surface. She knew that she was beautiful, of course. Every one told her so. Her husband never let a day go by without a visible sign of his admiration. But as a few beautiful and fortunate persons have been known to be, she was very humble about herself. The question was—the question between a lady and her mirror—would Bertie Randolph find her beautiful, too? Would he, after æons of time, recall the moment when he had missed her?

It was not infidelity to Thomas Q. to wonder about such things. Her own life was a thing apart from the Randolphs—it was a simpler, humbler sort of life in spite of the rain of money which had drenched her with pearls. She had never seen Thomas Q. as anything but clay—a common man such as she would have married if she had never left the old country, only Thomas Q. had grubbed for oil instead of potatoes. The result had been stupendous, but the man himself had never doubted his inferiority. He looked up to her as something remote—she had taught him to use his forks properly after the best printed instructions, and he always remembered gratefully the source of what good manners he owned. She had even taught him his letters.

Her blushing, starry-eyed confusion was apart from that. It was, perhaps, the wistful backward glance of 38 to 16. It was romance more delicate, more unearthly than love. It was a dream that dressed a dim boy of 18 in the cloak of illusion; a shadowy hand upon her girlish shoulder; the eternal patient woman helping stumbling feet to climb.

Whatever it was, it sent Mrs. Lansing from her blue satin boudoir to the distant regions of the kitchen, where her orders began a ripple of consternation that was to end in revolt. A cook like Jacques imported from Paris to be instructed in the way of making a sauce! Insolence! Astounding! Notices were given.

Mrs. Lansing wore a ravishing gown that evening, but mere clothes were as nothing compared to her face. It had in it the light and eagerness of girlhood and when the guests were introduced to her they wondered how old Thomas Q., even with his millions, could have annexed such beauty.

Bertie Randolph was unchanged to any perceptible degree by years. He was like a doll that has been scuffed about a nursery floor, battered and blunted but the same doll. His blank blue eyes surveyed the exquisiteness of his hostess without brightening. He showed no interest whatever until they were seated around the small table and the viands of the perfect but indignant Jacques began to appear before him. When he tasted the soup there was a brief stirring of his immobile face, but his manner said that he reserved judgment.

It was a perfect dinner and there were surprises. There was a sauce that surprised every one but Mrs. Lansing, who had evolved it at the expense of her cook. When Bertie tasted it he became as nearly enthusiastic as it was his nature to be and came near to rolling his blue eyes heavenward. There was a pinkish purple flush on his round cheeks and in his pleasure he seemed to inflate gently like a toy balloon. Mrs. Lansing, pretending to listen to the others, saw everything through her rose colored vision. "He remembers," she thought exultingly.

WHAT she dreamed of she hardly knew herself. Would it be a look sent to her alone across the crystal and bur roses and across the years as well? Would it be a word when he said good-by? But nothing happened for a while except the conversation between Thomas Q. and his confrère, which went on in a running fire of technical terms. Bertie Randolph ate and seemed to be in a bliss of his own. When he was suddenly included in the talk it startled him as if he had been called from his sleep.

"What do you think, Bertie, about a test hole on the Alvarez property?" Guthrie asked, and Bertie, unaware that he was administering a back-hand reproof that might cost him his job, answered promptly:

"I think that Mrs. Lansing has the best cook in America." He looked up with his pleasant, boyish smile that reminded the other men subtly that they were at a dinner table and not in an office. He turned to his hostess with the first animation he had shown. "The best cook, Mrs. Lansing, belonged to my mother so long ago that she may have ceased to cook by this time. She was marvelous! Such sauces! Such entrées! It might amuse you to hear about her." They listened to him. "She was trained by my mother, taught everything. I don't think she could even read or write. Dumb as a block of wood, she had to be drilled like a trained flea to the simplest mechanism, but once it penetrated she became a genius of the pots and pans. My mother always chose greenhorns for her experiments, but I have heard her say that this one was the worst of the lot—a clod, unable to think a thought for herself, but possessing in her fingertips the secrets of the gods. When I had to go back to the boarding house at school I nearly wept, I missed her cooking so!"

Into a pool of silence the clipped voice of Mrs. Lansing dropped like small silver coins tinkling.

"You may bring coffee into the study, William," she said to the servant, and gently made her adieus to the guests who had come there to talk business.

Much later that evening, in pale satin and fur, she crept downstairs to the horrible den where Thomas Q. smoked stogies and put his feet on the table and hatched million dollar schemes. To him she looked like a blue and gold angel and his imagination would never have grasped the fact that she had just undergone a hideous hour of self-flagellation before her sense of humor came to the rescue. For the first time in her married life she was achingly anxious to see her husband, to touch him, to realize him. She shocked and embarrassed him by putting her arms around him quite lovingly and sitting on his knee, for angels never behave like that.

Like many another good wife the hour had struck for her and a dream was gone forever. She was wide awake to the knowledge that crude petroleum is a better thing to have in the family than fish sauce. But after all, she would always remember Bertie and what he had done for her. In accomplishment it is only fair to admit the incentive. Without Bertie she might have been as he said she was.

"Do you know," she murmured, "I am coming in here quite often if you will let me. I want to learn about crude oil and raw petroleum and all the things that have made you a wonderful man. I have been a little ungrateful, I think, to you and your products. I could not see them as they began except as horrible——"

Thomas Q. managed to speak. "What on earth made you think of that, honey?"

She looked at him with lovely truth. "It was the talk at dinner," she said. "A readjustment of vision, if you know what I mean, dear."

"I'll miss you after next week," he mumbled. "Tough lines on a feller eatin' boardin' house chuck after yours, Hilda, old girl."

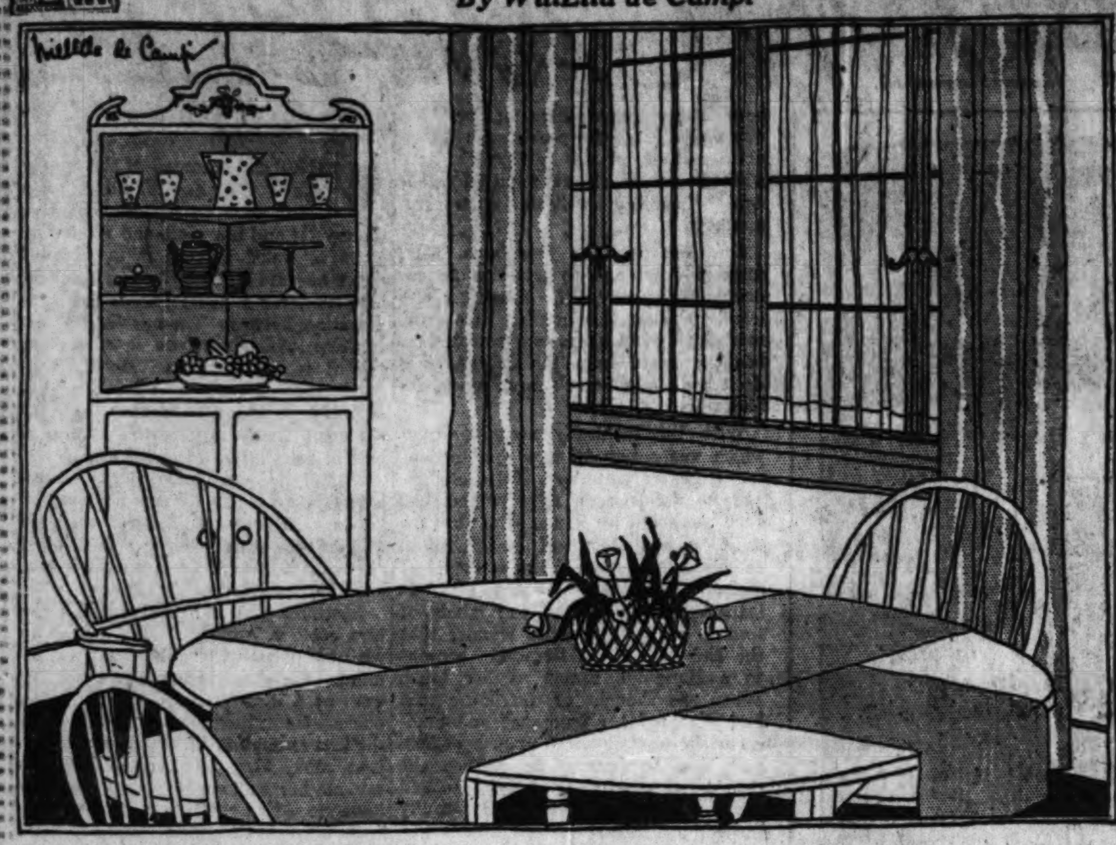
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla de Campi



Cupboards were built in the corners of this dinette, thus increasing the storage space.

The Little Home Described Today Shows What Can Be Done in Any City Apartment

GLEEFULLY the newlyweds turn to the furnishing of their apartments. Each and every young wife wants her little home to be the very loveliest of all. She is naturally enthusiastic in this first endeavor to express individuality by means of furnishing and decoration. There is a thrill of expectancy in the fact that visitors will regard her rooms as a stamp of her personality and originality.

With so many apartment buildings springing up in every part of the city, it is easy to find a place which is not quite finished, so that various little individual touches may be added before the happy day of moving in. Even in buildings which are already complete, the proprietors are usually willing to call in a local carpenter. In this way, no end of built-in conveniences may be installed.

Young Mr. and Mrs. Karl took a small kitchenette apartment, and they have made it into a truly delightful haven. The rooms are few—living room, kitchenette, dinette, bedroom and bath, but every inch of the space has been made glowingly comfortable.

A doorway from the main hall of the building opens directly into the living room. At one side of the door is a large, square coat closet which boasts a small window. This closet has been divided, one half is used for the coats, and in the other half a folding bed is kept. The living room easily transforms itself into the guest room!

The color scheme here is particularly lovely. All of the woodwork, including the doors, is painted a soft, bluish green. Walls are light corn yellow. A fireplace at one side of the room has a small window, placed at the height of the mantel shelf, at each side. Beneath each of these windows and flush with the facing of the fireplace, Mrs. Karl had shelves built in, and painted to match the woodwork. These accommodate a collection of lovely books, adding greatly to the general air of contentment which pervades the room.

At one side of the fireplace is a wing chair, upholstered in crash, with figures woven in orange, yellow and green. A wrought iron reading lamp beside it has a shade of vellum paper, spattered with green and shellacked. Amber glass smoking accessories are kept on a small table at the other side of the wing chair. This thoroughly comfortable group is Mr. Karl's favorite retreat, where he contentedly reads the newspapers, and other manly works of literature.

Facing the wing chair, at the other side of the fireplace, is a smaller arm chair upholstered in blue-green and sand colored striped sateen. It is accompanied by a little footstool and by a drop leaf table which holds current magazines and by a deep sapphire blue pottery lamp with a parchment shade.

Across the room is a group of three windows. Beneath these stands a sofa with down-filled seat cushions. Upholstery of black mohair is piped with blue-green, matching the woodwork. Extra cushions are covered with blocked linen, like the window draperies, on a black ground. The glass curtains are of light orange theatrical gauze—all quite inexpensive, but captivatingly out-of-the-rut.

Low stands at each end of the sofa hold a pair of lamps, with plaited parchment shades. Placed in front, near one end, is a low table on which smoking accessories are conveniently arranged. A console phonograph-radio, with a hanging mirror above it, serves as a dressing table, when the living room assumes the rôle of guest room. Completing the furnishings is a secretary desk flanked by a pair of rush bottom Windsor chairs. The floor covering is black chenille.

In the dinette illustrated today the walls and woodwork are painted a lovely blue-green, a little lighter than the living room woodwork. As there was plenty of space, Mrs. Karl had cupboards built into two corners. The lower parts are fitted with shelves enclosed behind doors, so that they make a convenient storage space for table linens. Drop-leaf table and chairs are of maple.

At the windows are glass curtains of light yellow theatrical gauze with draperies of plum colored rep. Black marbleized linoleum extends through from the dinette floor over the kitchenette floor. Here the walls are the same blue-green, and the built-in units are enameled white. Yellow enameled cooking utensils are used.

As the bedroom is separated from the rest of the apartment by a little hallway and the bathroom, it was not necessary to carry out the same color scheme. The walls are painted light, glowing coral pink and the woodwork is old blue. At the windows are ruffled organdy glass curtains in light coral. There are over draperies of toile de Jouy, with the design in tones of old blue on an ivory ground. These hang straight to the floor, giving an imposing sense of dignity and restfulness.

An arm chair is upholstered in the same toile. A pouf to match it is used either at the dressing table, or in conjunction with the arm chair, making a chaise longue. Twin beds have tailored covers of old blue rep, piped and bound with coral. Old blue wool chenille rugs are used. The color scheme is sufficiently feminine in feeling to please the wife, and the treatment and arrangement of the whole is simple, and formal enough to suit the taste of the most exacting husband.

A Scarf Wrap Is Not Difficult to Make and Provides a Charming Evening Wrap for Summer Occasions

SCARF wraps like the one pictured make one of the loveliest dress accessories possible. Finished, they measure fifty-four inches, and can be put on to fit any figure. As it is held in place on the figure, it makes it blouse across the back just enough to look well. The square of material used is finished with a set-on hem, measuring when finished between five and seven inches. The variety of materials, colors, and combinations used in making these wraps seems inexhaustible, and it will depend mainly on how much you wish to spend as to what you will choose. Wonderful gold or silver metallic brocades are used for the main part of the wrap, with the deep hem of a plain satin. The corners of the hem are generally set in of the wrap material, which adds much to its beauty.

Silver brocade with a hem of satin in blue, green, orchid, or any becoming color, gold brocade with black satin hem, soft silk and lamé in white with a black hem, or in any of the exquisite summer colors will make a wrap that your friends will want to copy.

The work of setting the hem on should be done by hand. Use a running stitch, making a wrong side seam, then turn in the opposite edge of the hem and baste it down before pinning and basting it in place over the seam just finished. If you are careful you can do this hemming so it will be practically invisible.

No stitches should show through on the opposite side.

MRS. I. H. D.: One of the noncrushable linens in a solid color, trimmed with one of the flowered chintzes will make a charming dress for your small daughter for the warm days that are, no doubt, ahead of us, and a matching hat will complete a pretty ensemble.

For your small son, several linen suits, having the trousers of blue, tan, or any desired color and the blouse of white linen with the collar of the linen matching the trousers will be practical and smart as well.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

There Are Many Ways of Utilizing the Sweet Pepper Besides Pickling It, as Used to Be the Custom

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

FIFTY years ago the average American housewife knew but one use for green sweet peppers. She made pickled mangoes of them and thought she had performed her whole duty. Her husband had a few pepper bushes in his garden for their very picturesqueness, or because he loved variety, and she had to use the fruit. As for us, we are not and never were for pickled mangoes, and always disliked the pickled string.

But the woman in question had enough pepper condiments, especially that in a picturesque bottle called "pepper sauce," which was a collection of the smallest of oblong green peppers in a liquid. Does any one ever see them now? Perhaps the sauce has been entirely replaced by the tabasco which it burns one's tongue to mention. There is an idea always popping up that Mexican cookery must be tried out and that it gets its colorful culinary quality entirely from hot peppers.

It took a good many years for us seemingly to understand that there were peppers which were not hot stuff, and did not even have hot seeds. As to those hot peppers, they are truly a regular red rag of violence in the food world as is tabasco sauce. It is a marvel to me that this, and stuffs like it, still seem to be the bachelor's panacea around which he builds a self-made therapeutics. If he cooks he puts it into all his sauces and salad dressings, and if he does not cook he fosters digestive afflictions by using a capsicum tablet and believing it a great panacea.

Peppers with Leftover Corn.

Green sweet peppers are a great help in heating up a considerable number of different leftover vegetables, as well as excellent in those wet hashes so often called Creole, which can be put together of almost any chopped meat, some meat stock, some onion and green sweet pepper, or what have you? The peppers are cooked soft, or sweated like the onions in fat, the cold meat, or vegetables, or both are barely heated through, perhaps a bit of cream or butter or both added, and there you are.

If you have one or two ears of cold corn take about an ounce of firm salt pork, in three of the thinnest slices about two inches wide by three long, and cut these into narrow strips. Gently cook them as you would bacon, put them to one side and stew the finely cut green sweet pepper in the fat under a cover and over a gentle fire.

If you will, you may add onion and also tomato but just try this: After the pepper is soft add the corn cut from the cob, heat it up, cover the whole, including the pork scraps, with cream, bring it to a boil and cook about two minutes. If the pork was carefully trimmed there will be nothing about this dish to suggest salt pork, even the scraps, which, while not fresh pork, blend with the pepper, corn and cream wonderfully.

Peppers Stuffed with Cream Cheese.

This experiment was tried out partly to prove that there is no law to enforce the stuffing of green sweet peppers so that they will stand up like a cup, and also to prove—what you can prove by a number of other ways of cooking peppers—that the skin can be cooked so as to be as soft as the pulp, therefore it is a waste of effort to try to peel peppers by scorching—dirty—or scalding, or by any other method.

It is more natural, anyway, for the longer and leaner peppers to be stretched out in a reclining posture. So wash, wipe dry and split large green sweet peppers down one of the side seams. Cut out the stems' end with scissors, so taking out the cone of seeds, and then trim off the seeds on the veins. Now spread each pepper out in a sheet. Drop these sheets of pepper into boiling water and scald for five minutes, then rinse with cold water.

For two large peppers—these can make a good half meal for two people—take one small package of cream cheese and mix with it four green, or you may use stuffed, olives chopped fine. Some red sweet pepper may be used with plain olives to give tone. Add about one-half teaspoon of salt and any other consistent seasonings, or anything to your taste, though the plainer you make your first preparation, the safer. But experiment is pleasant and once you get your bearings, here is an opportunity.

Now divide the cheese so toned up and put half into one sheet of the pepper and the other half in the other. Roll these up and fasten them with the smallest of iron skewers, or use a large darning needle with a thread in it to hasten and ease the pulling out. [Presumably it is easier to buy darning needles than skewers, but is it?] Remove the skewer or darning needle before serving the pepper.

Finally, dip the peppers thus prepared in beaten egg and crumbs—finest cracker crumbs will do—melt a little butter and sprinkle it over them and bake in a 400 degree oven for fifteen minutes or a bit longer if you like. A 400 degree oven is just on the edge between medium and hot.

Veal Daube.

Because of the fine edibleness of the green sweet pepper when meat seasoned, this recipe, tried out in my kitchen three months back and printed once, is repeated: One pound of round of veal from next the shank [a pound from that cut is thicker, or thick enough, than from the top or saddle], six green sweet peppers cut in halves, three tablespoons of garlic cut fine, one-half bunch chopped parsley—nearly a cup—two small onions, a little tomato paste [you can get it by straining and cooking down stewed or canned tomato] and about three tablespoons of tried out suet fat, in which to sear the meat, and finally a cup of hot water.

Trim the meat and sear it well on both sides in the suet fat. Put the halves of peppers into the pan around the veal and allow them to get steamed up, or really steamed down a little. The preparation at this point is interesting to see. Next add the mixture of seasonings which help in the gravy as well as in making the meat savory, then add the cup of boiling water with some salt and a little freshly ground pepper.

Cover the pan and cook gently for one hour. The peppers are delicious, and you will find the use of so much garlic justified. It is not the least impertinent here.

Creole Sauce Cold or Hot.

It is customary to use the Creole sauce hot and over something like baked trout or fish steaks. It is simply a combination of onion, green sweet peppers and tomato in about equal parts, cooked and buttered or cooked in some fat. It may be served just so, or sieved. In fact, it is capable of a score of variations. But this same sauce is excellent cold if it is fairly thick, with almost any meat, as a sort of garnish. It can even be cooked without salt, but most people would consider the salt necessary.

And one of the useful ways to use this combination of all condimental vegetables is to fry or stew in it vegetables like English marrow, or cucumber, or summer squash, which can by no stretch of the imagination be called condimental. If oil is the fat to use for the frying or sautéing and the slices of the long Italian marrow are used you get a real Italian dish and so good, if well done, that you will be gratified.

Potatoes O'Brien.

Cut in dice six or eight cold boiled potatoes and one green sweet pepper, or use less if you choose. Mince a small onion and sweat or smother it in a tablespoon of butter—do not brown in the slightest. Add to this the potato and the pepper with from two to four tablespoons of milk or cream, or just enough to bind the whole and not make it soppy.

Do not stir the mixture but cook over a medium fire until the mixture is tenderly brown on the under side. Then fold it like an omelet and serve on a hot platter. You may serve this with a pepper puree.

You can change the dish into a potato omelet by using egg, or change it into a hash of some sort by adding chopped meat.

Sweet Pepper Puree.

Wash peppers and remove the seeds. Cook the cut up pepper till tender of skin as well as of pulp, in a little water and then sieve. After the sieving heat up the puree obtained in a little butter. This may be used as a sauce for the potato omelet or potato O'Brien, is a fine garnish for an omelet, or excellent with a slice of fried ham or broiled fish or even with a dish of vegetables.

If you do not want the work of sieving simply cut the pepper in three or four lengthwise strips, cook it soft and butter it and then use in the ways mentioned.

Sweet red pepper puree is fine to shirr eggs in.

Pepper Sandwiches.

Chop a sweet pepper, either the green or red, fine and mix with it an equal measure of unsalted butter. Other seasonings may be added to taste, or instead of butter add the pepper to cream cheese and spread the mixture on narrow strips of bread. Or this may be used on narrow strips of toast for a relish. It is always safest to taste the pepper, but a botanical sport is rarely found today, and no theory works out as to when.

This mixture of pepper and butter or cheese will keep for several days as one of cress, say, would not, and to be ready for some event that requires considerable on the minute or last minute work. In speaking of raw chopped pepper mixtures we should not forget that green or red pepper chopped fine so as to be almost a puree is excellent in cabbage salads and slaws.

Sweet Red Pepper Squares.

The loveliness of the look of uniform red squares of red pepper pulp will recommend them to anybody, and then when cooked they can be highly edible. Wash and cut up a sheet of spread-out sweet red pepper in nice inch squares and gently stew these in a little butter. These give a wonderful fillip to mild stewed chicken, and are just as attractive in a mild curry sauce or some of the preparations of the Newburgh order.

Instead of making squares we may roll a sheet of red pepper, divested of its seeds and stem, into a close roll and cut across it so as to make fine long strings. These will help out when one has but a small amount of chicken, with some chicken stock. Use one-fourth the measure of pepper that there is of chicken, or even a third.

How I Bleach My Skin White

"The camera is a merciless eye," says Miss Genevieve Barr, noted New York model, "and we girls who have to face it have a method of our own for keeping our skins white and flawless.

"We buy no ready-made preparations, but get three ounces of Orchard White at the drug store and add to this the juice of two lemons. This makes several weeks' supply of a very fine skin bleach which softens, refines and whitens the skin without any harm or irritation. And because you use it while it is still fresh, it is twice as effective as any ready-to-use preparation. I find it a dandy bleach for tan and freckles, too. Every girl who takes up posing in New York sooner or later learns this studio secret. The bleach costs only a few cents to make."

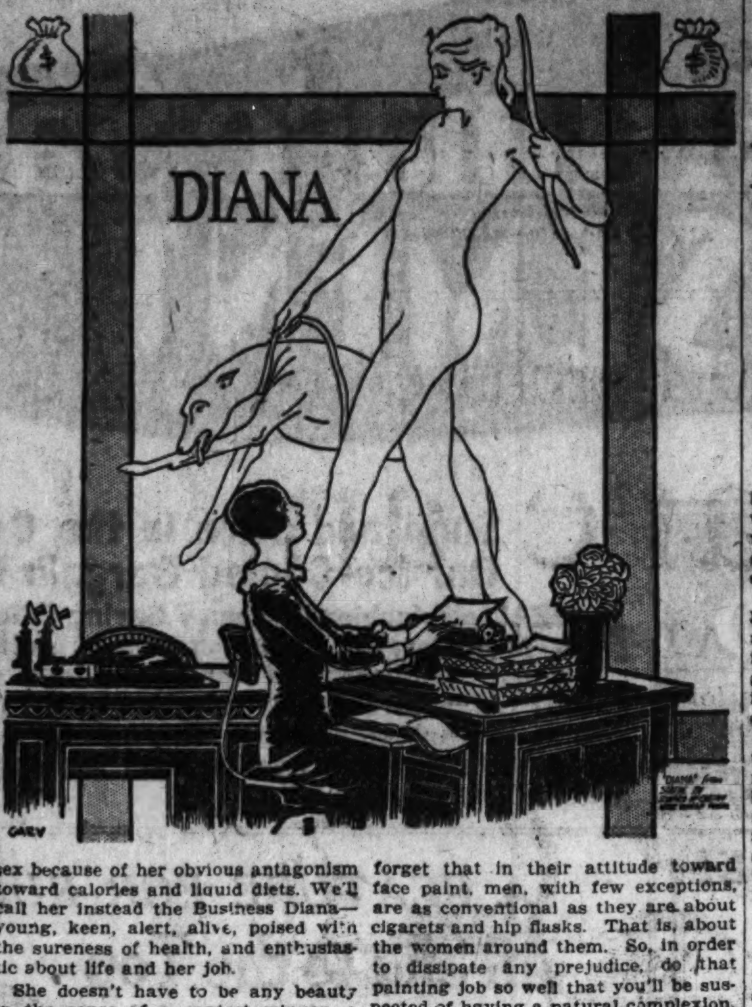
ADVICE TO THE BUSINESS DIANA

Antoinette Gives a Few Tips to Recent School Graduates Who Are Hunting for or Working at Their First Jobs

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Today I address my remarks to the army of recent school graduates about to descend on the business world, and to the many already filling their first positions.

It is an indisputable fact that at this moment appearance has a great deal to do with getting a position, holding it and helping you on to bigger and better salaries.

The importance of appearance of employés. There was some delicacy ample, was called to my attention the other day in the report from a large store that recently installed a hair dressing parlor for the benefit of its employes. There was some delicacy on the part of the officers of the concern in calling individual attention to the need of nicer hair care and coiffures. So the strategic move was made to get the message across to every woman employe that perfection in hair hygiene and becomingness of coiffure would be deeply appreciated. Word was sent around that shampoos and expert advice on hair dressing to suit the individual were available for the asking. Undoubtedly the persons in charge of the hairdressing parlor were well instructed to urge reform where it was felt an individual worker needed it.

Symbolic of the Modern Trend.

I quote the above as symbolic of the demands in personal attractiveness now current in hard headed business circles. It wasn't out of sentiment, you may be sure, that this step was taken by the concern referred to. It wasn't to make the girl saleswoman ravishingly appealing to her male coworkers, nor to the employers themselves. It is simply a step concurrent with the general beauty movement seen in big business.

You young women haven't been out in the business world long enough to see the change in business offices. Furnishings, appointments and the buildings themselves in my time have seen a transition comparable only to the fairy tale evolution of the ugly duckling into the lovely swan.

Look over the advertisements of the large manufacturing concerns and see if beauty isn't the keynote of attracting consumers' attention. It's a struggle on the advertising pages to see which article can, by its beauty of presentation, most readily catch the interest of a prospective buyer.

The day has long since passed in business, either with product or employé, when quality will excuse a poorly presented container.

Men Are Frank.

About their women employés men have given up the old reticence in regard to a perfectly normal taste for physical attractiveness. There is no hesitation nowadays about expressing themselves in favor of the good looking, smartly gotten up girl. And their claim that she proves the more efficient worker is rightfully based on the theory that a girl who uses her wits about her personal self will use them about her business life.

Now you very young recruits may get an idea from the above that you have to be a Venus in order to get a job or promotion. Lacking the native charms, you may think you'll have to spend your whole salary on clothes in order to keep up with the demands.

But let me set you right on the Venus that is wanted. In fact, I don't think we ought to use the word Venus. The lady who popularized it and who holds down a large pedestal in the Louvre has lost popularity with her sex because of her obvious antagonism toward calories and liquid diets. We'll call her instead the Business Diana—young, keen, alert, alive, poised with the sureness of health, and enthusiastic about life and her job.

She doesn't have to be any beauty in the sense of a contest winner, a Follies maid, or an artist's model. In fact, my opinion is that the less she suggests any of the last named, the more poised is her employer in the interests of keeping his male workers' minds on their work.

The Advantage of Youth.

Unless a girl is hopelessly deformed, hopelessly lazy, hopelessly deficient in the wit to make the best of every feature, she needn't worry that she hasn't a chance in the present day requirements of women workers.

You have youth. Therefore, you have a goodly share of beauty to start with. That is, if you don't try to disguise it with sophisticated mannerisms and dress that belongs neither to your age nor your salary.

And in the matter of dress, you have it all over women who've been in the business world for years. You do not have to spend large sums. With your slender young figures you can take advantage of bargain sizes and bargain sales and if your fingers are nimble you can cut down this expenditure to the minimum.

I do not like to emphasize too much the slender young figure because your fault, on the whole, is to become extremists about keeping your figures down. There is going to be a new strain on your nerves and a new tax on your energy working unaccustomed long hours, so that what you need is not less food but more substantial food.

No One Wants a Heavyweight.

But we cannot overlook the fact that girls who are guilty of overeating and under exercising and look it are left sitting out in the reception room until the others are interviewed. Employment bureaus report a strong business man prejudice against the extra heavy girl. Large bodies, they argue, move slowly.

Whether you're a blonde, brunette or red head hasn't any significant weight in your landing a job or promotion. But the way your blonde locks, brunette or red are kept and dressed has. If you have the kind of hair that needs marcelling, keep it smartly attended.

Your mistake when you go applying for a place, or in your attempt to make an impression in the one you've already landed, is to overwork the cosmetic idea. Use a little rouge and lipstick if it's going to help your morale and if you haven't natural bloom on cheek and lip. But don't forget that in their attitude toward face paint, men, with few exceptions, are as conventional as they are about cigarets and hip flasks. That is, about the women around them. So, in order to dissipate any prejudice, do that painting job so well that you'll be suspected of having a natural complexion.

Manner and Voice.

Of the care of your complexions under the rouge, the condition of your hands, the prevention of any unpleasant body odors, the scrupulous neatness of your clothes and person I scarcely need to speak.

But manner and voice I should like to stress for a moment. Don't be loud. There are several ways of being loud. You can be loud in clothes, loud in talk and loud in laughter.

The loud dresser puts all her salary on her back. She is always elaborate, inappropriate and extravagant. Poor taste and lack of sense are what she displays.

Watch your voice. Control your laugh, for the ordinary, vulgar person they signify isn't popular with employer or co-worker, nor is she ever what you'd call an attractive girl.

Don't take into the business world with you the tricks of your favorite movie hoyden. I mean those tricks that have come to be associated with a star whose appeal is known at box offices as strong S. A. Her world is another world. Yours is not entertainment. It's hard headed business.

So, leave something to the imagination about the outlines of your figures and the amount of clothing that is worn under your dress. The flapper mannerisms you may try on the boy friend after working hours—but don't try them on the boss. And don't let him see you trying them on any of the helpless men around the office, or he'll come to their assistance—not yours.

It's dignity they want—not formidable dignity—but just a nice wholesome, cheerful looking young person with sufficient self-respect in her manner to demand respect of employer and co-worker.

Leap Year Proposals

Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal. If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Cry for Support.

Frank and I were going to visit some friends one day and took the elevated train. The train was crowded and we had to stand. Suddenly it rounded a curve and I was almost thrown to the floor. I grabbed Frank's arm and cried, "O, Frank, support me!"

He slipped his arm around my waist and said, "For life?"

I gulped, blushed and said "yes."

When we arrived at the friend's house he told them I had proposed to him and that we were engaged.

I have never regretted my cry for support. F. L.

Catching Him.

Marianne had been "going around" with three fellows, Bob, a Swede, George, a German, and Bill, a Norwegian.

Marianne and Bob were at a party when she decided to "pop the question." Walking airily up to Bob, she said, "Bob, if you were a girl, would you marry a Swede, a German, or a Norwegian?"

Bob, unknowingly convicting himself for life, answered, "The Swede, of course."

Glancing demurely up at Bob, we all heard Marianne say, "Well, Bob, I'll furnish the girl if you'll furnish the home!"

And he did! E. J.

The Dog Helped.

My cousin Ted is bashful, likes the girls, but is afraid to make himself known.

Last summer a young woman came to visit our neighbors, and Ted fell desperately and convincingly in love with her. All the young fellows took Arline out, and Ted managed several dates with her, but the time came for her to go home and still he hadn't picked up courage to tell her what was on his mind.

At the station Arline's friends brought candy and flowers, and stood about talking. Ted had a beautiful Boston puppy which she had admired, and bashfully he gave her the dog in a basket. A note tied to its neck told her of the love he had not dared to speak. The boys teased him about giving away his pal, but he only blushed and grinned. The train pulled out, and Ted went home.

That evening at supper he received a wire from the city. It was signed, "Arline." I read it some time later. It read thus: "If you care like that, come and get me."

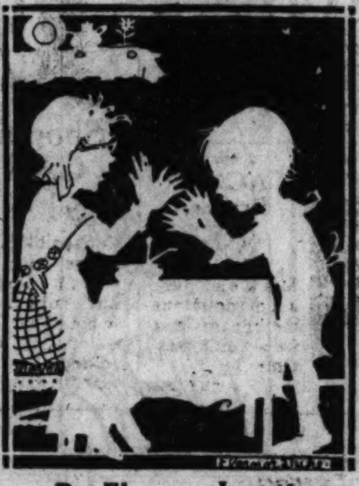
Ted lost no time in getting out the speedster and the next we knew he was back in town with a beautiful and popular bride, with the Boston pup as mascot.

The fellows never forgave him for beating their time; but he refers them to Arline at every set-to. She always admits that it was all her fault. J. M.

Written on the Candy.

When I was about 18, I was at a party where they passed around heart shaped peppermint candies. I took several and on one was printed, "Do you want me?" I handed it to my friend, and he said "Yes." From that day on he took that as a proposal, and we were married awhile after. H. B.

Company



By Eleanor Jewett.

When I'm at home I never sit at table,
I never eat with Mother and with Dad.
But when I visit Grandmother, I do—
She says to have me with her makes her glad.

When I'm at home I go to bed at seven,
And I have supper promptly, just at six,
But Grandmother keeps clocks that are quite funny—
The hours jump around and play us tricks.

We never know the proper time for eating,
Nor when to go to bed, or stop our play.
If I could have my choice I'd visit Mother—
But it's with Grandmother I'd choose to stay!

Each Child Has Own Tempo

Why Keep Prodding and Hurrying Youngsters? More Is Accomplished if They Are Allowed to Go at Their Own Speed.

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

YESTERDAY we were walking along the road when one of the children cried: "Look! A baby rabbit!"

There he was, a dog tearing along behind him, barking furiously. We watched the rabbit going at top speed with his three short hops and a long one, his little round white tail the only bright spot in the road.

Later on the dog found a box turtle. Did his nosings speed the old fellow up? Not at all. He closed up tight in his shell. But if he had tried to go fast he couldn't have done it, even if the inability to do so had meant certain death.

Each of them—the rabbit and the turtle—has his natural speed. And not only his natural rate of speed, but his particular kind of progress—rapid leaps of uncertain length, or slow, absolutely uniform, plodding steps. Each achieves his own goal, the goal for which nature intended him.

People Vary in Speed.

People are that way, too—though unlike the rabbit and the turtle in being all one species. But it sometimes seems to me that as individuals people vary in their speeds as much as different species of animals do.

For example, haven't you ever noticed how differently your different women friends sew, or do their housework, or dress or read? Some are quick and thorough, some quick and sketchy, some deliberate in their methods; some are slow and plodding, and some work in spurts by inspiration. From childhood up or during the period of your friendship with them, don't you observe that time hasn't changed nor life altered very much their natural speed and quality of work?

The same thing holds true of men in their business or profession or manual work. Some are systematic and uniform, while others don't "come to" until after lunch, and then they have their stenographers frantically taking dictation when it's time to be winding up the day's work.

One writer I know keeps regular office hours and holidays. Another writes for three days at a time and part of the nights, scarcely stopping for food and drink. One man who likes to work on his own house starts when the lumber arrives, and everything—food, dressing, social engagements—are obliterated from his consciousness until the job is done. Another man I know, who does the same sort of manual thing, does it in a leisurely, puttering way, as you might do fancy work in a rocking chair.

And as it is with animals and grown people, so it is with children. They have a natural tempo and a natural rhythm of work—natural for each individual child, and if they are urged or punished to progress contrary to it they are defeating nature. She made them to function in a certain way, and those of us who try to reorganize their working mechanism are making a serious mistake. We may need to modify their tendencies somewhat, and also their food and rest, their growth and strength must be guarded. But this is enough.

It is of absorbing interest to me to see these variations in the speed, continuity and quality of work that children show.

One boy I see a great deal of works at airplane models so long and steadily that his mother has to force him to stop for meals. This only at times, of course. Another youngster I know draws locomotives with the finest detail for hours at a time, and doesn't hear if he's spoken to. He has to be stopped to rest his eyes. These are both typical, lively boys, too.

The daughter of a friend of mine dashes off everything she does—manual or mental work. She is certain she can do anything. There is nothing she will not sail into with utter confidence. And though the results are often mediocre she is always perfectly satisfied with them.

Her little friend, a boy, is quite the opposite. He will size up a piece of work, look over the materials—lumber and tools—map out the work, and proceed with great deliberation.

If a mother I know is in a hurry to have the table set she will ask Sue, who puts it through in short order, though the silver may be askew, the cloth a little crooked, and one or two details omitted. But if she wants a table to be proud of and time is no object, she'll ask Mary. The silver will be straight then, everything well placed, and not a thing forgotten.

I wish we might all recognize a child's natural speed and allow for it—as much as the mechanics of living permit. It is something we can do at home, and something for teachers to strive for in school—though it is difficult there because of the demands that are made on the teachers, themselves. The result in the children's accomplishments would be greater eventually, and their gain in poise and the conservation of their nervous energy incalculable.

Did you ever try yourself to put through a piece of work with some one behind you, pushing you? Did you do half as well or get through as quickly as if you'd been left alone? The attempt at speeding up is often quite destructive to children.

"I don't feel quite well enough to go to school today," said a little boy who was recovering from an illness. "It'd be all right if it wasn't for the arithmetic. But after I've been working awhile as fast as I can and doing my best, they begin to say 'Hurry! Hurry!' to me, and time me with a watch—and then I try to hurry and I feel as if everything was just pressing on my head—and I get all confused and then I don't get anything done."

This from a child who has a real talent for figures, but is slow at mastering certain arbitrary processes in arithmetic.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

R. M. L.: THE PERSPIRATION remedy is a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Apply it every other day until three applications have been made. Do not use too freely, as an excessive use of it will cause a sharp itching sensation, which will subside if the part is not scratched. Allow it to dry on thoroughly before the clothing is permitted to touch the skin. For other helpful suggestions for perspiration sufferers send a stamped, addressed envelope.

MRS. G. M. D.: WITH A ROUND face the hair should not be parted in the center. The side part is more becoming, and the hair should be worn well off the forehead. Curve the hair well out on the cheeks.

H. L.: EQUAL PARTS OF GLYCERIN and camphor are excellent for softening and whitening the hands. Apply several times during the day. At night, massage cold cream into the hands, allowing some of it to remain on all night. Cover the hands with large gloves to protect the bedding. This prevents chapping. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet, "Care of the Hands."

Keep Your Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion [illegible] one ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

"Marouf's" Popularity Demands an Encore

By Edward Moore.

ALL plans were made and announcements sent out covering the coming week at Ravinia. Then "Marouf" came on Wednesday night and made the hit of this season and several seasons back. Wherefore there were alarums and excursions and realignments of positions, and the newspapers were asked to state that instead of "The Tales of Hoffman" next Thursday night "Marouf" would be repeated.

This department is glad to comply with the request, not only because "Marouf" is better than several carloads of "Hoffmanns," which after all is only faint praise, but because it is the best item in the operatic novelty column since "La Vida Breve" first delighted the north shore audiences.

Wilfrid Pelletier, who helped prepare the performance, tells me the piece was first brought out in Paris in the spring of 1914, and that ever since it has been referred to as the last smile of French music before the war. It would be hard to better the description, for a more sparkling, cheery, sportive, and altogether entrancing score has seldom existed.

Everything Except Sentimentality.

It would seem, as we say in the best circles, to have everything—romance, color, wit—everything, that is, except sentimentality. There is not a moment of slush in its whole four acts. Henri Cain, the librettist, set the emotional pace, and Henri Rabaud, the composer, followed it, and it is all as human and amusing and unsentimental as the Thousand and One Nights tale, from which it came.

Marouf is soundly beaten by the cadi's officers, and after it is over he limps off the stage, groaning but stuffing himself with the cake over which the dispute arose. Marouf is obliged later to tell the Princess Saamcheddine about the deception he has practiced on her father, and the two get into a hilarious gale of laughter over it, pounding each other with sofa pillows the while. From the point of view of grand opera it is thoroughly unheroic, but from the point of view of good theater, amusement, and entertainment it is thoroughly refreshing.

It is a first class show, with a brilliant performance by Mario Chamlee as Marouf, and one only less so because less extensive, by Yvonne Gall as Saamcheddine, together with a perfect cast of lesser parts. And Mr. Donigan has dressed it up in scenery that is a delight to the eye. Incidentally, an accident happened somewhere between the typewriter and the printing press last Wednesday, when my report was made, to speak of an illusion of distance created by angels and lightning. The word, of course, should have been angles, for it is not that kind of a show.

Three Additions to Repertoire.

Wherefore there can now be a diversion to the week's additions to the repertoire. There will be three.

"Carmen," tonight, by the presence of Ina Bourskaya in the name part, becomes part of the Polish musical celebration of the day. The explanation is appended in order to head off a protest that the opera was written by a French composer on a Spanish story. The afternoon will be devoted to the third annual Ravinia concert of the Polish Arts club, of which Mme. Bourskaya was elected an honorary member in 1926.

Eric DeLamarter has scheduled a program of Polish music for the Chicago Symphony orchestra, during the course of which Michael Wilkomirski, violinist, will play the Karlowitsch Concerto. During the second part of the program two choral organizations will take the stage, the Filharmonia Singing society, directed by B. Rybowiak, and the Harfa Singing society, directed by A. M. Hess, for a program of Polish choral music. Soloists will also appear at this stage of the proceedings, for Mr. Wilkomirski and George Szpinalski will play Handel's Sonata for two violins, and Mieczyslaw Ziolkowski, pianist, will play his own "Fairy," a Polish mountain fantasy, which is dedicated to his former teacher, the famous pianist, Paderewski. Dr. Z. Kurnikowski, consul general of Poland in Chicago, will be the guest of honor. Like all the Sunday afternoon concerts at Ravinia, this program is open to the general public.

Mme. Bourskaya in Famous Role.

It is peculiarly fitting that Mme. Bourskaya should sing the name part of "Carmen" in the evening, because she has always done so many interesting and imaginative performances of it, beginning with her entry into the United States with the Russian Opera company in 1920 and her debut at Ravinia seven years ago. With her in this performance will be Armand Tokatyan as Don José, Margery Maxwell as Micaela, and Desiré Defrere as Escamillo. Ruth Page will dance "La Flamenca" during the inn scene, and Louis Hasselmans will conduct.

Wise and Accurate Casting.

"Manon Lescaut," in the Puccini, not the Massenet version, will be made public on Friday night, and it will be the first time at Ravinia that Florence Easton has appeared as Manon or Edward Johnson as Des Grieux. It also looks like wise and accurate casting. Others to be heard are Mme. Bourskaya, Mr. Defrere, Mr. Mojica, Mr. D'Angelo, Mr. Ananian, and Mr. Paltrinieri. Mr. Papi will be at the baton.

Finally for the week, "The Barber of Seville" is announced for Saturday night. Here Tito Schipa will appear as Almaviva and Florence Macbeth as Rosina. This insures two highly important parts, with further insurance provided by Mr. Basiola as Figaro, Mr. Rothier as Don Basiola, and Mr. Trevisan in his great part of Dr. Bartolo.

"Le Chemineau" is to be repeated with unchanged cast tomorrow night; Mr. Johnson is to make his first appearance of the season as Radames in "Aida" Tuesday night; and Mr. Schipa his first as Lionel in "Martha" Wednesday night.

A Letter of Appreciation.

"What a refreshing breeze from the lake the as-others-see-us picture of the under the stars group at summer opera. We have never been among those present on Sunday or Saturday, but when we do we, too, shall listen in for those human notes so tellingly given in Helen Parker's theme.

"Even with the music school young people, the older north shore music lovers, the young couples who have not outgrown or at least in public refrain from the much discussed petting, the groups we see in free seats at Ravinia are pleasant to be with. Perhaps it is the unique real star studded sky in this day of sky ceilings at movie palaces, the rustling trees, the hush of the lake breeze, that makes some of us thrill more with the glorious offerings there than we do at winter opera. The word picture of the devotees that particular night is so vivid and different that I am sure we have missed something worth while by not being there on those more popular nights.

"Thank you for 'Free Seats at Ravinia.'

"MARGARET BURROWS MARTIN."

Between now and 1933 is a long time, but plans of large dimensions and considerable elaboration are already being made respecting the art of the dance for the coming world's fair. Adolph Bolm, a distinguished artist, has presented his ideas before the general committee, and they have met with approval. His project is to present all that is sig-

A SHIP COMES IN.
THE WHEEL OF CHANCE.
SUNRISE.
DRUMS OF LOVE.
JAZZ MAD.
FORGOTTEN FACES.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Another month has rolled around and we have with us the last month of summer. Doesn't seem possible, does it? (Though you may not feel in the mood, you'd better get started on that Christmas shopping.)

DID you go to see "A Ship Comes In," as I told you to? If you didn't, you missed something, and if you didn't, what is the use of my writing reviews for this paper, anyway? Perhaps you didn't even bother to read the review. That being the case—here's some of it again—presented hopefully.

Snatch: "'A SHIP COMES IN' is the simply told, excellently directed, beautifully acted, charmingly photographed story of a great patriot—Peter Pleznik—and his family. When the ship comes in it brings him and Mama Pleznik, the two Pleznik girls, and the Pleznik boy. They have come to be American citizens, and from the moment of their landing find just one thing after another to thrill and amuse them. . . . Devastating sorrow visits the Plezniks and injustice is unknowingly meted out to them by 'my Uncle Sam.' But when the error comes to light, with what haste and generosity is there atonement. . . . There is no blare nor pretension about 'A Ship Comes In.' It has no love story running through it. There is no slightest suggestion of a sex angle. But it is an epic of loyalty that will go straight to your hearts, and, believe me, it is not lacking in thrills."

"THE WHEEL OF CHANCE" proved a great vehicle for Richard Barthelmess. To quote:

"A bit of character portraiture of which Jannings might be proud, an achievement in makeup that is as triumphant as any of Chaney's, stand to the everlasting credit of Richard Barthelmess in this picture. He may only merit lukewarm attention in productions to come, but we will never forget that in 'The Wheel of Chance' he was a GREAT ACTOR. . . . You're not taking a chance when you plunk down your money on this picture."

"SUNRISE" certainly aroused a lot of talk. Some have loved it; some have hated it; some, like myself, have found it to be a nearly perfect thing from the point of production, but lacking the compelling surge of "Seventh Heaven" and "Street Angel." It is a picture that is impressionistic while laying claim to stark realism. For instance: "Where was it taken?" many have asked me. Not knowing myself, I had called up to find out and been informed, "On the Fox lot." It might, you see, have been taken on a lake, for there are rushes, or on the ocean, for there is mention of tides.

I said to my informant, "Rushes don't grow in the ocean, do they?" and he replied that they DID grow in bays. But being just a story of human emotions, it matters little where the tale was staged, for folks are folks the world over.

I found "Sunrise" very gripping. Very beautiful. . . . fascinatingly synchronized . . . acting and photography throughout all the heart could desire, and the direction by the genius Murnau of unassailable excellence.

"DRUMS OF LOVE"—a picture "romantically costumed . . . sets, scenery, and photography splendid . . . Lionel Barrymore IM-mense! Technically a piece of superior workmanship, unerring in its artistic detail, magnificent in its sweeping panoramic action and scenery, and distinguished throughout by the sure, sympathetic touch of the man who, more than any other, is responsible for the movies being taken up by our best people." (D. W. Griffith directed it.)

* *

"JAZZ MAD" I thought a fine, human thing, with Jean Hersholt doing some great character work. "Jazz Mad" isn't what the title leads you to think it is. There are jazz music and café scenes, etc., in it, but they are merely incidental. The main theme concerns itself with a German musician and composer, famous and beloved in his own part of the country, who comes to New York to sell a symphony he has written.

And meets heartbreak—and final happiness. The picture as a whole is most excellently produced. Direction, acting, photography are fine throughout.

"FORGOTTEN FACES" proved an alluring blend of fine acting, good direction, and excellent story. . . . You are handed some unusually effective photography and are kept sitting on the anxious seat from start to finish."

A crook film, this, with Clive Brook doing some great stuff as one courtly crook who sins urbanely under the name of "Heliotrope Harry." Notable in the cast is the Russian, Baclanova, who plays a bad lady in whirlwind fashion.

Bits aBOUTem.

That "sweetest little feller," Jackie Coogan, a living picture of what the well dressed man should wear, in his blue and white sports togs, dropped in between shows for a visit the other day. With him were his mother—Jackie gets his eyes from her—and his manager. Dad Coogan had decided he'd better stay at the theater, so that in case one-half the act got lost, the other half could go on.

"It takes Dad a lot longer to put on and take off his makeup than it does Jack," Mrs. Coogan said, "and, anyway——

"Mother——"

"I am speaking, Jack. Anyway, Jack didn't take his off. He wears just a little. You were going to say something, Jack?'

(You notice she calls him "Jack," not Jackie, and is bringing him up as a little boy should be brought up.)

"I was going to say, mother," Jack said, "that they've got the most WONderful photograph department here, with pictures and pictures of airplanes . . . ."

And he was off! He's crazy about airplanes. He knows all about the different makes and how to run them. He reads everything he can about them and pores over every picture of one he can lay his hands on. And the one dear desire of his heart is to be allowed to go up in one.

"I will not have it!" says Mrs. Coogan, firmly. "They're too far from perfect yet."

"But, MOTH-er—now, HOW many accidents ARE there!"

"You don't hear of many accidents yet because there aren't many planes yet," Mrs. Coogan replied, while the manager, Mr. Bernstein, asked: "How many people who STARTED to cross the ocean, CROSSED the ocean?"

"Well, I don't want to cross the ocean," Jackie said. "And how many accidents do they have in those planes that cross the channel all the time? Why, you never hear of one . . ." And from then on the discussion of airplanes, with arguments fer and agin, monopolized the conversation.

Practically monopolized it. But I learned, here and there, as it were, that my visitor is 14 years old (he looks about 10, the healthiest, happiest appearing youngster you could wish to see); that he's in second year high; that he doesn't get a bit nervous on the stage; that he's going to be an actor—or an aviator—when he grows up; that he's an all around golfer, swimmer, target shooter, and BOY; that the brown eyes are the same that broke our hearts in "The Kid," and that little Jackie Coogan is mighty sweet to his mother.

See you tomorrow!

Smith and the Newer Americans

By Clifford Raymond.

WHEN Al Smith made Mr. Raskob of General Motors chairman of his campaign committee and Mr. Lehman, the Jewish banker, chairman of his finance committee, he was saying that Big Business could not be too big for the Democratic party. For the northern end of the Democratic party that is traditionally false but realistically true. It was the free trade southern wing which stamped hostility to industrialism on the party. The northern rural Republicans are now more interested in free goods than are northern urban Democrats. But tradition holds out against fact. Mr. Smith offers Mr. Raskob and Mr. Lehman to rap the tradition on the chin.

That is only part of it. Mr. Smith, Mr. Raskob and Mr. Lehman not only invite the country to contemplate the democracy as a large money party but they step into the ring to have it out with whatever remains of the old Know Nothingism. The modern Kluxers mask their faces and declare their prejudices. The Know Nothing joiners showed their faces but concealed their purposes. Hence: "I don't know nothing" in answers to inquiries. But their outpouring of sentiment was "America for Americans"—whatever that meant then and whatever it may mean now.

Mr. Lehman is a Jew. Mr. Raskob is the son of an Alsatian father and an Irish mother. They are successful, distinctive and important products and exponents of the newer America. Smith himself is just that. As a candidate for President he has his origin in a city dominated by the newer Americans, Jews and Italians predominating. If his popularity there had not been powerful and persistent, he would not now be the candidate of the party.

If an emigrant from Carrickfergus in the north of Ireland had not come to his decision to seek new fortunes when he did, but had delayed his departure a few years, the seventh President of the United States would have been some one else than he was. He would not have been the man who evolved from the child of Scotch-Irish immigrants born in the frontier settlement in the Waxhaws on the North and South Carolina line. He wouldn't have been Andrew Jackson. A hundred years ago the then new Americans had a President whose qualification, even as to American birth, was by the narrowest of margins.

If old line Americanism ever was to cry out at the invasion of its privileges by the newcomer, it was when a New England Adams was defeated by a semi-fabulous, reputedly savage creature whose parents hardly had time to build a poor cabin in a forlorn clearing before he was born—a man who, as President, said "Put her thar," "I know them French," etc. And old line Americanism did cry out, but the frontiersman was the favorite everywhere in the east except in New England and, in Martin Van Buren, he made a Tammany man his successor.

The newer Americans appeared on the scene rather earlier than is generally acknowledged. At a meeting of the Virginia company in London, July 21, 1619—"a court held at Mr. fferrars Howse in St. Sythes Lane," there being present the "Right Honorable Henry Earle of Southampton, Robert Earle of Warwicke, Sir Edwin Sandis," and others, it was entered on the company records:

"Vpon some dispute of the Polonians resident in Virginia, it was now agreed [notwithstanding any former order to the contrary] that they shall be enfranchised, and made as free as any inhabitant there whatsoever: And because their skill in making pitch and tarr and soap-ashes shall not dye with them, it is agreed that some young men shalbe put unto them to learne their skill and knowledge therein for the benefitt of the Country thereafter."

A year before the Pilgrims were driven off their course by a tide rip and rounded back into Cape Cod bay to begin old line Americanism in the north, the newer Americans were being enfranchised in a bit older old line American settlement on the James river in Virginia. Poles were citizens of an American commonwealth before the Scrooby congregation had founded one. The Pole preceded the Yankee, the one contributing certain crafts, the other giving language, law and political institutions. Thus the knocking at the door appears in the light of ancient and respectable tradition.

It is recognized, of course, that the Dutch once had New York and the very best old line Americans were, and until recently still struggled to be, the Knickerbockers. South Carolina was French, the Mississippi valley was Spanish, the head of the Chesapeake was Swedish, Indiana and Illinois were French. The stream that flowed through the port of Philadelphia across into the Shenandoah and up that valley into the folds of the mountains to make the first of the new states was German and Scotch-Irish.

Many of Morgan's Virginia and Pennsylvania riflemen who marched through the Maine and Canadian wilderness to attack Quebec in the winter and who fought at Saratoga were Germans. The most fearless of forest trackers was Christian Frederick Post, the Pennsylvania Moravian and Indian peacemaker. One of the greatest scouts of the first frontier was George Crogan, the Irishman. The greatest Indian controller and administrator was William Johnson, Sir William for his achievements, another Irishman.

One of Rochambeau's officers, recording in his diary the impression Washington's army made on him when the French joined the Americans on the Hudson, wrote that they were stout fellows, very ragged but in fine spirits and that one-fourth of them were Negroes. Robert Morris was not the only financier of the revolution. Another was Haym Salomon.

The new American has a respectable antiquity in this past. When there was a frontier the new American of the time usually was bound for it when he came. The opportunity which was in the Connecticut valley and in the upper Virginia tidewater in 1660 was in Minnesota and the Dakotas in 1860. The new American took on a new aspect when instead of coming to find new lands he came to find old jobs, to enjoy fixed conditions rather than explore uncertain opportunities.

That indicated growth but not expansion. It did not threaten the primitive holders of land but the settled users of resources, for the most part the wage earners and the rent payers. The man who enjoyed the protection of the tariff wall did not frequently desire the protection of the immigration restriction rampart. The wage earner did. The nationalist and purist knew that the Polonians of Jamestown had been merged into the common stock. The Germans of the southern Appalachians soon could not be distinguished from the Scotch-Irish and Carolina Huguenots in the same region.

But the volume and the character of the new stream in through Ellis island startled the nationalist. Jamestown and Plymouth had given the country its institutions, its basic culture to be modified and made distinctive as American but not to be destroyed or changed into something else. Hence the restrictions wisely ordained and wisely guarded.

The newest of the new Americans have possession of the northern city. A selectman of old New England would think he was traveling in eastern Europe if he heard the roll call of a northern metropolitan city council. State legislatures reveal the political action of the newer metropolitan and industrial composition. The edge of an advance has touched the national house of representatives in spite of the partial disfranchisement of cities by the congressional refusal to reapportion. The old order fights quietly but stubbornly. The new order presses on noisily. The United States senate remains of the elder people.

Smith is the man of the metropolis, of the great composite. A hundred years ago the revolt was in the submerged peoples of the frontier, the newcomers in statehood and nationality. They put the son of the Carrickfergus immigrant in the White House. Now the thing has turned itself round about. The fire is in the cities and not in the woods and prairies. The newer peoples are not in the mountains and valleys, but in the flats, tenements and streets, and their Jackson is Al Smith.

Why Risk Golf Clubs on a Permanent Wave?

By Burns Mantle.

LAKE PLACID CLUB, New York.—[Special Correspondence.]—One nice thing about a vacation. It sets you thinking. I suppose that is what the psychologists are driving at when they say that any change is rest. So few of us have time to think at home.

I have been sitting here thinking for a long time now. As a matter of fact I really began thinking three days ago when we started to pack. I remember once thinking that if a certain party asked me just once more why I insisted on taking all the things I was taking I certainly should try the effect of a niblick on a permanent wave.

But one thought follows another, as you know. Nature abhors a vacuum and as fast as one thought rushes out another is certain to rush in. I had no sooner thought of using the niblick, or perhaps a spoon, because of the greater length of handle, than I began to consider the consequences. Both clubs have hickory shafts and a good hickory shaft is hard to get these days. Therefore wouldn't it be better to try a good stout walking stick? Or perhaps an umbrella handle? Even the umbrella rack itself?

How to Discipline One's Wife.

That seemed the best thought of all at the time it came. I knew I could lift the umbrella rack because the last time we moved I had tried it. Which reminded me that I also had broken it when I set it down. Or at least cracked it. Not so it shows particularly. We keep the crack turned the other way. But still the crack is there, and, on second thought, it seemed foolish to risk a cracked umbrella stand on so important an issue.

I had just dismissed that thought from my mind, and was going back to the niblick idea when the chief packer spoke to me again.

"I said," she said, "are you going to take all that truck?"

And quick as a flash I said "No!"

So that settled that. In a trice, and certainly in less than two trices, the air was cleared.

It just goes to show what a little diplomacy and quick thinking will do to save a situation—even a tense situation. If I had insisted on taking all that stuff my very existence would surely have led to one thing or another and I probably would have had to buy a new niblick.

Ideal Thinking Environment.

As it is, here we are! And I have found a perfectly heavenly corner of the writing room where the thinking conditions are practically perfect. What any man thinks here is simply nobody's business. And if you prefer it you can think in simpler spelling language. Placid's Dr. Dewey, who is the world's authority on the subject, doesn't care a bit. In fact, after thirty-five years of trying to convince a foolish world that it wastes at least a third of its life putting extra letters into words like "thought," and "through," and so on, and writing it "ice" when they really mean "ys"—the doctor has worked so hard that any help he gets from the outside world now is ever so encouraging.

I tried thinking in a simpler language, so to speak, and discovered it really makes for simpler thoughts. I have just come back from a morning round of golf that could have been better, and, again, might have been worse. If it were not for a couple of nines and an eight just when I needed them least it would have been a good score. Certainly a more profitable morning would have resulted if it had not been for those two nines. But I happened to be playing with one of those fuss-budgets who counts every teeny-weeny little stroke. Once I merely stubbed the toe of the putter. I'll bet the ball didn't move six inches. And yet he counted that!

Commits the Unpardonable Sin.

However, to get back to simpler thinking for simpler minds. I was a bit late for dinner. Dinner is from 1 to 2. By the time I had washed up it was just a shade past 2:30, and, as I understand it, somebody's day was more or less completely ruined.

I couldn't quite make out whether it was the cook's or the waitress' or Mr. Holt's day. It probably was Holt's. Being an executive vice president, he naturally worries a good deal if a fellow doesn't eat his dinner when he is expected to. Or it may have been Mrs. Dewey's day I spoiled.

Don't tell anybody I said so, but Emily Dewey practically runs this club. The other vice presidents and executive secretaries, all males, do not exactly cringe before her. You know what I mean. They don't actually bow down and grovel. But when they see that look come into her eyes they just naturally listen. And by the time they are through listening the thing is as good as done.

I was thinking just the other day—I think it was really the first thinking I had done up here—I was thinking that we never have had as completely feminized a world as we have today. And efficiently feminized, too.

We were unpacking. I had taken out my golf shirt and there were two buttons gone. Instantly the thought flashed through my mind: That is because you patronize a steam

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T SINCE

By Wallace Rice.

UPON the remark, "It was twenty years since," some merry jester with a black grammatical heart arises to query "Since what?" He doesn't know that "since" does mean "ago"; but the dictionaries do.

Webster says "'Since': In the time past, counting backward from the present, before this or now"; and adds, because of the merry jester, "Some critics object to this usage." In differentiating "since" and "ago" this dictionary observes "'ago' refers to a point in time past; 'since,' in strict usage, to the period intervening between such a point and the present; in 'ago' the mind is carried back from the present, in 'since' from a starting point in the past." But it quotes Roscommon: How many years since has Vergil writ, and Newman's hymn: Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile."

The Century knows nothing of such strict usage, or of the objections of some critics, but says "'Since.' Before now; ago; with an adverbial phrase specifying the amount of time separating the event or time in question from the present; as, many years since, not long since"; and quotes old Coryot: This Church was built by a certain Bishop of this city, about four hundred years since.

The Great Oxford says "'Since.' Ago, before now. With time specified, or preceded by 'long'"; and gives an instance from 1624: Though his mind had been that way twenty years since; another from 1662: The Chineses have some books printed above seven hundred years since; and from Peacock: He went out a little while since.

The Concise Oxford defines "since" as meaning "ago"; and gives as instances of correct use: Happened many years since; how long since is it?; saw him not long since.

Between the querulous pedant and the merry jester our English language grows various.

More Comic Chaps of the Years That Were

By Figaro McGee.

TOO RECENT, perhaps, were the activities of Eddie Foy for "good copy" in this series about the comedians of the 'Nineties and of the first fifteen or twenty years of the present century; yet, his name has a place high in any authentic list of the chaps who made the public laugh through a stretch of years. His death followed hard upon an engagement in Chicago—a week in the Palace, where he had been booked so late that not many theater-goers really knew he was in town. Then, it is not so long ago since his autobiography, "Clowning Through Life," was new in the book-stalls; and the casual, awkward narrative tells a deal about this mussy, likable merry-andrew.

EDDIE FOY

Like so many other funny-men of the American stage, Foy didn't quite know when he was through, so far as the value of his name at the box-office was concerned. Considering that he was limited and uncommonly "personal" in his stage-work, he held popular affection longer than most of the low-comedians. Middle-aged Chicago theater-goers don't have to be reminded that Foy, as a celebrity, dated back to 1888, when he had the foolin' to look after in the second of the Henderson pieces in the Chicago Opera-House, "The Crystal Slipper." But he was a fun-maker of consequence before that. It seems that he meant something to the public when he formed a trio with Eddie Girard and the late Henry V. Donnelly, and worked with the late Kate Castleton in something named "Crazy-Patch." So, it is reasonable to say that he had thirty years of high vogue, and then the ten of dwindling importance that led him to a saddening little act about an old-timer—the one he did when in the Palace just before his death.

A Sad Fellow Off-Stage.

Foy, whom I knew pretty well, was not a cheerful chap away from his audiences. He seemed to me forever beset by the notion that this manager, or that actor, or such a critic was bent on destroying him. Believing religiously that no audience could well ask for more laughter in an evening than he was able to provide, he resented the presence of another labelled comedian in the cast; but sensible managers knew that the method for getting the best he had from Foy was to put another with him or near him. He was engaged when the century was young to support Francis Wilson in "The Strollers," and wondered why they needed Wilson. He found out at rehearsal that, whereas Wilson's rôle ran through the piece, his own part was a brief one—a mere "bit," and that he was expected to "build it up." Also, he alleged, he found Wilson a bit patronizing, although I'm inclined to think this may have been Foy's state of mind rather than any high-hatting on the part of the star. But it was a state of mind that whipped Foy into action. He, rather than Wilson, took the honors at the New-York première; and that success established him in Broadway.

Foy was funny, although a great many well-meaning theater-goers always said they didn't think he was. He was of the school of "slob" comedians—untidy and awry, and getting much of his laughs from the use of "props." His rôle, whatever it might have been in the author's mind, was that of the eternal oaf when Foy finished with it to his own satisfaction. Yet, he earnestly longed to do Something Higher: that tale of his desiring to act Hamlet was mostly true, although in his book he tried to explain that it was an elaborate joke, put out to advertise him in a show named "Mr. Hamlet of Broadway." He was at his best in the Henderson pieces, here in Chicago; in "Piff! Paff! Pouff"; in "The Orchid" and "Mr. Bluebeard"; and in "The Strollers," mentioned above.

Peter F. Dailey.

There was another comedian whose funmaking was "personal": that is, something of his own that had little to do with the author's notions; and he was for nearly twenty years among the idolized laugh-getters of the American stage. If Dailey ever took his work seriously, it must have been in the fabled days when he was one of the American Four, who gave an "act" in the old-time, ante-Keith variety-theaters. His business in the days when he was prominent and popular was to find out when and where he entered the scene, and then to work out a plan for gag-studding it. Few of the actors with whom he worked were able to cope with him when he took to gag-lining a scene: those who grew angry at his impromptus were licked by his beaming good-nature; and those who encouraged him were wellnigh invariably so convulsed with laughter that they became part of the audience.

Dailey withdrew from the American Four to make a "team" with James Hoey, brother of Old Hoss Hoey, of "A Parlor Match," and a funnier chap than his kinsman, although he never really emerged from the varieties. He erred, I thought, in billing himself as Young Mule, brother of Old Hoss: he leaned on the kinship rather than on his own fund of quick, sardonic humor. He and Dailey were too much alike to make a successful "team," although they were immensely amusing in a manner a bit out of the reach of the variety-theater audiences of their day. They parted after a season or so; and, while Hoey went on to desuetude Dailey went into white-face, and scored heavily in his first rôle—that of a flashy sport in "A Straight Tip," of which James T. Powers was the star. He remained with Powers for another piece, "A Mad Bargain," and then was made into a star in a dandy show named "A Country Sport," wherein he had some of his best scenes with May Irwin.

Dailey as a Weberfield.

But it was as a member of Weber and Fields' famous travesty company that Dailey really found himself. He belonged to it, helped to make it what it was, was missed when he withdrew (although his place was taken by so gifted a comedian as William Collier), and was welcomed with tears of joy when he returned. He was of and in it on its final tour—that of 1904, at the end of which the venture was disbanded. He took part in some of its best fun: he was, as a matter of fact, in the company from the beginning of its second season, when Sam Bernard was the "other fellow," meaning the one who played most of the scenes with Weber and Fields, themselves; when Fay Templeton was in it, and May Robson, and Charles J. Ross, and John T. Kelly (who was always in it), and Frankie Bailey, and Bonnie Maginn, and Lillian Russell.

There's not been since his death—here, in 1908, in Chicago—anybody quite like him. He had such a gorgeous output of infectious affability that what would have been insolence in others was forgiven him by his audiences. Moreover, he had an enormous sense of sheer burlesque. I wonder, as I write, how many others recall something he did in one of the Weber-Fields shows. Male voices "off" were heard singing "For he's a jolly good-fellow!" as Dailey entered, facing the wings and walking backward into sight of the audience, the while he waved his hat and smiled and threw kisses off-stage as if bidding au-revoir to some beloved pals. I was among those who wondered why Dailey, of all actors, should accept such a gummy, sappy "entrance," with its suggestion of "Here I am!" The song died away; Dailey waved and saluted; and, as he put on his hat, he turned to the audience and muttered:

"Jolly dogs, those stage-hands!"

Marouf's Popularity Demands an Encore

By Edward Moore.

In a letter sent out over his name he speaks of the erection of a number of theaters seating from 500 to 10,000, a Greek theater for Greek ballets, and an open air inclosure on the lake, where large spectacles can be watched by from 100,000 to 200,000 persons, and in addition islands with the architecture in the style of the various nationalities where folk dance groups can present their national dances and rituals.

Chicago's own share is to be a ballet company of about seventy-five dancers ready to present all that is important in the past or present, with special mention of John Alden Carpenter's "Birthday of the Infanta" and "Skyscrapers." To it will come, it is hoped, such visitors as the Denishawns, the Neighborhood Playhouse, Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey, and Michio Ito, possibly Pavlowa and the Diaghileff company.

"We plan to present on a tremendous scale," he adds, "the 'Salut au Monde' by Walt Whitman, with music by the late American composer, Charles T. Griffes, and use it in the different eastern groups who will come to the fair. The American Indians will give their dances and rituals with backgrounds of their local architecture. For instance, for the southwest Indians the background will be Pueblo.

Plenty of Material.

"There are today in the United States not less than 50,000 dancing instructors. They have an average of seventy-five pupils each, which means a tremendous total who are seriously devoting themselves to dancing.

"Instead of going abroad for special instruction, for atmosphere, for visualizing the dances of the world, they may now conserve their time and money and come to Chicago in 1933.

"Here they can see and learn the best of all the nations, in culture and tradition; in costumes and music, in what I firmly believe will be the greatest festival of dancing the world will ever have seen.

"At the request of the centennial trustees I am writing to the directors of famous dancing organizations, directors of opera houses, presidents of folk dance societies, authors and critics of the dance, and distinguished individual dancers, etc., asking their suggestions for centennial programs. From the ensemble I know that a marvelous display can be made, with immense cultural value."

Coates Wins Praise.

An indication by Edward Cushing of the Brooklyn Eagle that Albert Coates, lately conducting some of the New York Stadium concerts, is the sort of person to be much appreciated if he ever happens to pay a professional visit to Chicago:

"Mr. Coates' popularity at the Stadium will be greatly enhanced by his personality. A large and genial person, you feel that he makes friends easily with his audiences. Last evening he was supremely affable, waving his hand in response to applause and taking it upon himself to repeat a number on the program that had been evidently enjoyed. But other qualities than those of personality recommend him as a musician. His conducting is to be distinguished from that of his English colleagues by its lack of characteristic temperamental frigidity, by its imaginative daring. We have heard sounder performances of Strauss than those contrived by Mr. Coates, but none more brilliant, more pictorial in character. He is, we conclude, a dramatic conductor by nature, and we should welcome the opportunity to hear him in the opera house—particularly we should like to hear him do 'Boris' or 'Prince Igor' or 'Sadko.'"

Choral Club Program.

The Chicago and North Western Railway Choral club will sing oratorio-opera, and some old time melodies in Lake Geneva, Wis., today, at the invitation of the Lake Geneva Chamber of Commerce. Harry Slater, machine foreman and tenor, conducts the mixed choral club of fifty employés, and Miss Harriet Pawson is pianist with the club.

Mixed ensemble numbers and separate selections by the women's and men's choruses will be included in the Lake Geneva program of the singing railroad employés when they interpret Gounod, Haydn, Donizetti, Verdi, Strauss, and Offenbach, and at intervals plantation songs.

Secret of Youth.

"I feel as if I were the quintessence of youth," remarked Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa. "I have just finished rehearsing my band in my new program—or big show, as some critics prefer to call my productions. And I think the public will agree with me that it is crammed full of the elements that all those youthful in spirit will relish. Love, humor, travel, adventure, a faint touch of pathos, and new marches and old, with tunes that will stir the blood and awaken hope. And to delight the eyes there will be a stage full of gold and silver and ebony instruments, all played by as handsome and capable a lot of Americans as one can gather from the four corners of the United States and Canada. Youth!

"I am just starting on my thirty-sixth annual tour, and where in the world will you find a person who can endure the rigors of such a tour better than I? Four hours every day, for five months to come, I shall stand on my band platform, directing. Does the public fully realize the vast amount of physical energy that swinging one's arms for such a length of time requires? And there are no waits between numbers for me to catch my breath.

"Of the mental strain I need not speak. I think every one appreciates the alertness that a conductor must posses. And then we spend four, five, and six hours every day riding to the next town, and sometimes we play two different towns in one day, with the afternoon town a hundred miles away from the night town.

"And my regular work is all rounded out with countless interviews, countless talks before Rotary clubs, Kiwanis clubs, women's clubs, and school children. Am I vain in thinking that it takes the fire of youth to go through with such an itinerary?"

She is pictorial and imaginative when she undertakes to sing the heroine of the Bizet opera, and it is one reason why she is always interesting in the part. She is appearing in it tonight at Ravinia as the conclusion of a day devoted to the entertainment of the Polish Arts club.

Munich Holds Its Wagner Festival

TOURING Europe vicariously with Herbert M. Johnson, manager of the Chicago Civic Opera company:

"Munich, July.—We have returned to Munich after an interesting fortnight spent in Italy to find practically all of the German opera houses closed. They will shortly reopen, however, for their regular summer seasons of opera and concert.

"I have just received the program for the Wagner and Mozart festivals here in Munich at the Prince Regent and Residence theaters. It is interesting to compare the prices charged with those we charge in Chicago. The festival is under the management of the Bavarian State theaters and the bulk of the performances will be under the direction of Prof. Hans Knappersbusch, who is the general musical director of the Bavarian government.

"The Wagner operas are to be produced at the Prince Regent theater, a house which holds 1,106 persons. The prices range from $2.50 to $6.00, capacity of the house being somewhere in the neighborhood of $4,500. The seats have been sold on subscription since March 1, and we understand that the bulk of them are already sold out. The same is true of the smaller Residence theater, which holds only 577 persons. Here the Mozart operas are to be given at prices ranging from $1.50 to $8.50. Even with the increased prices, the capacity of the Residence theater is considerably less than that of the Prince Regent.

"So it is not surprising that the artists who have been announced for the season include only one or two names known outside of Germany. In the list of eleven sopranos we found no one known in the United States. The same was true of the three contraltos. Only Kurt Taucher of the nine tenors has a reputation which extends beyond the frontiers of Germany, and the seven baritones and seven bassos are likewise unknown abroad.

"The company is presenting eight Wagnerian music dramas and five Mozart operas in a period of five weeks. New scenery and costumes have been announced for three of the productions, 'Lohengrin,' 'Die Meistersinger,' and 'Cosi fan tutte.'

Cleaner Streets.

"Munich is making great preparations for the festival season and is determined to have clean streets at any cost. Henceforth it will cost one mark, or 24 cents, to throw away pieces of paper, orange or banana peel in the streets of Munich. All members of the uniformed police force have been instructed to warn offenders, who must pay the sum stated for the warning.

"A receipt will be given. The system has already been tried out on a limited scale, and the result in the way of cleaner streets was so gratifying that the new order was issued.

"At Dresden preparations are being made to reopen the theater on Aug. 12 with Mozart's 'The Magic Flute,' and in the beginning of September Puccini's 'Manon Lescaut' will be given its first hearing in Dresden. The original German production of 'Sly,' a tragi-comedy of Wolf-Ferrari, will mark the middle of October.

"An extensive Schubert celebration at Dresden during the fall will include, among other works, his symphonies in B natural and C sharp, the seldom given 'Stabat Mater' for chorus, soloists and orchestra, and Schubert's 'Singspiel' (play with music), 'Die Weiberverschwoerung' (The Wives' Conspiracy), which has been rearranged by Rolf Lauckner and Busch-Tovey, and will have dances studied to music of Franz Schubert.

"Tschaikowsky's 'Pique Dame' will be heard during the season. A one act evening is planned, consisting of Tschaikowski's ballet, 'Der Nussknacker' (The Nutcracker), the first European production of 'The Snowbird,' a lyrical episode by the American composer, Theodore Stearns, and Puccini's 'Gianni Schicchi.'

Music Drama Debut.

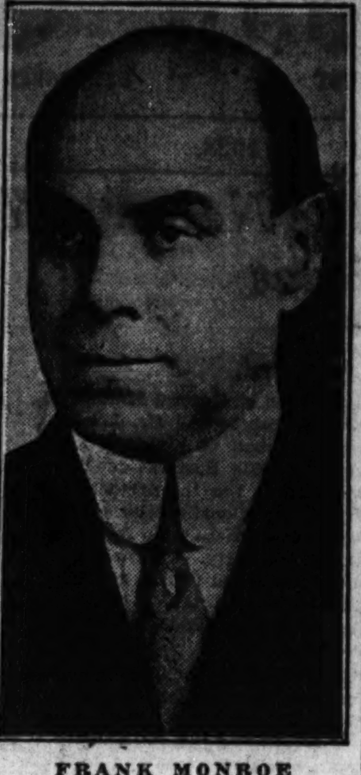
"There is a prospect of a first production of a music drama by Hans Pfitzner, 'Der arme Heinrich' (Poor Henry).

"Wagner's 'Rheingold' will start the revival of the series of the 'Ring' operas, something that has long been desired in Dresden. It is also proposed to revive several of the German play operas, including 'Die Drei Pintos,' by Carl Maria von Weber; 'Der Wildschuetz,' of Lortzing; 'Die Lustigen Weiber von Windsor,' by Nicolai; 'Der Barbier von Bagdad,' by Peter Cornelius—the original version. The repertory of Mozart's works will be increased by the renewed presentation of 'Die Gaertnerin aus Liebe' and 'Bastien and Bastienne.'

"We met Chase Baromeo in Munich the other day. He was just back from a mountaineering trip in the Bavarian Tyrol and had to his credit an ascent of Zugspitze, the highest mountain in Germany. Mr. Baromeo will be in Bavaria resting and studying another month or two before returning to Chicago.

"Marion Claire will shortly be leaving the Semmering for Milan, where she plans to spend a week or two in the arduous task of closing up her apartment in preparation for her return to the United States. She will be in Chicago shortly after the first of September."

FAMILIAR



FRANK MONROE

He's among the well-known players listed for "Trapped," the new melodrama wherewith the Woods will be opened, Thursday night, for the season. . . . Mr. Monroe is known well in Chicago, where he has been a frequent visitor ever since he originated the part of the persistent but human detective in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." He was here last winter in "Two Girls Wanted."

The Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

For those who do their theater going in the armchair or who like to read the plays they see.

AT RAVINIA.

TONIGHT "Carmen" is being sung. It is as popular an opera as was ever written—and rightly so. There is drama in every flick of Carmen's eyelash. Bizet had his drama made for him by Prosper Merimee, who wrote the story of the Spanish gypsy and her Corsican lover. The tale was published in 1847 and it was 28 years after that that the opera "Carmen" was produced. The novelette is still in print and popular. By the way, one of the most memorable experiences in the lives of every one who saw it was a production of "Carmencita and the Soldier," given by the Russians. They used the music of "Carmen," made of the novel a drama even more palpitatingly tense than Meilhac and Halevy made for the Bizet opera, and surrounded it with scenes and choreography that took your breath away. The seed of the inspiration for both music and drama was planted by Merimee in his zestful and gripping romance, "Carmen."

Next Saturday night that eternal favorite, "The Barber of Seville," is being given. If you wish to know the literary forbears of the opera you must go back to the eighteenth century. You will find a dramatic story of the unconscious influence which Beaumarchais had upon the history of France. Accorded the most important writer of his day, "The Barber of Seville" was his most popular drama, and thus, of course, exercised an enormous influence. Figaro, in his play, was something unusual in those days, a republican, an incarnation of the new democracy—or that is what his listeners found him. Literary authorities have always said that Beaumarchais was interested mostly in exercising his wit, and he found in the figure of Figaro a puppet for that purpose. However, when he wrote a sequel to "The Barber of Seville," "The Marriage of Figaro," his chief character was looked upon by the state as so daringly democratic and revolutionary that the play was legally prohibited from production. Jugging was as effective in those days as it is today in selling books. The result of the ban was that when the play was finally produced in 1784, every one rushed to see it, and the crowd was so terrific that three persons were crushed to death trying to enter the theater. Some one said of him, "He wished to fire a squib and he exploded a magazine," for the two plays were of intense influence in the years which culminated in the revolution. Now they seem very mild to us. "The Barber of Seville," which has survived as an opera rather than as a play, seems rather gaudy foolishness than anything with dangerous political subcurrent.

Alfred Neumann, author of "The Patriot."

PUBLISHED.

One of the sensations of Europe last year was a play called "The Patriot." Some critics went so far as to call it "probably the greatest play written in the German language in our century," and almost all of them declared it the most important drama since the world war. It was written by Alfred Neumann. It was adapted for the English stage by Ashley Dukes, and in its published form has an introduction by Hendrik Willem Van Loon, who writes a few pages about the historical background of the play and the character of the Emperor Paul, whose insanity nearly wrecked his empire and who was sacrificed by the patriot who was his governor and friend. Following that there is a discussion of the play itself by Gilbert Gabriel, whose enthusiasm for the play is frankly expressed.

The patriot was Count Pahlen, who, determined that Paul was a menace to his country, headed a conspiracy to force his abdication, but who worked with such subtlety as intrigue has rarely known. The way he used his mistress to still the king's fears, the high handed manner in which he notified the heir apparent only on the eve of the abdication, the coldness with which he planned even the emperor's death, although he had given his word of honor to the crown prince that no harm should come to his father, and the way the dramatist has succeeded in making the battle between his affections for his tsar and his country conflict, are alike masterly.

There are scenes in "The Patriot" which are unrivaled for tenseness and bitterness and irony. The end is said to be a theatrical trick, for history does not say that Count Pahlen ordered himself shot at sunrise, but a couple of bullet shots just as the curtain goes down is one of the most tried of dramatic thrills.

The play reminded me of one of the most impressive books I ever read, Edgar Saltus' "The Imperial Orgy," a sketchy history of Russia, but so vivid in its photographs of debauchery and the utter disregard of any human life except the life of the court that the debacle of the Russian court seemed inevitable.

The Voice of the Movie Fa

Silence Is Golden.

My Dear Miss Tinée: I do n member, nor does it matter, wh used the now somewhat hack phrase—silence is golden. I can no better words with which the question you have raised followers of the silver screen Do you, or don't you like the movies, and why?

The very lack of the spoken has always constituted a charm for me. Watching a story unfold I have, in my tion, invested the characters voices they should have. So was no discordant note destroy the delightful illusion.

How many times, in spoken-play have we not keenly disappointed in the beautiful woman a great starring? And how often, we not found enchantment voice of another whose physi could not be counted great?

The same will undoubtedly of the screen. Possibly in future the delicate, vitaphon ism will be entirely perfected the sound of the human voice flawlessly reproduced.

But mechanical perfection not enough; the personality player is reflected in his voice a mirror. The spoken chara tion must be as convincing as that which by gesture expression he may so marvel tray. I do not say this is —that it is a thing of land—but I think it will be difficult to attain.

Until then—may it remain lent drama." We understand they are saying, those delight ple, who carry us out of a work-a-day world into one believe, and might-have-been language is universal.

Yours sincerely,

Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news of and comment on the plays and the shows in the Chicago theaters of a decade ago, as printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of August 4, 1918—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

After Fiske O'Hara's engagement at the Olympic in "Marry in Haste," Messrs. Smith and Golden will present "Turn to the Right!" again beginning August 25. The cast will include Jason Robards, Joe Smith Marba, Mabel Bert, Helen Collier, Barry McCormack, and Jessie Glendinning.

O'Hara in those days had a small clientele. . . . "Turn to the Right!" was about worn out in Chicago, where there had in 1917 been a run in Cohan's Grand.

"Oh, Look!" which will open the La Salle's season Tuesday night, is James Montgomery's farce, "Ready Money," set to verse and music by Joseph McCarthy and Harry Carroll. The songs include "It's a Long Road to Peacock's," "Carolina," "A Kiss for Cinderella," "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows," "I Don't Remember Now," and "Do You Want to Marry?"

'Twas a fairish make-over of "Ready-Money," which had been a farce with a fresh idea. The tunes were so-so.

"Among Those Present," with Cyril Keightley, A. E. Anson, Hassard Short, W. B. Mack, and Marjorie Patterson.

"Sawdust and Sentiment," by L. B. Yates.

Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Amazing Interlude," dramatized by Edward E. Rose.

"All Wrong," a dramatization of William S. McNutt's "A Burglar's Feelings," by W. H. Post.

Laurette Taylor in "Happiness."

George Arliss in "Hamilton."

Alexandre Carlisle in "A Country Cousin," formerly "The Ohio Lady," beginning here on Labor Day.

Booth Tarkington's "Penrod."

Apart from Miss Taylor in "Happiness," none of Mr. Tyler's listed ventures really clicked, although Mr. Arliss found a certain loyalty among those who had thought him immense in "Disraeli."

"Seven Days' Leave," imminent at the Garrick, is a British melodrama of the war, showing in its animated procedure the gun-deck of an American cruiser, United States troops dedicating a shrine in an English churchyard, and other magnetic episodes appropriate to the time. In it there is a German spy, who steals the plans of the fortifications, and Lady Mary Heather, an intrepid Englishwoman, swimming far out at sea to thwart such villains as may be current in the secret-service of the Teutonic powers. The play begins September 1.

And it was, oddly enough, just the kind of play described in the excerpt. The actress of the "intrepid Englishwoman" won a measure of expressed approval because she was shapely in a bathing-suit; and that was about all.

In the dramatization of Mrs. Rinehart's war-tale, "The Amazing Interlude," Miss Marie Doro will impersonate the ineffable Saralée, who served soup to the soldiers and fell in love with the Belgian spy.

Miss Doro by 1918 was just a name; and she was little else.

Percy Mackaye has written and Arthur Hopkins will produce a play called "Washington, The Man Who Made Us," dealing with the days and characters of the American Revolution. Though Mr. Mackaye is a poet, the drama is in prose and is divided into sixteen "actions" and fourteen "transitions." Among these are shown Washington paying court to Martha Custis, Washington crossing the Delaware, Washington freezing at Valley Forge, and the unfurling of Betsy Ross' first flag. Robert Edmond Jones, decorator of the impending "Garden of Paradise," will design the scenes and costumes.

Mr. Mackaye has written so many plays that the writer of these memoranda may be pardoned for confessing that he doesn't recall the one about George.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files of twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1908, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of August 2 by the paragraphs of news and comment and the entries of current entertainment that follow. The excerpts are verbatim.

Miss Mary Cecil, who has been understudying Charlotte Walker in the rôle of Hilda in "The Wolf," will go east presently to begin rehearsals in "The Little Affair at Boyd's," in which William Gillette will star this season. Once upon a time, Miss Cecil played in "The Time, the Place, and the Girl."

Mr. Gillette is still remembered for "Secret Service" and "Sherlock Holmes" rather than for the comedy named above.

James Young, last seen in Chicago with "Three Twins," will star this season in "Brown of Harvard," the college-play by his wife, Rida Johnson Young.

Mr. Young was a persistent chap, if an indifferent actor. He was an early deserter to the movies, and the husband, in the course of time, of the performer known to screen-goers as Clara Kimball Young.

This is going some! At the premier performance of "I Take This Man," a new comedy produced at Springfield (Mass.) by Henry W. Savage, it is reported that the audience applauded until the curtain had been raised and lowered forty-seven times. Edith Ellis, who wrote the drama, portrays a man who, moved by a nomadic spirit, deserts his wife and children. "He returns home after eleven years' absence," our informant continues, "at a time when his wife is contemplating a new marriage. Interesting dramatic incidents ensue."

Despite the forty-seven curtain-calls in Springfield (Mass.), "I Take This Man" didn't flutter the general populace. . . . Mrs. Ellis continues to write plays: "White Collars," shown in 1926 in the Cort, was one of hers.

KIDDING THEIR WAY IN THE G. V. F.

HAROLD WHALEN and HARRY JANS

THEY are prevalent in the show in the Four Cohans, trading their nifties in the traditional style of the old-time sidewalk-conversationalists, each, in his turn, "playing straight" to the other. If, for the moment, Mr. Whalen seems bolder than Mr. Jans, it is for the moment only; and in the next moment you are of the opinion that Mr. Jans is bolder than Mr. Whalen. And so it goes with the industry of evoking laughter in the American theater of 1928.

Miraculous Escape.

Across from our home there is a large apartment house seventeen stories in height. There is a family occupying an apartment on the fifteenth floor who have a little boy of about 3. One day in the early spring I was sitting on our front steps when I heard his familiar voice calling to me.

I looked up and found the child leaning far out of the window of his room waving to me. I tried to call to him to look out, but he didn't seem to hear. He wanted me to wave to him and kept waving at me in an attempt to get me to reply. Suddenly he lost his balance. He caught at the window ledge in an attempt to steady himself. I yelled and went almost crazy with fear.

For what seemed an eternity the tot wavered there in midair. He had leaned too far, though, and could not stop. With a shriek he tumbled. I hid my face in my hands, I think. At any rate, when I realized what had happened I saw the child, shrieking from the shock, safe on the balcony a floor below, where a mattress had been spread to air. J. E. M.

Close Call.

I have had more than the average hair breadth escapes and thrills and am still going strong, but me and mine encountered one recently that has left a lasting memory. A road hog gave us a hasty choice of a smashup or the ditch. We choose the latter, trusting to luck we might keep the road, but owing to the wet sand of a recently dug out embankment, we skidded, knocking down fence posts and making for a telegraph post.

Sitting in front I was terrified at our fate.

Death seemed inevitable. I prayed, bracing myself and clinging on for dear life. The horrible crash came, all went black and to be able to get out seemed almost unbelieveable, but I did and hastened to aid the rest, who were thrown out and stunned.

Our miraculous escape from death and serious injury is a mystery to all, but we thank providence for our safety and well-being. The car is a wreck. W. F. D

Won at the Races.

I was more than delighted when my uncle finally secured permission from my puritanical father to take me with him to the races.

Uncle was having good luck, and I a glorious time. In the last race he insisted I pick a horse that took my fancy. I did.

It won and paid $74.10 to one. Thrilled? I say so! N. A.

New in Manhattan

New York, Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Earl Carroll, resuming activity as a producer, will make known here tomorrow night a new issue of his Vanities, with W. C. Fields, Joe Frisco, Miss Ray Dooley, Gordon Dooley, Miss Martha Morton, Lillian Roth, Miss Dorothy Knapp, and Vincent Lopez . . . . This is Mr. Carroll's first production in two years. The issue of the Vanities shown last Winter in Chicago was made up of matter from two earlier issues seen in New York.

Patrick Kearney's dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' "Elmer Gantry" will be shown Tuesday night, with William A. Brady superintending the preparations. The play was recently exhibited in Cleveland. Edward Pauley, who originated the title rôle; Miss Vera Allen, drafted from the Grand-Street Follies; and Lumsden Hare, last in Chicago in 1927 with Miss Helen Hayes in "What Every Woman Knows," are in the cast.

"Guns," by James Hagen, a new writer. The management calls it "a thrilling story of gangland."

"He Understood Women," by Frances Lynch and Michael Kallesser. Although the authors are native (at least, to the extent that they have for some time been residents of the United States), the piece is described as "a continental comedy." Miss Peggy Allenby and Miss Hilda Spong are of the cast.

What Was the Bon-Mot?

In a letter to the New-York World, Arthur William Row recalls a bon-mot tossed off by the late Emily Stevens. It seems that a friend of Miss Stevens was buying, with prodigal hand, furnishings for a new flat. One night at dinner, she announced to her guests that at last all was bought for her bedroom.

"In fact," she assured them, "my bedroom problem is solved!"

"Oh!" said Emily: "that is a great deal for any woman!"—From the Detroit Playgoer.

laundry! If you had had sense enough to go back to an old fashioned hand and home laundry one or more of the laundry ladies, with perspiration streaming down her face and neck and disappearing, as we used to say, in the folds of her ample bosom—one of the ladies would have put down her iron and sewn on the two buttons.

Or, when the shirt came home, if you had spoken about it, or even let a certain party know——

However, I kept this thought to myself, too. Half the success of simpler thinking is in knowing the thoughts you should keep to yourself. But it helped me decide that my missing my dinner probably worried Mrs. Dewey more than any one else.

There are only 1,400 boarders here this August, and not over 1,300 of them can be counted on to eat three meals a day. Naturally, if there are fewer than 1,300 at dinner Mrs. Dewey worries. Next time I shall send my caddie in to warn her that I may not come—unless I am too far behind to have any hope of squaring the match. In that case I shall just quit and cut across the links to the dining room.

Tries to Forget the Theater.

Well, sir, I came up here primarily to think about the theatre. And I think I could have thought about the theatre if it had not been that all winter I have been spelling it, as we are instructed to do on my paper, the French way—"tre." "Tre" isn't simple! It isn't phonetic! It isn't anything! T-h-e-a-t-e-r! That's the simple, honest, wholesome, 100 per cent native American way to spell theater, not t-h-e-a-t-r-e! That's a silly French affectation and always has been. And thinking of that when I was trying to think of something else just put all thought of what I was trying to think about out of my mind.

It probably is just as well. After you have been thinking about the theatre for forty-eight weeks it is good to think of something else.

I remember, now! What I really came up here to think about was the late Ellen Terry. I thought perhaps we could have a pleasant visit recalling that gracious lady and nobly impressive spirit. She never, I think, was a great actress in the sense that Eleanora Duse was a great actress, or Sarah Bernhardt. But she was a great lady possessed of a great talent, and you loved her for what she was while admiring her for what she did. You came away from the theatre always a little thrilled with the sweet memory of her.

Possessed Indefinable Charm.

I think of the completely disarming charm of her Portia when I think of Terry, not of the power and sweep of her performance. Nor was there any illusion of masculinity in her court scene, nor could have been even had she worn whiskers, as they say the Shakespearean boy-actresses used to do.

A very great charm was Ellen Terry's greatest and dearest asset, and such were the parts she chose—Pauline, Portia, Ophelia, Desdemona, Beatrice, Juliet in her younger days, Lady Teazle, Rosamond in "Becket," Mme. Sans Gene. Yet when she played Lady Macbeth she was credited with a moving power, and I recall her hard, bitter fisherman's wife in "The Good Hope" as a rôle soundly and convincingly characterized.

She was greatly loved and fittingly honored. She died happily and with her courage strong. "No funeral gloom, my dears, when I am gone," she wrote.

At 80 her crossing over was nicely timed. And she shall have her wish. The world that knew Ellen Terry will not mourn gloomily for her. It will rather smile happily at every memory of her.

British Films Turn to Talkies

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—It appears that the British film industry is suddenly turning its attention to Photophone, the British variation of the talking picture. Having failed to produce good silent pictures, the British producer is turning to the novelty of the speaking movie, with the idea of saving himself by presenting something new to his public. Barring the fact that he is still behind the American makers, with their talking films, it seems injudicious to try to master the more complicated technique of the talking movie before that of the silent cinema is understood.

British movie audiences will go to hear the new invention as a curiosity, but unless it is handled with greater skill than the ordinary moving picture now, its appeal will not last. America has been experimenting for many years with the talking picture. For the comparatively unskilled British producer to bank on retrieving his losses by entering suddenly into the manufacture of the speaking pictures seems like jumping from the frying pan into the proverbial fire.

A New Wrinkle.

The British Photophone invention, incidentally, claims the advantage of making it possible for the sound record to be made at a different time from the picture. Whether this is an advantage or not might be argued by American producers, who found their most difficult problem that of synchronization, which becomes much more complicated if the sound and picture actions are not performed simultaneously. Those who have heard the British talking films here and the early talking records in America are of the opinion that the British invention is still considerably behind the American machines.

Great things are again being claimed for the British moving picture, with a long list of films announced for release shortly, about which a cautious critic would say nothing before they are seen. It is not quantity production that British pictures need, but quality production.

Thus, while a London paper triumphantly announces that "America is definitely booking our pictures," it admits implicitly in the next column that London isn't. Almost every picture mentioned as showing here is of American origin.

All-American Bill.

One of the big houses is just finishing its presentation of "Napoleon"—made in France by the Metro-Goldwyn-Gaumont people. It gives way to "Love," with Greta Garbo and John Gilbert, and "The Politic Flapper," Marion Davies' vehicle, an all-American bill. The Capitol is showing "Honor Above All" (Leatrice Joy and Joseph Schildkraut)' the Avenue Pavilion, which specializes on the German UFA productions, is showing "Waxworks," one of the early Jannings pictures, "Wings" is finishing a phenomenal run at the Carlton, "The Legion of the Condemned" has had its engagement at the Plaza extended, as has "The Man Who Laughs" at the Rialto. The New Gallery is attracting big houses with Buster Keaton in "Steamboat Bill Jr." In fact, the only house of any size that seems to know that British movies exist is the Marble Arch Pavilion, which is showing a war picture entitled "Mumsie," which is almost enough to condemn it sight unseen.

Among British films awaiting trade showings are "Underground," by Anthony Asquith, who made the only other British film of interest with the single exception of "Dawn." Supposing that he is counted upon to repeat, and that the makers of "The Burgomaster," which plans to copy "Dawn" with another war atrocity story that will draw upon itself the free advertising of ardent protests from Germany, will be as successful as were the filmers of the Nurse Cavell film, the British total will then stand at four important films since the beginning of the industry. Which is hardly grande chose.

MISS MARGARET ANGLIN

She's headlining this week in the Palace, where she is to be seen in "Smarty's Party," a short comedy by George Kelly, who wrote "The Show-Off" and "Craig's Wife," two of the best native comedies. . . . Miss Anglin was here in the Spring in the revival of "Diplomacy," appearing in the first act of the old play as Lady Henry Fairfax. She had not previously been here since the Spring of 1924, when she acted "A Woman of No Importance" and a dramatization of "Bleak House" in the Blackstone.

Too Much to Eat.

Ten years ago I cowered with two of my buddies in a shell hole northeast of Beaumont, in the Somme district, France. The day before we had made an unsuccessful attack whereby we lost a good many men and took only the enemy's first line. In order to prevent a second attempt, the hostile artillery kept our territory in a disagreeable way under fire.

Heavy rains had filled up the shell holes with water. It was quite a problem for us to stay half way dry and to keep our bodies low enough so that we could not get hurt by rifles or machine gun fire. We dug seats into the outer edge of the hole right above the water elevation and covered up a part of the opening with some heavy oak planks, placing about two feet of dirt on the boards. Our shelter place was just high enough so that we could sit down with crossed legs in Turk fashion to keep our feet out of the water.

Around 4 o'clock in the afternoon I started to eat some lunch, a can of "bully" beef placed between my knees was the center of my activity. Evidently the enemy did not want me to enjoy my lunch, for as soon as I began to eat, fierce artillery fire came down upon our sector. It seemed as if our hole was the worst spot in the whole neighborhood.

One of my buddies suggested that we move to another hole, as he had the feeling that something was going to happen to us there. I tried to talk him out of this foolish idea, but without success. To settle the argument I told him that I would go along as soon as I got through eating. This compromise seemed to work for a minute, but then my two buddies left without me.

Scarcely had the two boys crawled out when a shell struck just behind our hole, lifting up the planks and dirt and throwing the entire mass upon me. The weight of this load pressed my head upon the can of "bully" beef resting between my knees. I was, so squeezed in that I couldn't move an inch. In spite of the fact that I had my mouth so close to the beef, I didn't feel a bit like eating.

It was lucky for me that my two buddies saw the shell explode and immediately came over to see what had happened. They dug me out before I suffocated and had no difficulty whatsoever in convincing me that not all hunches are nonsense. E. R.

"The Sea Beast."

That immortal picture entitled "The Sea Beast" should be duly acclaimed as one of the great successes. I enjoyed it thoroughly. It can hardly be surpassed as a tale of love and adventure in the glorious old harbor of New Bedford.

The characters were vividly impersonated by John Barrymore and Dolores Costello. There were breathless, heart gripping scenes, such as the disclosure of the treachery of the hero's jealous brother and his consequent death later by his hand.

It was a good production and far above the average. The plot was exciting and I'll admit John Barrymore makes a fine lover! H. R.

"The Student Prince."

The best movie? I cast my vote for "The Student Prince." It vibrates with the student life of old Heidelberg; it makes one a student one's self. This picture does not only give one a clear idea of the carefree, joyous life of a student with its moments of happiness in friendships and of reverence in young love, but also presents a true insight into royal life that it is not all pleasure and gayety.

The whole atmosphere of the movie, the characteristic portrayal of student days and the beauty and purity of the love element as developed make "The Student Prince" the best movie in my estimation. H. L.

"Sunrise."

Ever since the night I saw "Sunrise" each movement and action of the play remain to me like a vivid revelation. I laughed and wept with Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien. They appeared like two souls drowned in their home environment—two individuals adrift—unconscious until the last of the strange and bitter doings of the world.

The movie continues with slow, soothing motion. And every once in a while one gets small extracts of poetry from the mere expressions of the players. The performance does not last long, but in a short time the actors work hard to show us the life, the character, and the daily, monotonous life of the peasant.

Sometimes I am sorry I have seen the picture—yet, I would like to see it again. R. G.

Once Too Often.

I work for a large company and we have a large number of salesmen. Every morning when they report to the office some of them try to kid the girls along, and maybe want them to do some work for them.

I was in the habit of saying "Outside" when any of them tried to put any work on me, especially when I was busy, and that used to make quite a hit with the office force.

One day I saw one of our salesmen coming toward me, and I heard some one say, "Won't you get this work out for me, and check it over carefully so that the figures will be right?"

I just said, "Outside," and when I didn't hear some of the girls giggling as they usually did, I sensed there was something wrong, and looking up, I saw my boss standing at my desk wanting me to do the work for him.

Well, you can rest assured that that was my most embarrassing moment because I wished the earth would open up and swallow me. E. K.

Madcap Gloria of Sennett Days Lives On in Marquise

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Gloria Swanson is one of Hollywood's great who refuses to live in the shadow of her fame. She quite humanly refuses to be intimidated by her own importance and when an idea starts effervescing in her soul, as it did twice lately, she simply blows the cork with a hearty bang and let 'er go. The madcap of the Sennett days has not died in the marquise.

Edgar Everett Horton and Lois Wilson have been having quite a success with several legitimate stage shows at a Hollywood theater. Horton, who is quite the affable host, loves nothing better than to give little dinners or after-the-theater parties on the stage. One of these was a birthday party for Lois Wilson.

A New Rôle.

A supper party at the theater preceded the play and among the guests was Gloria Swanson. Some time during supper Gloria ambled off quite inconspicuously and, as it was getting time for the show, the host and hostess dashed to their dressing rooms to get into makeup. Meanwhile, Gloria located an empty dressing room where she made busy with whatever it is that Al Jolson uses to make him into a mammy singer. She did not miss one inch of exposable epidermis from head to foot. She then snooped together a costume notable for those vagaries dear to the colored heart. It was gathered from what could be found in the dressing room and boxes of the wardrobe of the theater. Suffice it to say, it was startling and effective.

When Horton was declaiming his evening stint before the footlights his gaze wandered to the wings. There was, perhaps, the oddest spectacle he had ever seen in his career as an actor. The marquise, safe in the sheltering wings of the scenery was making faces at him. The marquise was, also, he realized, with a start, all in black face. It was with an effort that Horton swallowed his mirth and went on with the scene.

The screen's greatest dramatic actress sat there like fate until the end of the act, grinning like a buddha and looking like a Senegalese, even to the soles of her feet.

Turned Down at the Studios.

Another recent prank of the glorious Gloria took place this week. Noon crowds at the Montmarte saw a strangely attired girl with long, blonde curls coming from beneath a smashed velvet hat and a funny, short, tight jacket and a speckled skirt. She sat at a corner table with two local scribes.

Constance Talmadge and Buster Collier, with friends, were seated at a nearby table and noticed the strange looking girl. They stared and stared. Finally, they wrote a note and sent it to the table of the strange girl. It said: "Dear Gloria, take off your funny hat and come out in the light for we know you. Why are you in disguise?"

There came back a demure note, cleverly worded, in which the miss in question said she was only a little country girl from Indiana trying to break into pictures. A nearby cynical scribe remarked: "Yeah, from Indiana! Looks more like Pago Pago to me."

It was Gloria. She had been the rounds of the casting offices trying to get a job in films. One prominent film official took her hand and told her kindly to go back to her little town; he could see she was neither beautiful nor talented and had nothing to offer the films.

Others refused to see her at all, and all the casting directors turned her down flat, muttering things about the writers who had brought her to them. Gloria made the weary rounds with hardly one encouraging word. No one would notice the shy little girl from Indiana.

She seemed to get an enormous kick out of it. Perhaps she was so convincing in her off-stage acting that she fooled the movie moguls into overlooking the famous figure and profile. No one recognized her but her friends at the Montmartre and then, of course, she was exposed to close scrutiny for an hour and a half.

Celebs Attend Opening.

A recent special showing of Colleen Moore's "Lilac Time" brought out all the Hollywood celebrities for the gaping soap box audience on the sidewalks to gaze at. Mary and Doug were there. Bebe Daniels, recently recovered from an illness, was with Eddie Sutherland. Bebe was in, a yellow chiffon velvet evening ensemble sewn with brilliants, pearls and embroidery.

George O'Brien escorted the dainty brunette, Olive Borden, who looked like an old fashioned valentine in white organdy with tiny puff sleeves and many insets of fragile lace with ribbons. She wore a corsage bouquet of lillies of the valley and white camelias and her black hair was hanging over her shoulders in ringlets.

Richard Barthelmess and his wife were a center of a knot of friends. Jacqueline Logan and Alma Rubens were both all in white with white ermine and fox wraps. Irene Rich, in orchid chiffon with many tiny plaitings and with a corsage of orchids, sat with her husband, David Blankenhorn, and her small daughter, Frances Rich.

Madge Bellamy, her hair done high in small ringlets over the head, was a fluff of white lace as she passed on the arm of Paul Bern. Lillian Tashman looked like a French doll in her smartly made snug fitting gown of Dresden taffeta, white with pointed bunches of red roses grouped over the surface of the silk and a long tie of self-material falling from a huge bow perked on her left shoulder.

Norma Shearer with her husband, Irving Thalberg, made all the girls gape at her new straight-from-Paris creation in metal cloth over red satin.

One Reel Pictures.

Universal Pictures is offering a series of one reel fantasies which are being made by the capable and imaginative Sam Jacobson. Sam figures that since no other folk want to make one reel subjects he has the field to himself and is making the most of the opportunity.

One of his little films, "Hand Capped," tells the story using only hands. Another does the same thing with feet. "Monkey Shines" is giving the monkeys' outlook on the funny people at the zoo who come and stare at them. Misadventures of a puppy, adventures of a rag doll, shadows, wax works and others are being made as a frank bid for the bit of child in all people which responds to whimsical things.

Sam hopes to make "Alice in Wonderland" some day.

News of Films and Players.

Mary Philbin and Paul Kohner, a producer at Universal City, where Mary makes her pictures, announced their engagement at a dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lubitsch, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Hersholt, and Mr. and Mrs. Sven Gade were guests. Mary wore a pear shaped diamond engagement ring for the first time at the dinner.

Ben Lyon made a definite statement in confirmation of the reports about Hollywood that he and Marilynn Miller, formerly Mrs. Jack Pickford, have definitely given up the idea of marrying. The hectic courtship that kept long distance wires from New York to Los Angeles burning up for several months has gone up in smoke. All Ben has left is receipted long distance phone bills of $150 and $200 a month.

Yes, they are still good friends, says Ben, but that's all.

Estelle Taylor got cheated out of a day's mountain goat hunting at Catalina island recently. It was all because of a tugboat. While she and Ralph Ince were working on "Singapore Mutiny," which they were making on a boat off Long Beach opposite Catalina, Ince told interesting tales of the hunting on the island.

Estelle was all thrilled and wondered if they could sneak off a day when scenes without them were being shot to take a few shots at the goats and perhaps bring down a longhorn to surprise Jack Dempsey, who is heap mighty hunter.

All hunting on the island is under the personal supervision of Mr. William Wrigley's junior man, Wrigley being owner of the island and the goats.

Alas, it seems that the company making the motion picture had been tactless enough to rent a tugboat from a concern at the harbor which ran in opposition to the tugboat line owned by Mr. Wrigley. So permission to pop at the goats was withheld by Mr. Wrigley's business manager, according to the version Mr. Ince was given, and Estelle has yet to get her longhorn.

I'd promote Lane

. . . . if it weren't for "B.O."
(Body Odor)

LANE'S big chance—the job he had worked for and hoped to get—had gone to a subordinate.

"It's no use," he complained to the boss's secretary. "You've got to have pull around here."

"You're wrong, Lane," was the angry reply. "I happen to know that you would have had that promotion—if it weren't for 'B.O.'"

"B.O."—body odor! A harsh remark—but it turned out to be a real kindness. Lane took the hint. Today he holds one of the best paid positions in the firm.

Body odor easy to end

No one would offend with "B.O." knowingly. But many people think they're safe—when they aren't. We have to perspire. Even on a cool day, our pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste. Our own sense of smell becomes deadened to this unpleasant odor—but others always notice it—instantly.

Yet it's easy to keep safe. Just wash and bathe regularly with Lifebuoy, the purifying toilet soap. Its bland, abundant antiseptic lather deodorizes pores—keeps you fresh.

So good for complexions!

This same gentle, antiseptic lather purifies face pores—keeps complexions radiantly fresh, healthy. Lifebuoy also guards against disease by removing germs. You'll learn to love Lifebuoy's pleasant clean scent, which tells you it purifies, and which vanishes as you rinse.

Try Lifebuoy Free

To try this delightful toilet soap without cost, just send us your name and address. By return mail, you will receive two full-size cakes of Lifebuoy free. Write today to Lever Bros. Co., Dept. S39, Cambridge, Mass.

Garden Club of Barrington Holds Flower Show

Mrs. J. R. Cardwell Will Be Hostess for Annual Event

By Mme. X.

THE women of the Barrington Garden club are holding a flower show on Tuesday and Wednesday of this coming week at the residence of Mrs. James R. Cardwell. Mrs. Cardwell's gardens are among the loveliest of this charming region. Besides being very well laid out and in richest bloom, they overlook one of the finest views of the neighborhood, one that leads the eye over the golf course and to the distant horizon of wooded hills.

Tables shaded by gay colored umbrellas will display the flowers and an al fresco luncheon will be served under the trees. Several of the gardens in that vicinity will be open to the public that day. Among them will be the estates of Mr. and Mrs. James E. MacMurray, Mr. and Mrs. H. Stillson Hart and Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hecht.

Other garden clubs are invited to exhibit. Among those already listed as so doing are the garden clubs of Glencoe and Kenilworth. One of the new features that will interest every one will be a class in window boxes. President of the Barrington Garden club is Mrs. Robert Work; vice president, Mrs. John Douglass; treasurer, Mrs. Lafayette Markle and secretary, Mrs. Frederic Foote. Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp is in charge of arrangements and publicity. It should be an interesting and beautiful show. The country around Barrington is one of the loveliest in Illinois. And the roads leading to it are excellent.

Month of Vacations.

To the chronicler of the times the aspect of August is hard to describe. It has not the decisive character of the other two summer months, June and July. It is neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring, which phrase in this instance means that it has not any definite characteristics. To the farmer it means, of course, harvest, fruition, the reward of the unceasing labor of months; but to the resident of a city it may mean a holiday outing, or the far from voluntary continuance of toil at a desk or factory or other place of work. For suburbanites it is usually the month for vacations, and many lovely gardens are left to their fate by owners who worked hard to create them, while they, the owners, hie them to seashore or mountain.

July and August were named for the two great Roman emperors, Julius Caesar and Caesar Augustus, and further to exalt these Roman rulers, thirty-one days were assigned to each of these two of the twelve divisions of the year. Balancing August, February, the second and shortest month, is so named because it is the month dedicated to expiation [Februum, Latin meaning expiation]. And for expiation only twenty-eight, or possibly twenty-nine days are necessary, while for a holiday outing at least thirty-one should be allotted.

It is safe to say that every camp, fishing and hunting lodge throughout the region within motor reach of Chicago will be filled to capacity this season. The highroads will swarm with happy folk, camp accoutrements packed inside and out of their cars and all heading for the haunts of the wild, shy creatures of lonely woods and secret streams. Man is a natural marauder, with little consideration for the rights of weaker forms of life. The oft quoted remark of a hypothetical Britisher: "It's a fine day; let's go out and kill something," could be assigned to all mankind, except the followers of Buddha, whose disciples have such a respect for the life principle that they are said to refrain from killing even the ubiquitous flea.

Interesting Event.

One of the interesting events of last week was the picnic organized by and for the members of the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club, who met, lunch box in hand, at Villa Turicum, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's fine estate, which lies at the very southeast corner of Lake Forest, overlooking the lake from the top of an eighty-five foot bluff. To the public this is an inaccessible place, as it is entirely surrounded by a high metal fencing topped by some very businesslike barbed wire. Only an airplane could reach its beautiful gardens and well laid out park without the permission of its owner. Her factotum, a stern and formidable Englishman named Dunsford, is firm in his denial of admittance to any unauthorized person. Not even King George himself would be permitted to enter without the say so of Villa Turicum's mistress.

I think it is several years since any one except those in charge of it has seen the inside of that stately Italian looking abode. It is a chef d'oeuvre of Charles Platt, the well known architect and landscape artist, and with its gardens is said by experts to be the finest example of this architectural style in the whole length and breadth of this great country of ours. The interior of the house is as complete in its presentation of this form of art as is the exterior. Its furnishings and decorations are faultless in their devotion to Italy's renaissance period of building, that stately age when great artists and artificers did the bidding of great soldiers and statesmen, and wrought for them in stone and wood and iron and gold and silver, painting great canvases and mural frescoes, and creating great statues, and massive, gilded damasked upholstered furniture.

To Hear Ruth Hanna McCormick.

In this setting four hundred Republican women met last Tuesday to become acquainted with each other and to listen to one of the most famous of their countrywomen of today, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick.

Mrs. McCormick is the essence by birth and training of the woman in politics, and the very best expression of this new force in our national life. She is the widow of the late Senator Medill McCormick, whose untimely death deprived the country of very valuable services. He, with the late

Race Enthusiasts Flock to Saratoga for Annual Events

By Nancy Randolph.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—[Special Correspondence.]—August and Saratoga may well be listed among famous affinities. Insofar as society is concerned, the meeting at the Spa is the only break in an otherwise orderly summer, where one remains constant to Newport, Southampton or Bar Harbor, until the cool touch of autumn makes itself felt on land and sea alike.

However, if it be the only break—then certainly Saratoga provides an important one. It isn't the racing alone—since Empire City, just outside of New York proper, has been host to the racing stables for weeks past, without attracting much attention.

The annual month at Saratoga, however, is distinguished by tradition. Much of the gay atmosphere of Palm Beach holds sway with many dinner parties, dances and teas being given at the club house, and also at the cottages. Every one rallies daily for the racing, but it is quite as much an excuse for the gayety as the reason thereof.

Several of the more famous cafés remain open for the month of racing alone and for the time being, Saratoga takes on an air of brilliance that is missing at other times.

Social Calendar Filled.

Monday saw the start of the meeting and matters social are now in full swing, with scores of notables arriving by motor from Newport and Southampton—always, naturally, via town, which is so deserted at present that its quietness provides a welcome rest for those who care to dine in the sparsely filled cafés.

Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, quite preëminent—together with Mrs. Raymond T. Baker—as a Saratoga hostess, has planned several dinners for the month. Mrs. Dicky was one of the luncheon hostesses this week at the clubhouse, and others who entertained during the opening days included Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Riddle, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Murphy II, Mr. and Mrs. George N. Ostrander, and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Reynard.

Others who arrived this week for the racing include Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. William A Prine, Mrs. Charles H. Thesiot and her children, Maj. and Mrs. Algernon Daingerfield, Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Raymond T. Baker, who came from her Adirondack camp. Then there are Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Goelet, Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George H Bull, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coe, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, and George B. Post Jr.

In Town for a Few Days.

As I have said, town provides a restful stopping off place before dashing for Saratoga. Many quiet little luncheon and dinner parties are being given in town. Constance and Genevieve Fox were hostesses at Sherry's on Tuesday, while others there included Mrs. Hunt Tilford Dickinson, Mrs. D. Rait Richardson, Mrs. Henry W. Lowe, and Mrs. Harold H. Will.

Mrs. James Taylor Terry entertained on Wednesday at the St. Regis and others in town, for the time being, include Marjorie Oelrichs, Mr. and Mrs. A. Coster Schermerhorn, Mrs. Stuart Duncan, who returned from abroad on the Majestic, Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Baldwin, and Mrs. Paul Fitz Simons.

Many Watch Tennis Matches.

Newport does not seem to mind the inroads Saratoga is making in the ranks of the cottagers. Most of the absentees will not be gone for more than a week or ten days, and in the meantime there are no end of activities to occupy the faithful ones. The tennis matches at the Casino, with many of the younger men competing, drew splendid galleries, filled with a keen spirit of partisanship. Among the players were Mrs. George Bolling Lee, Marian Wickes, Florence Loew, Louise Iselin, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Mrs. Willing Spencer, Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman, Mrs. Rawson L. Wood, Mrs. C. Oliver O'Donnell, Violet Tangeman, Edith Cram, Lita Morris, and Eimilie Merriman.

Every one is much pleased with the repertoire theater company at the Casino theater. This last week "The Swan" has been the offering, while beginning Tuesday, Grace George will be seen in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion."

Among the boxholders on the first night of "The Swan" were Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. Henry Walters, Mrs. T. Shaw Safe, Mrs. Roderick Terry and Mrs. James Stewart Cushman.

Newport Draws Line at 300.

Last night was quite a large time. The Julian R. Sloans were the lessees of the Clambake club, and Newport's 300 trooped to the Sloan dance and the breakfast-supper that followed.

Incidentally, it would seem that taken generally, 300 is about the number rating an invitation to affairs that are not too general. At almost all the larger parties thus far this summer, the guest lists have been restricted to that number, and, of course—the guests have been the same with only a few score visitors and house guests adding to the usual list.

Prior to the Sloan dance there were several dinners. Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver O'Donnell dined the Sloans and several others at Gravel Court. Mr. and Mrs. Grafton W. Minot entertained at Oakwood, the Jerome Napoleon Bonapartes gave a dinner at the Bandbox, and Bishop and Mrs. Herbert Shipman were hosts to the younger people in honor of Nadejda De Braganza, daughter of Princess Miguel de Braganza, and Newport's pre-eminent debutante this season.

Southampton Activities.

Southampton, having got rid of its annual fair, is now devoting itself to two other activities—musical and flower exhibitions.

On the 16th Bernardo Olshansky, the Russian baritone, who was greatly fêted at Palm Beach, will give a concert at the Parrish Memorial hall. All Southampton's matrons are on the committee of patronesses, including Mrs. Robert F. Adams, Mrs. Henry M. Alexander, Mrs. Thomas Barber, Mrs. L. Gordon Hamersley, Mrs. Albert Boardman, Mrs. Cass Canfield, Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin, Mrs. Orson D. Munn, Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mrs. Julian H. Shermerhorn, Mrs. Kenneth Van Riper, Mrs. Charles E. Van Vleck, and Mrs. James H. Snowden.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, was more responsible than any others of our legislators in preventing this country from entering the league of nations in 1919-'20. Mrs. McCormick, furthermore, is the daughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna of Ohio, in his day, twenty or thirty years ago, one of the most conspicuous figures in our public life. This gives her a more practical knowledge of and insight into politics than probably any other woman in the country. Most women are hampered by lack of experience in their use of political machinery for accomplishing their aims.

Mrs. McCormick's description of how she traveled up and down the state talking, talking to the women in every village and settlement, should be studied and pondered by all who want to carry a message to the people. It was a memorable occasion, that rally in those lovely gardens last Tuesday afternoon. The 400 women were gathered in a spacious, grassy plaisance surrounded by a handsome marble balustrade with huge urns set on pedestals at regular intervals around it with stone steps leading to them. It was an inclosure such as one might find at Versailles or other royal gardens.

Spirit Greater Than Money.

A few of the guests found seats on these steps, but the majority spread out their skirts or coats and sat on the soft, closely cut sod. As almost all wore the summer's gayest attire, it was a colorful assemblage. To this very attentive audience Mrs. McCormick explained what could be done by such a campaign as preceded her unprecedented triumph last April, when unpaid workers so aroused the voters of the state as to give her a majority of 126,000 over Yates, of 310,000 over Rathbone, while more than a million more votes were cast for her than for Gov. Small. It was a tremendous victory, demonstrating that spirit is more powerful than money, and what she had done in the preceding sixteen months of hard work was to arouse the interest and sympathy of the women of the state, who by their vote proved once and for all the power that lies in their hands, a power that is beyond the reach of money as long as women keep to their ideals and put these ahead of such motives as have actuated the great mass of voters as evidenced in the political campaigns of recent years in state and municipal elections and made us of Illinois a byword throughout the nation. It was a masterly presentation of the situation and Mrs. McCormick held her audience from the moment she stood up, a slender, brown clad figure, and sent her fine voice out across the open spaces of the garden, and don't forget that open air speaking is not easy.

She emphasized the fact that the victory of last April was but the first battle in one of the most important campaigns ever fought by the citizens of Illinois. Even harder work must be done between now and next November if final victory is to be achieved. This means more organization and more work of the fine voluntary kind that won out in April.

Sacrifices Holiday.

I think that few members of the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club who were present yesterday went away without profound conviction of the truth of Mrs. McCormick's statements. She herself is foregoing her annual holiday, which she usually spends at her western ranch and to which she and her three children delight to go, and by Aug. 13 will start on a second pilgrimage up and down the state calling the thoughtful voter to arms for the fall campaign.

Her volunteers are unbeatable, for they work for the love of the cause. They are not put on public pay rolls or in phantom public offices; what they do is a personal sacrifice and as such is the best kind of work that can be offered to a great democracy like ours. Success to the women of Illinois!

—Among the well known society leaders who attended this picnic and helped make it a success was Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, who provided and dispensed the delicious coffee served. She was aided by Mrs. Robert G. McGann and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase. Mrs. W. Scott Linn, Mrs. Edward J. Brundage, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, and Mrs. Andrew MacLeish were others present. Mrs. Harry Hart, president of the club, introduced Mrs. McCormick.

Villa Turicum never looked more lovely than it did that day. To the visiting gardener there was one feature that excited great envy. Nowhere in that whole domain was one dandelion visible. A guest there who had been there on a previous occasion related how the same dandelionless state excited so much comment that a prize was offered to the one who first found one of these golden pests. Finally, some one won it by discovering one miserable specimen crouching behind a remote carrot growing in the vegetable garden. How's that for a garden record!

Brilliant Audience at Ravinia.

The performance of Rabaud's gay and diverting opera, "Marouf," last Wednesday at Ravinia brought out the largest assemblage of Chicago's "pretty people" who have as yet attended any performance in those classic groves. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Granger, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Johnston and their daughter, Miss Angela Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Douglas, Mrs. Russell Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Miss Fannie Hume, now visiting Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. John Dorr Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Swift, Mrs. Henry J. Stimson Jr., now the guest of her mother, Mrs. McBirney, Mrs. Edward J. Brundage, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Miss Janet Fairbank, Charles Edward Brown, Robert Carr, Donald McClure, Charles Schweppe, Arthur Aldis, and Herman Waldeck.

From town came Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, Henry J. Patten, Miss Harriet Monroe, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. George B. Magoun, Eames MacVeagh, and Howard Gillette.

The performance itself was one of the most brilliant ever put on at Ravinia, both for action, scenery, and general spirit of highhearted delight as expressed by the company. The story is out of the Arabian Nights and was presented with such a wealth of color and so lively was the course of events, that the music itself took second place in the attention of the majority of the audience.

With each performance in which she takes part Yvonne Gall makes her way into one of the highest seats of Ravinia's distinguished company. She is great in both comedy and tragedy, and her voice seems to increase in exquisite quality as the summer season goes on.

Mario Chamlee in the name part of the piece made an indelible impression as a great artist, both in singing and in acting. It is one of his finest achievements here. The rest of the company threw themselves into their rôles with a joyous enthusiasm delightful to witness.

New Additions to Colony.

The latest additions to the Lake Forest summer colony are the Morris Leidy Johnstons, who, with Mr. Johnston's mother, and their daughter, Miss Angela Johnston, are occupying the John C. Mechem's house on Maplewood road. This was leased for the early part of the summer by Col. and Mrs. A. A. Sprague. The latter with their children, are now on their way to Europe. Miss Johnston returned ten days or so ago from Europe.

She had much more thrilling experiences there than fall to the lot of the average traveler. Last winter she joined the American archeological expedition in charge of the explorations being conducted on the site of ancient Corinth, in Greece, and was there during the protracted series of earthquakes this spring which shook what was left of this historic city pretty well to pieces. She was at the time, occupying the not quite completed villa which Horace Oakley, of Chicago, was building to house some of the members of this expedition. Several times the outfit living there was driven from the structure by alarming quakes, which, however, did not deter them from returning to it for shelter from the downpouring rain that accompanied the teremotos until finally a particularly ferocious quake shook them completely out. Miss Johnston had many thrilling and hairbreadth escapes, and, from being an ardent and able archeologist, became an expert nurse and caretaker for many of the unfortunate victims of the catastrophe.

They Demand Adventure.

It was a great adventure. Just how easy it will be for her to adapt herself to our much less perilous and diverting life it is not easy to prophesy. I hear that she is planning to return to this what might be called superactive archeology next winter. Perhaps, if we get up something equally exciting and full of diverse possibilities as those furnished by ancient and modern Greece we can keep our adventurous and lovely young Amazons at home.

The young of today demand—and usually get—Adventure, with a big A. Nor is this desire confined to the young men of the age. Young women claim an equal freedom and right to go forth and see life away from the domestic shelter. I think that Claud Bragdon was right, last spring, when he advanced to the writer a theory that the youths and maidens of today are provided with the souls of a riper, more sophisticated and able race of mortals than those that were the inheritance of their immediate progenitors. We are apprehensive; they know not fear; we are content with trodden paths; they seek the wilderness; we ask chiefly security and comfort; they demand dangers to overcome.

Nearing Its 60th Year.

Ferry Hall, Lake Forest's notable academy for girls, will attain its sixtieth year in 1929. It was founded in 1869 by the Rev. William Montague Ferry, who left a bequest of $15,000 for this purpose. The main hall, still standing, was complete and ready for occupancy in September of that year. The wings and chapel were added in 1888. In 1902 a further sum, amount not mentioned, was given by James H. Smith in memory of his brother, George Smith, a London banker, with which and supplementary gifts, Smith Hall was built.

Today the trustees of this fine institution are out for $600,000 with which to make the institution up to today's high standards for such a school.

It is a much needed educational factor, as it provides the best education for the girls of the middle west who can't afford the high priced colleges and schools further east. It furnishes high school and junior college departments and graduates its pupils into universities and colleges of the highest standard.

The money sought will be spent on the erection of two buildings, one at the south end, to provide dormitory space for the students, and one at the north end to provide some space for faculty and students, to give the school a large dining hall, infirmary, lounge, and suite for the principal. In both these buildings there will be space provided for maids, now housed in ramshackle frame buildings.

These new additions will enable the school to take in up to 190 scholars, instead of the 140 now accepted. Each year many have to be turned away from its doors for lack of space.

It has an imposing list of graduates, of over 3,500 in all, composed of women who made their way into various fine careers.

Miss Eloise R. Tremain is at the head of the school, a very able and delightful woman, who has an excellent personal influence over the girls. The place held by the school in the estimate of the prominent people living in Lake Forest is manifested by its list of trustees. Clayton Mark is president of the board, John T. Pirie is vice president, Alfred E. Hamill is treasurer, Miss Tremain is secretary, Charles H. Schweppe is assistant secretary, while other trustees are Albert B. Dick, Cyrus H. McCormick, George A. McKinlock, Donald R. McLennan, the Rev. George Roberts, and Louis F. Swift.

The school is situated on Lake Forest's eastern edge and overlooks the lake. It is an institution well worth the support of all who delight to serve the cause of the better education of women.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Y. Schnering of Evanston and their daughter, Barbara, left last Sunday for a two weeks' sojourn at Lake Louise.

Mrs. James E. Maddock of Evanston is spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Calvin Brown of Paris. They were guests at a tea given by the ambassador at the American consulate on July 5 and have since gone on a tour of Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey Urban Snyder and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Snyder, and Mrs. Snyder's mother, Mrs. Caroline Klein of the Sovereign, who have been spending the summer abroad, will sail homeward on Aug. 8 on the Ile de France.

Among Chicagoans now sojourning in Asheville, N. C., are Mrs. L. A. Bentley of 2400 Lakeview avenue, Miss Victoria Slavik of 40 East Schiller street, and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Schwill of 1120 Lake Shore drive.

Miss Bernice Roeller of Minneapolis has arrived to be the guest of Miss Dorothy Colton of 1316 Ritchie court for several days.

Chicagoans Go in for Water Sports

By Mildred Jaklon.

RACES of one kind and another seem to have the spotlight at most of the resorts Chicago's society favors just now, and races seem to make a splendid excuse for house parties, dinners, dances, and all sorts of frivolity. The annual women's race at the Bar Harbor Yacht club took place on Monday, having been postponed because of bad weather from the previous Saturday.

The event is one of the exciting ones of the season, and the yacht club is always the scene of many tea parties after the race. Miss Mildred McCormick, Mrs. Walter Ayer, and Miss Eleanor McCormick were the Chicagoans participating, and the entrants also included Miss Virginia Lane Kellogg, Miss Catherine Munson, Miss Kate Davis Pulitzer, Miss Elizabeth Kent, Miss Mary Parker Corning, Miss Anna Scott, and Mrs. Fulton J. Redman, all of them eastern women.

Debutante Fêted.

The Robert Hall McCormicks gave a dinner and dance to introduce their daughter, Miss Eleanor McCormick, on Friday night at the Swimming club, and Mrs. Morris Hawkes is to give a ball for her next Friday night. The coming week is Navy week, and all sorts of gay doings are on the make.

There were yacht races at the Eastern Yacht club on the Massachusetts north shore this last week, and the Marblehead Yacht clubs are having annual race week during the next seven days, with morning and afternoon programs and a score of classes of entries. It is reported that there are more boats in commission on the Atlantic New England coast this year than in any season since the war, and the yacht clubs, of course, are gay places. Charles Deere Wiman's yacht, the Alert IV, which carries the burgee of the Chicago Yacht club, was entered in some of the races.

News of Michigan Resorts.

Harbor Point, Charlevoix, and Roaring Brook are all at the height of their gayety just now. Harbor Point is having races this week-end, and the August program of races at Charlevoix opened on Friday. Miss Ellen Stuart, daughter of the John Stuarts, is commodore of the Pine Lake Yacht club. She has a new six meter yacht, Grebe, and she sailed her craft against John P. Wilson's boat, the Dolphin, of which Jack King, the Joseph Kings' son, is skipper. Jack King was chairman of the sailing events.

Long Island Waits Mrs. Guest's Return

GLEN HEAD, L. I.—[Special Correspondence.]—This eastern resort is looking forward to the arrival of Mrs. Frederick E. Guest, who is to return to her American home, Roslyn Manor, on Aug. 15. Mrs. Guest, born Phipps, and wife of the famous British M. P., as well as mother of Winston Churchill Guest, the polo player, sponsored the flight of Amelia Earhart to England.

Several of the colony have left for Saratoga, including Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Alexandre, Mr. and Mrs. S. Bruce Wing, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Summer Exhibits on View at Art Institute

Business Men Show They Can Be Artists, Too

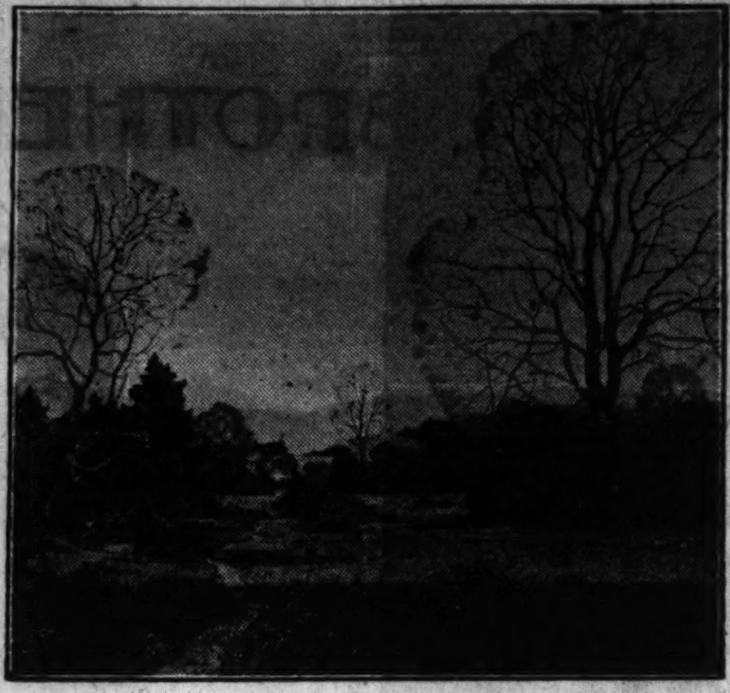
Through the pines run the hands of the wind,
They pick the branches like strings
Of a lute strung to lake and sky—
Of a lute that sings.

Over the forest the wind breathes a caress.
The song sings in the tops;
A shimmer of moonlight gleams
And a far star drops.

Night and the pines and the wind
And a loon that lifts its call
Like a haunting ghost through the magic—
Is God the name for it all?

E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.



"VALLEY FROM A HILLSIDE," by Carl Wuermer, to be found in the one man show of Mr. Wuermer's paintings now in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The group of one man shows will continue through August and September. They are distinctive and varied—as varied as the difference in temperament of the artists, such painters as Trebilcock and Buehr and Francis Chapin and J. Theodore Johnson—might lead one to expect.

THE summer exhibitions are enjoying the interest of hundreds of visitors to the Art institute. The paintings by John Spelman work their witchery a thousand times a day, driving our thoughts from the city streets to the silent and green wood paths. Karl Buehr and Carl Wuermer take us far afield, too, but their road leads to more civilized country where the freedom of the forest has submitted to the yoke of the fence and the plow.

There is another exhibition, which also opened the end of last month at the Art institute, that smells of city streets. Its atmosphere is strictly imaginative, for the pictures which compose it are many of them landscapes and glimpses of lake or stream or swamp. But the artists who create the pictures are city men in the most professional sense—they are business men. Business is their vocation and art their avocation, and to interchange the two for the delight of their souls is their chief preoccupation.

Eight years ago the Business Men's Art club came into being in Chicago. It started with a few men who were fond of painting and fond of pictures and who wanted a hobby that could grow. These men wanted a hobby that knew no money restriction. It does not take a rich man to make an artist. Nor need a man be rich in anything but sufficient leisure and interest to become an amateur painter.

A Live Proposition.

From a small beginning the club has grown to a membership of 160. It has headquarters downtown. It has members from practically every business. It holds an annual exhibit, which the press admires, and monthly exhibits which serve to keep the members posted on the excellencies or shortcomings of their work as contrasted with that of their fellows. The club has study nights and classes with visiting professional artists who criticize and suggest and teach. It is an extremely live proposition and one of great significance to the cultural life of Chicago.

So well have other cities and towns thought of our club that many of them have followed suit and now a number of Business Men's Art clubs are scattered throughout the country. To weld them into one body, an organization has been formed with the proud title: Associated Amateur Art clubs. Speaking strictly, it is this organization which is responsible for the current Art institute exhibit. The Associated Amateur Art clubs have headquarters at 81 West Van Buren street, Chicago.

Seven Cities Represented.

To the current exhibit seven cities have sent paintings. The age limit on the artists is that they cannot be younger than 30, most of them are 40 and 50 and over. Art is their hobby. One man proclaims it a better mistress than golf, for it never kills its devotees! One has yet to hear of a business man falling dead at his easel, while each summer brings its scores of business men striken on greens and on tees.

Joking aside, painting as a hobby is marvelous. It is an all year round pleasure and one that gets a man into the open and then, the country having given him a portfolio of suggestions, his winter evenings are filled with their development.

Whoever is interested in belonging to the Chicago club or in starting a similar club in another town is invited to write to the Associated Amateur Art clubs. It is part of the program of the association to help in the forming of clubs throughout the United States.

Word from Adolph Heinze.

Adolph Heinze, whose paintings of Glacier National park last winter were shown with great success at the Chicago galleries and at the Art institute, is back again in the west. An enthusiastic letter from him is too interesting not to quote: "Well, here I am again in the heart of the Rockies, in Glacier park, and I thought you might be interested to know of the fine commission I have received from the Great Northern railroad to paint twelve canvasses for the company. These are to be made from the entire park, which means many miles of travel for me.

"I just punished a good healthy breakfast, and well earned, too, as I was out painting at 4:30 o'clock this morning and have put in a half day's work already! It was glorious, one of those perfect mornings in the mountains when, even before the sun is visible, one sees the mountain tops painted with rose tints, and it was just this effect I wished to study and I got a splendid start on a fine canvas.

"Several days back I made a trip over one of the passes with a guide cook and an extra pack horse, besides our own horses. It was beyond description when finally we reached the top of the pass to look for miles, and right below us lay four lakes tucked into the mountains, their color so intense that no available pigment can match it.

"We descended to the valley beyond and there pitched our tent, made from the pine trees over which we stretched our canvas and our bed was made of pine boughs laid on the ground. During the night the camp was raided by bears and porcupines which just about ate us out of supplies and when we finally got the balance out of reach for the day's absence from camp, they came back and ate up all my soap for revenge."

Travelers Abroad.

Irving Manoir is having a different type of painting jaunt. A card from his is headed St. Trapez, France. It goes on to say that he has been painting in Nice and plans to work now in St. Trapez, a picturesque and quiet little French fishing village very near Italy. Mr. Manoir will bring back a host of entrancing pictures from abroad. He intends to stay over and work for at least two years.

Other travelers in foreign climes are Anita Willetts Burnham, who, with her family of five, including an artist daughter, Carol Lou, left Winnetka in June to circle the globe, starting off by doing China first with a flourish. The last time Mrs. Burnham went abroad she took her family with her and her trip gave her material for a number of amusing and interesting talks. Her youngest child then was about a year, but lack of age did not daunt her. She went everywhere and ate everything the others did. Now she is 5 and still a traveler.

At the Romany Club.

A most amusing and extremely clever exhibition is current at the Romany club, 36 East Bellevue place. The artist is Pedro Llanuza and his exhibit is made up of caricatures and serious studies. Some of his portraits of children are very delightful. The caricatures are always amusing. The exhibit opened in July and will continue to Sept. 1.

After a little interpretation of the signs, which make of his list of titles a page worthy of detective interference, he writes—urging every one to come to the exhibit—"During the exhibit I will endeavor to entertain you and your friends by caricaturing them with a dash of color for what they may be worth to you. We'll have a lot of fun, anyway, so bring along your victims. Should I get shot, I'm just crazy about HELIOTROPE."

Wallace L. De Wolf has recently finished a beautiful canvas, very much in the mood of some of the late Edward B. Butler's California landscapes, showing the loveliness of the desert in flower. A floor of pink blossoms runs back into a wall of rounding mountains and a sky where white clouds make lazy sailing. Mr. De Wolf calls his canvas "Desert Verbena—Coachella Valley, Cal." A reproduction of it in color keeps much of the serene charm of the original.

The bust of Edward H. Bennett the architect which was on view last summer in clay in his office, has now been received from France cast in bronze and is at the office of Bennett, Parsons & Frost of 80 East Jackson boulevard.

Marcel Loyau, the sculptor, was also the sculptor of the sea horses for the Buckingham memorial fountain. On that work he received the medal of honor at the Paris salon last year. His bust of Mr. Bennett was given a place of honor in this year's salon. It was among the works reproduced in the official catalogue of the salon.

Chicagoan Runs Busy Shop in Paris

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Among the Franco-American coincidences at Paris is the antiquarian's shop on the Rue Saint-Honoré owned by a Chicago woman, Miss Margaret Douville. It is recalled by the habitués that it was in this very house that first lived, on coming to Paris, Mme. d'Etioles, née Poisson, who was to be known in history as Mme. de Pompadour—that marquise so powerful that she could even force the Duc de Choiseul to stand aside.

With a sense for the past, Miss Douville, who calls the shop "La Pompadour," is careful to leave intact all reminders of the famous marquise, such as the handsome crystal chandeliers and the monarch's letter "L" intertwined in the iron balustrade of the stairway.

In the entrance to the courtyard is the same old bell La Pompadour used in 1741 when she came there as a simple country bride of Le Norman d'Etioles. It seems that the house, built in the seventeenth century, was acquired by M. Etioles' uncle shortly before he married Mlle. Poisson.

Several Americans have lived there since the war, among them the widow of Adolph B. Spreckels, the sugar king of California.

Doing a Thriving Business.

The present occupant specializes in antiques of the Pompadour period and has been most successful. Recently she let a London dressmaker show his creations in her shop, its picturesque salon furnishing the setting for a robe de style which has won so many prizes in England that Queen Mary has requested that it be placed in the national museum as a record of the period.

The dress in question is a work of art in pale pink satin with tulle inserts and a floral design, each petal of every flower outlined with fine embroidery.

News of Chicagoans.

Many Chicagoans are passing through Europe. There has been a drift south in response to the effort to make the Riviera a popular summer playground, but the hottest weather France has known since 1911 is rapidly driving the crowd north.

Soon after their return from America, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor chose Cap d'Antibes for a summer outing. But now they have changed their plans and have taken a villa at Letouquet on the channel coast and are installed there with their children.

Just before leaving Antibes the Chatfield-Taylors were the guests of honor at a big dinner given by Nicholas Raffalovitch, European representative of Marshall Field's and the Glore banking firm, and Mrs. Raffalovitch, who are on their way to Venice.

Other Chicagoans in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Fairbank.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chapin Watson are making a short motor trip in and out of Paris and will visit the château district Aug. 8-14. Then they are planning to spend the remainder of the season in the Royal hotel at Deauville.

Bags in hand, Norman Perrin ran briskly up the steps to his home. He fitted his key into the door—it creaked a little from a year's disuse as it turned in the lock. The hall was dimly lighted, but he found the door of the living room, opened it softly, and—saw a strange young man about to take Norman's wife in his arms! "Mollie!" he gasped, struggling with rage and bewilderment, "Mollie!"

After a Year's Absence Norman Came Home to Find—Treason!

Next Sunday you will want to meet . . . .

Mollie Stratford
who gave up a brilliant stage career to marry a promising young writer.

Norman Perrin
Mollie's husband, becomes lackadaisical and unambitious until absolute need forces him to write.

Marion Graeme
a neighbor of the Perrins, is in love with Norman and schemes to make trouble between the young couple.

Anthony Grange
Marion's fascinating young cousin, attempts to carry on a flirtation with Mollie.

Restless, artistic, interesting, young people—all of them! Their independence causes tense and unusual situations, which culminate in a thrilling climax.

ALLEN RAYMOND

author of the brilliant serial story, "One of the Follies," was born and reared in New England. Although the son of an eminent Massachusetts judge, young Raymond preferred journalism to the bar. His newspaper experiences carried him all through New England and as far west as Indiana. After serving in the World War he remained in Paris and began writing fiction.

At present Mr. Raymond is living in London . . . correspondent for a New York newspaper . . . father of three boys . . . finishing his latest novel.

To transplant a beautiful Broadway dancer from the gay White Way to an intolerant New England town was foolhardy. For an impressionable young writer to leave his lovely wife and child for a year's expedition to Mongolia was insanity. . . .

THAT'S the situation in the stirring new serial, "One of the Follies," which begins in the Woman's Section of the Chicago Tribune next Sunday. . . . "One of the Follies," by Allen Raymond, a young American author living in London, is an engrossing story of the conflict between two artistic people. Although devoted to each other, neither of the Perrins was content with the life the other wanted to lead.

From the brilliance of Broadway to the wilds of Mongolia . . . from the ancestral home in a quaint New England town to a shabby Bronx flat . . . the story moves swiftly, intriguingly.

Begin this absorbing serial of modern life—in the Tribune next Sunday and read it every week!

ONE OF THE FOLLIES

By Allen Raymond

The first instalment appears in the Woman's Section of next Sunday's Tribune!

Mary Landon Baker Is London Hostess

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.] — Miss Mary Landon Baker gave a large dinner party at No. 1 Chesterfield street, before the big ball given by Lady Massereene and Ferrard for the latter's pretty debutante daughter, Miss Diana Skeffington, at 40 Grosvenor square. Miss Baker, who wore a charming figured chiffon frock, had among her guests the Swiss minister, Sir Harry and Lady Mainwaring, Lady Patricia Ward and her cousin, Miss Peggy Ward, Lady Diana Bridgeman, Lord Donegall, Lord Cochrane, and Sir Anthony Weldon.

Among the guests at the ball were Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, Princess Andrew of Greece, Princess Cecile, the Duke of Argyll, and many other distinguished persons. Miss Baker seems content to see the London season through to the end, in contrast with many other hostesses who, complaining of the untoward heat, are decamping early for Scotland or the continent.

"The Garden City."

But the warm weather has certainly brought out the full glory of London's gardens. The flower beds in the parks are brilliant though it must be confessed that the lawns are fast losing their emerald green. They need, even if visotors do not, an occasional shower. It is rather a pity that London, so old, at present so tired and outwardly so dingy, has never thought of calling itself the "Garden City," for it has every justification for so doing. It is preëminently the city of small private gardens, skilfully, tastefully and lovingly tended. A local newspaper which is offering prizes for the best private gardens has received 13,000 entries! Surely for a metropolis chiefly noted for its rain, fog and smoke this is a surprising figure.

Back to the Gay Nineties.

Quite the most amusing party of the season was that of Miss Mary Hoyt Wiborg, the playwright, of New York City, who gave a "dance of the nineties" at the Court House, Marylebone lane. She asked the guests to come in hansom cabs and London was fairly combed for specimens of that departed vehicle. Few were able to comply with that part of their hostess' stipulations, but they more than made up for it by the faithfulness of their costumes.

Sir John and Lady Lavery, who came in bathing costumes of the period, were greeted with shouts of laughter. Sir John wore a thick black bathing suit, the very embodiment of Victorian decorum, while Lady Lavery was the most formidable spectacle in long satin trowsers and tunic, a blonde wig covered with a bathing cap, the whole crowned by a straw hat with streamers of ribbon tied under the chin.

Lady Alexandra Metcalfe, in a draped gown of blue brocade, was instantly recognized as "Mrs. Ponsonby de Tompkins," the heroine of many of Du Maurier's drawings. Actually, I believe, the gown had once been worn by her mother, the late Lady Curzon of Kedleston! Lady Ravensdale was disguised as a costermonger of the period; she wore black and white, with red and white striped stockings which, rather affectedly, matched the ribbon around her hard straw hat.

The music and the dances reflected the period, of course. People shuddered visibly, and then roared with laughter, as the strains of "Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer true," and "After the ball was over," flooded the room. Schottisches and barn dances, polkas, and the venerable Washington Post figured in the programe. Miss Wiborg, who had tried out the idea successfully in New York, was delighted with the London version.

House Parties on a Yacht.

The Selfridges continue to make their yacht, "Conqueror," their social headquarters for the week-ends. Their parties foregather at Southampton where they board the yacht and are immediately off to Ostend or Dieppe.

Young Mr. Selfridge has been trying out a new speed boat at Dieppe which is said to be one of the dizziest, and quite the wettest, of its kind on the French coast. For the Goodwood races, the yacht will make Plymouth its headquarters and the whole party will adjourn to the races to follow, with clannish ardor, the fortunes of the Princess Wiasemsky's stable.

Chicagoan Entertained.

The American Women's club has been entertaining as a courtesy guest, Mrs. W. T. Buckner of Chicago. Mrs. Buckner is Cook county president of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs and is making the club of American women in London her special interest while she is here. She was lunching the other day with Mrs. Herbert C. French, chairman of the executive of the London club and several of the members of the London committee. NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Jews and Christians Will Meet at Racine

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

CHRISTIANS and Jews will meet together this week, beginning on Wednesday, for a Jewish-Christian fellowship week, on the campus of Racine college, Racine, Wis. This will be the second part of the program prepared by the Midwest Council for Social Discussion now in progress with the general subject, "The Struggle for Power." In previous years these summer conferences were held at Olivet and Hillsdale, Mich.

This conference will be conducted in a new and unique way, which has proven unusually effective. Instead of the leaders giving formal prepared addresses, to be discussed by the audiences—the usual conference method—those in the audiences themselves set forth the problems and raise the questions that seem to them most vital. Then the authorities on the various subjects are called upon to set forth what they consider the solution of these problems.

In addition to the leaders already announced for the first week of the Midwest Council, the following will be on the program from Aug. 8 to 14: Karl Borders, assistant director, Chicago Commons; George L. Collins, secretary, Fellowship of Reconciliation; Prof. C. Walker Hayes, Rockford college; Prof. Abraham Cronbach, Hebrew Union college, Cincinnati, O.; Boris D. Bogen, national executive secretary, International Order B'nai B'rith, Cincinnati, O.; Rabbi G. George Fox, South Shore temple, Chicago; Samuel Levin, chairman, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Chicago; Fred A. Moore, executive director, Chicago Forum council.

John W. Herring, secretary of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, initiated the Midwest Council of Social Discussion. Mr. Herring is now the representative of the Council on the National Community Foundation. The Rev. Joel B. Hayden, Cleveland, is president; Fred Atkins Moore, secretary, and Glenford W. Lawrence, field secretary of the Midwest organization, with headquarters in the City Club building, 315 Plymouth court, Chicago.

The annual state convention and training school under the auspices of the State Board of Religious Education of the Evangelical church was held last week at Oakdale Camp near Freeport, Ill., and will close this evening. There were represented 134 churches, among which were the 17 Evangelical churches of Chicago. The Rev. J. Alfred Nansen, S. T. D., pastor of Grace Evangelical church of Logan square, is the president of the state board and had charge of the assembly.

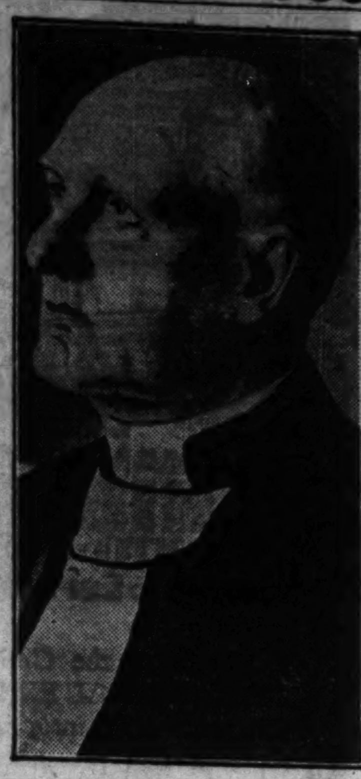
The much longed for and expected swimming pool at the old Des Plaines camp ground has become a reality and was dedicated yesterday with due ceremony by Dr. J. Hastie Odgers, superintendent of the Chicago northern district of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Raymond G. Kimbell, president board of trustees of the camp ground. The Rev. H. Clifford Northcott, Oak Park, presided and addresses were made by Charles S. Stewart, mayor of the village of Des Plaines, and also the Rev. Charles Draper, Lake Forest, Ill.

A jubilation dinner was served at the new dining hall and hospitality night was observed by opening the pool to everybody. Charges for the use of the pool for the rest of the season will be made. Ferdinand A. Pribbenow, supervisor, will be in charge and Francis M. Hughes is senior life guard with Leo C. Montgomery as assistant supervisor.

A solemn novena in honor of St. Clare, foundress of the Order of Poor Clares and special patron of the Guild of Perpetual Adoration, will be conducted at the Poor Clare chapel, [illegible] street and Laflin avenue, this week, closing next Sunday, the feast day. Services will be held twice daily at 4 and 7:30 p. m. and on the feast day there will be solemn high mass, sermon, blessing of the Bread of St. Clare and veneration of the relic.

Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, for more than 25 years at the head of the Sunday school work of the Disciples of Christ, has been elected secretary for North America of the World Sunday School association. Dr. Hopkins has been a conspicuous figure in interdenominational Sunday school work for many years. His headquarters have been in St. Louis.

St. Cornelius church, Long and Foster avenues, will hold its first parish outing on Saturday at the [illegible] of Niles picnic grove at the end of the Milwaukee avenue street car line. This will be made an occasion for a reception in honor of the Rev. Luke H. Lyons, the pastor of the church, who has built up in a short time a new congregation and erected a new church building. There will be the additional purpose of raising funds for the new church recently completed at the gathering outdoors.



THE RT. REV. JOHN GARDNER MURRAY, BISHOP OF MARYLAND.

The Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, bishop of Maryland, is the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church and the president of its national council and will preside at the triennial general convention which will meet in Washington, D. C., Oct. 10. He was elected at the convention in New Orleans, La., in 1925 for a term of six years and will serve until the convention of 1931.

Bishop Murray was educated at Wyoming seminary, Kingston, Pa., and at Drew Theological seminary, Madison, N. J., both schools under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church. After his graduation he devoted eleven years to a business career. He became a deacon in 1893 and a priest in 1894 in the Protestant Episcopal church.

He engaged in missionary work in southern Alabama and became rector of the Church of the Advent in Birmingham, Ala., before coming to the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, Md. In 1903 and also in 1904 he was elected bishop of Mississippi and Kentucky, but declined in each case. In 1909 he was consecrated bishop coadjutor of Maryland and became bishop of Maryland in 1911.

The Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, D. D., bishop of Chicago, has the honor of preaching the opening sermon at the Washington convention.

The Young Peoples' commission of the Chicago Church federation has just issued the fourth annual edition of the official directory of the Protestant churches of Metropolitan Chicago. The book is bound in blue cloth and we should like thereby to designate it as "The Blue Book of Chicago Protestantism." This edition is a distinct improvement in fullness, accuracy, and typography over previous editions. Even its advertisements are worth reading and its pictures of the new churches, erected by various denominations during the last year, are illuminating and impressive.

The book tabulates the churches of all Protestant denominations, irrespective of their connection with the Chicago Church federation. Under each church is given the name of the pastor and, except in a few cases, a long list of officers with telephone numbers as well as their addresses. This makes an exceedingly convenient book for all church workers. An alphabetical index lists every church. The officers of the Young Peoples' commission who have had charge of the publication of the book are: Minnie L. Peterson, president; Judson S. Tyley, and Thomas B. Kelley, directory committee. Dr. John R. Nichols, president of the Chicago Church federation, has written the foreword; the Rev. William F. McDermott of the Chicago Daily News, has written an article on "The Seven Day and Week Church," and Walter R. Mee, executive secretary of the Chicago Church federation, has given a comparative description of the membership, churches and ministers that are represented in the book. Mr. Mee says that the Catholic and Protestant churches each represent constituencies of 1,250,000 in number. There are other attractive features which space prohibits our mentioning.

Dr. Frederick C. Grant, dean of the Western Theological seminary, has been appointed chairman of the Department of Religious Education of the Episcopal church in Chicago by Bishop C. P. Anderson, a position he held while rector of Trinity church, before entering the seminary work. He succeeds Dr. Charles L. Street, headmaster of St. Alban's school, Sycamore.

The Rev. A. E. Johnstone, rector of Trinity church, Belvidere, Ill., has been appointed to the city missions staff of the Episcopal church, which has its center at the Church of the Epiphany, 201 South Ashland boulevard under the direction of the Rev. John F. Plummer.

St. James' Episcopal church, Cass and Huron streets, early in June was voted the cathedral of the local diocese by the parish and the proposal was accepted by Bishop Charles P. Anderson and the cathedral chapter. The Church club recently indorsed the action and pledged assistance in carrying out the plan. The diocesan young peoples' association have for a long time kept the cathedral idea before the church diocese and have raised money toward the realization of the project.

The cathedral chapter has purchased an additional piece of property on Rush street at 674-676, a part of the plan to obtain the complete half block between Cass and Rush streets. Steps are now being taken by St. James' parish toward renovating the interior of the church to beautify it for cathedral purposes. New lighting fixtures and a new heating plant are being installed.

It is expected that Bishop Anderson early in the fall will hold a service instituting the cathedral and will also announce his selection of the dean of the cathedral.

St. James' is the oldest Episcopal parish in Chicago and, according to the resolutions, the parish property does not become cathedral property until a fund of at least $2,000,000 over and above existing funds and properties has been raised, which will constitute a nucleus for a cathedral building fund of several million dollars.

Next Sunday at Winona Lake, Ind., a movie tone picture which includes sound will be taken by the Fox Film company of the audience of more than 10,000 in the William A. Sunday tabernacle. There will be a choir of 600 voices, the university choir of De Pauw, and the Winona concert band. The Rev. Paul Rader of Chicago will speak in the morning and Billy Sunday in the afternoon. Homer Rodeheaver will have direction of the program.

It is expected that the film recording both sound and pictures will later be shown throughout the country. This morning Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will preach at 10:30.

Christ Episcopal church, Winnetka, Ill., is making plans for the erection of a new parish house and chapel to cost more than $200,000. The church building and the parish house are located some distance apart and this necessitates a chapel for smaller occasions.

The Rev. John Walsh, S. J., it is announced, has been transferred to the department of philosophy, Loyola university, from St. Xavier's, Cincinnati, O., where he has been professor of philisophy for the last four years. Father Walsh is well known in Chicago where he began his education at St. Patrick's High school in South Chicago and afterwards at St. Ignatius college. He is a graduate of St. Louis university and attended St. Mary's college, St. Mary's, Kas.; St. Stanislaus' seminary, Florissant, Mo., and St. Stanislaus' seminary, Cleveland, O.

He taught as St. Mary's college, St. Mary's, Kas., and at the University of Detroit before joining the St. Xavier faculty. He has two brothers in the professional circles of Chicago.

F. J. Lewis, K. S. G., president of the F. J. Lewis Manufacturing company, of Chicago, has shown his long continued interest in Catholic education by pledging a gift of $50,000 to the building fund of the Villa de Chantal, a Catholic school for girls in Rock Island, Ill. The gift is to be made on condition that the Visitation Sisters raise an additional fund of $100,000 in the drive now in progress. Mr. Lewis was a former resident of Davenport when his daughters were students of the Villa. This gift is to be in memory of his wife, Alberta Marie, and a daughter, Charlotte.

Some years ago Mr. Lewis made his first gift of a $10,000 scholarship fund in honor of his daughter, Josephine, to the same school. Mr. Lewis is a Knight of St. Gregory, an honor conferred by the Pope for his work and liberality.

The Rev. George McGinnis of La Grange, Ill., superintendent of the American Saxon federation and District field secretary of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, will give a series of Sunday morning addresses at the First Baptist church, Aurora, Ill., at 11 o'clock, during the month of August.

Today his subject will be, "Will the British Empire Go Down?" next Sunday, "America in Prophecy"; Aug. 19, "The Coming Conflict of the Ages"; Aug. 26, "Militarism from the Christian Standpoint."

The library of the late Bishop Samuel Fallows, "everybody's bishop," of the Reformed Episcopal church, has been presented to the library of Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, by his sons and daughters, Edward Huntington, Charles Samuel, Mrs. Helen May Williams, and Miss Alice Katherine Fallows. The library contained 5,893 volumes, 6,110 pamphlets, and 2,550 magazines and is especially rich in material of special interest to the Reformed Episcopal church.

Prof. S. G. Ayres, associate librarian, reported for the year ending June 1 that the Garrett library now contains 164,410 volumes, of which number 19,190 volumes, 12,613 pamphlets, and 17,197 magazines were added during the last year. The Methodist collection, one of the best in existence, numbers a total of 11,392 volumes.

Why Procrastinate with Deafness?

THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY to find hearing, and the health and happiness that go with it. And that's to look for it. Each day that you put off the search is only another lost day of nervous irritation and social embarrassment.

So why not look for hearing today? And why not start the quest in the private consultation rooms of the

New Acousticon

We honestly believe that you will find it there, as so many others have, through the medium of the new and finer Acousticon—a scientific hearing aid with a tiny receiver, or earpiece, no larger than a silver dime.

TEN-DAY FREE TRIAL

Take the instrument home with you if you wish. Test it for ten days. Be sure that it's the sort of hearing aid you've always hoped to find. Learn how clearly, how distinctly it transmits sounds to subnormal ears. Probably you'll keep it, but if you don't you may return it without charge or obligation.

If you find a call impossible, merely send your name and address to Dept. 73, for a free home test.

BLACK HILLS

of SOUTH DAKOTA

Milwaukee-Minneapolis-St. Paul-Omaha

Only $36.65 from Chicago to Rapid City and return

THIS is unquestionably the greatest bargain in this summer's vacation opportunities. The fare quoted permits stopovers in the beautiful, interesting cities of Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Omaha in the order named or the route may be reversed.

It would be difficult to find a more charming and enchanting vacationland than the Black Hills of South Dakota. Awe-inspiring mountain and canyon scenery, beautiful forests of pine, spruce and quaking aspen. Rippling streams everywhere, alive with trout.

Splendid roads over which commodious, easy riding motor busses reach all of the high scenic spots in real comfort.

See Sylvan Lake, Mt. Coolidge, Mt. Roosevelt, Harney Peak, Spearfish Canyon, State Game Lodge (Summer White House of 1927), historic cities of Deadwood, Lead, Belle Fourche, Rapid City, Hot Springs. After seeing the Black Hills you will say, as President Coolidge did, "I have never seen anything which excels it."

If your vacation period is a week or a month this makes an ideal trip.

Splendid trains to take you . . . fine accommodations in the Hills . . . everything to make for a restful ever-to-be-remembered sojourn.

on 1928's newest marvel of tropic-sea comforts

Duchess OF ATHOLL

A travel thrill of 104 days. An exploration into off-the-beaten-path countries ... made simple, economical and comfortable by the world's greatest travel system.

West Indies ... South America ... South Africa ... East Africa. The jungles ... the veldt ... Victoria Falls ... the ancient slave marts ... Egypt ... Paris ... London.

All the way on one ticket, one service, one management, one ship ... the 20,000 gross ton giantess with all the newest devices for tropic-sea comfort ... Duchess of Atholl, pride of the Clyde.

ROUND the WORLD WITH THE "RESOLUTE"

SHORE excursions teeming with sequel adventures for "Trader Horn". Sights that recall "Chang," "Grass" and "Moana" and thoroughly out-romance fantastic stories in contemporary magazines. The same marvels that made Sir Francis Drake and his swashbuckling companions stalk the high seas "for more"—but none of the inconveniences. A world, hitherto encountered in fiction only, reveals its curiosities.—Dancing girls at Bangkok, swathed in brocaded replicas of the bas-reliefs of famous temples. Paradox of feast and famine—the Sphinx's riddle of a lost civilization where today jewels and tatters go hand in hand.

Circling the globe with the RESOLUTE, "Queen of Cruising Steamships," as vantage point—truly a luxurious adventure.—A management worldly-wise, intuitively sensing the desires of its guests.—A cuisine which brooks no rival.

South Side Widow-Waitress Lands $50 Politeness Prize

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

To most people B. A. means Bachelor of Arts; A. B., little more than the beginning of the alphabet. In nautical language, however, A. B. means able seaman—a man who can tie a bowline, chip paint, splice wire cable, or steer a ship. B. A. to A. B.—rather a radical transformation this, to be effected as casually as many college men do effect it every summer.

But effect it many a B. A. does, and that is why, if you are one of the hundreds of thousands of Americans who make an annual pilgrimage to Europe, you may find your stewards, your brass polishers, or the bus boys who make themselves generally useful aboard your ship have been recruited from the ranks of new graduates of the most distinguished colleges in the land.

With commencement week comes the urge to launch out into the world of adventure and romance. Harassed by professors, surfeited with things academic, the poor B. A. feels that he would "sell his tired soul for the rocking beam sea roll of a black Bilboa tramp." But, unfortunately, since many first mates won't have them aboard at any price, the market for tired undergraduate souls is not always good.

Can't Be Fired at Sea.

Mates know that although most of the boys who ship before the mast are keen to learn and willing to work, they are woefully green, and that a green man can wreck the works even more thoroughly afloat than ashore. Then, too, you can fire a man ashore, but what can you do at sea? Give him a life preserver and say, "Here, when we cross the equator you're through?" Hardly. Having signed a man on in New York, let us say, you must bring him back to New York. If you fire him in a foreign port the government will speak to you about it.

But your undergrad stands in small awe of first mates. He finds that a fraternity brother has a third cousin. Regarded as an isolated fact, this is neither significant nor remarkable. Fraternity brothers not infrequently have third cousins. This particular third cousin, however, can obtain an introduction to a man—not merely an ordinary man, but one who can write a letter to a friend. This fact is also not remarkable. Many men have friends to whom they can write letters.

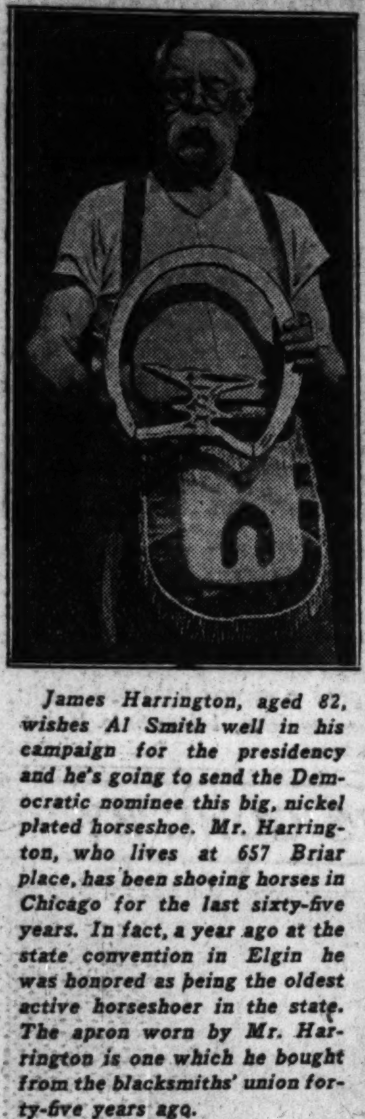
GOOD LUCK



James Harrington, aged 82, wishes Al Smith well in his campaign for the presidency and he's going to send the Democratic nominee this big, nickel plated horseshoe. Mr. Harrington, who lives at 657 Briar place, has been shoeing horses in Chicago for the last sixty-five years. In fact, a year ago at the state convention in Elgin he was honored as being the oldest active horseshoer in the state. The apron worn by Mr. Harrington is one which he bought from the blacksmiths' union forty-five years ago.

Commissioner of Public Works Richard W. The street, Robbins terrace, is privately owned, and therefore Mr. Wolfe could not be held responsible for its condition. Ha! Ha!

To fellow villagers who find it a wee bit sultry to adventure their souls among the masterpieces of the Art institute these August days, ye ed prescribes a Skokie sunset. Drive west in Wilmette in Lake street, past Ridge road of storied Indian legend, and on to Hibbard road. Thence north to Willow road, in Winnetka, or as far as Elm street, if one so wishes. But, once in Hibbard road, drive slowly. Better yet, park your car alongside some meadow, sweet now with the breath of clover, and let your jaded city eyes focus upon the horizon. The western sky is nature's canvas, and as the great golden orb sinks slowly behind the distant treetops she splashes from her cosmic paint pot such colors as no mortal hand can ever hope to compass. A Skokie sunset is the only earthly thing your humble correspondent has ever encountered that is comparable in beauty to the Twenty-third Psalm.

JUDGE DANIEL P. TRUDE.

DAN was convalescing from his first attack of Blackstone's Commentaries when the "I Knew Him When" club camera surprised him in the foregoing still life study. Even so, note the judicial poise and dignity.

As the keen minded reader may have suspected, Dan was not yet on the bench. He had not left the high chair, wherein, family tradition hath it, his first childish utterance was lisped, viz: "Oyez, oyez, the honorable meal of the Trude family is now in session."

Well, Dan early gave promise of his procilivities for public office. He started in running, acquiring his C on the track team of the University of Chicago, where he won both the low hurdles and the law hurdles. He's been on our municipal bench so long now we regard him as a perennial.

Son of Alfred Samuel Trude, nephew of former Judge George A. Trude, second cousin of Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude. Really, as we were saying, is it any wonder our legal guild invariably refers to Dan's family as tried and Trude?

Can You Name Twin Words in This New Quiz?

Here's Chance to Test Skill at Homonyms.

Did you ever hear of homonym? Yes, it is a distant cousin of a synonym. Homonyms are words which have the same sound, but are spelled differently and have different meanings—"ball" and "bawl," for example.

In the quiz that follows, pairs of homonyms are suggested by definitions or synonyms such as are used in cross word puzzles.

Credit yourself with 2 points for each set guessed correctly. Then a score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and 100 means that you are quite an etymologist!

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table

Neighborhood Nuisance Found to Be Reporter.

By Helen Dare

THE kazoo turned the trick for her—the kazoo that I left on the edge of the table where one usually leaves a tip. She followed me half way down the block to return it.

It had been a lean day for politeness until then. Not that any one had been really rude. That takes too much of an effort. They had been polite enough—but only enough. Here I had found politeness plus.

I made my way to a table in the tea room at 1450 Hyde Park boulevard. A cheery good afternoon directed my glance to the waitress. She was slim and pretty, her face was young and pleasant looking, although her hair was turning gray.

As I pondered long over the menu she stood patiently beside me, with no trace of irritation even in a movement. I finally gave my order and then, when she was almost to the kitchen, called her back and changed it.

Recovering the Kazoo.

"Now, you want the tea ball left out," she said, repeating my instructions, "and you don't want any extra dressing on the salad. Is that right?"

I nodded and she went out, only to be called back by a rough masculine voice in the hallway. It came from a soiled looking individual, with shirt sleeves rolled up and hat awry—obviously not a customer.

"Is Mrs. Griffiths here?" he grunted.

"Why, no," she said. "I'm sorry. Can I do something for you?"

"Naw, I gotta see Mrs. Griffiths."

"Well, I'll find out when she'll be back," and she disappeared again, returning to tell him he might find the lady in at 5 o'clock.

She brought in my order, correct in all its specifications, and exchanged pleasantries with me over the weather. Then she retired to the back of the room to type menus for the evening

OUR esteemed fellow townsman and Standard Oil factotum, Frank Surdukowski, had the misfortune to be kicked in the eye by a cow last month, and the organ is still black and blue as we go to press. Mr. Surdukowski ever since has been subjected to base calumnies and contumelies. Aspersions of an alibi have even been broadcast, and frequently, on social occasions, when Frank has arisen to explicate further as to the circumstances, he has been greeted with a loud raspberry. Tsk! Tsk! What is this country coming to? Is there to be no liberty of person whatsoever? A man is certainly entitled to an honest shiner honestly arrived at, and we congratulate Frank that it was a cow and not a mule.

Heartening news for the stay-at homes continues to trickle in from the vacation front. A cryptic postcard from President Harry Witter of the Northcenter Lions club, now in Detroit, informs his friends: "Having a fine time. Yes, I got some in Canada. Very nice, too." . . . From Edinburgh, Scotland, comes the sustaining thought from Dr. J. W. Rust: "In Scotland, drinking Scotch with the Scotch." Who bought the last round, he does not say.

In addition, there will be 4,000 free balloons.

GAGE PARK is agog, as we say, over the design of H. D. Wells of 7115 South Hoyne avenue to perfect a man-carrying glider. Mr. Wells, formerly associated with Eddie Stinson, believes he can duplicate the exploits of the Germans. Co-operating with him are B. C. Friedman, instructor of handicraft in the south parks; Clarence Krejci of 5253 South Washtenaw avenue; Ernest Marcuiller of 729 North Homan avenue, and John Rappold of 918 West 35th place, all active in model airplane building.

As regards the folks and flivs in history, John J. Wright of 2124 West 103d street claims a record. He avouches he has the oldest flivver in Chicago, if not in the U. S. A., excluding, of course, Mr. Ford's own collections. It is of the vintage of 1903, some decades before Henry made a lady out of Lizzie. It is one of the original two cylinder type. Somewhat battered, altogether squeaky, decidedly rusty—but the engine chugs on as merrily as Mr. Tennyson's brook. It can do all of 18 miles an hour. Mr. Wright discovered it in a barn near Memphis, Tenn., and promptly acquired it. It antedates the model T by five years. Which reminds ye ed there must be some rare specimens of the latter model rattling over what we laughingly called our pavements. What appears to be the oldest four cylinder flivver in these parts is owned by a frat house at Northwestern university, but you never can tell.

Of late a queer fishy taste in lake water has been detected by the discriminating palates of Lake Foresters. Superintendent John C. McNicol of that suburb's water department, after due research, explains that it is due to the little plant organism known as algae, and that there is nothing to worry about. Scientists, says Superintendent McNicol, declare that it is the algae that give to fish the fishy aura or personality, and that without the algae fish would not taste like fish at all. So chemically pure, in fact, is the algae that one may safely use the water it inhabits in synthetic gin without poisoning the water.

The new arrival, the Dibelka's third child, is named for Mrs. Dibelka's father, George E. Shaffer of the Chicago Daily Post, and for George Shaffer of Hollywood, THE TRIBUNE correspondent. South Chicago residents are complaining that the speed of the interurban busses through the city's streets constitute a menace. They frequently travel 40 miles an hour, it is alleged. Two drivers were arrested last week. They were fined $25 and costs, but later were discharged. One citizen writes that "to observe one of these thundering busses with open cut out, traveling through heavy boulevard traffic at 25 to 40 miles an hour, gives one a sobering and creepy sensation. It is an increasing menace, borne out by the daily casualties listed in the press."

Again the village muse honors one of our self-made men, this time James Edward Gorman, the big railroader, and the system he directs. We quote:

You may ride the Rock Island to the Golden Gate
For your summer vacation, and the trip is just great;
You see the Rocky mountains and the
canyons grand,
And all the scenic glory of that western land.

Figaro McGee, well known historian of the drama, now summering in our midst, says he is enjoying himself immensely. "I admire you westerners," he said, "and particularly your great, pulsing city, with its indomitable 'I Will' spirit. I wonder if you appreciate the bigness and vastness of it all. Do you know that the spring moving peak in Chicago this year reached a total of 84,028 families; that you have 183 concerns wholesaling lumber planing mill products; that 33 department stores sold $18,489,200 worth of men's and boys' clothing, this figure representing more than 20 per cent of the entire retail sales of men's and boys' clothing in Chicago in 1926? Reformers in Italy Frown on Hollywood

BERGAMO, Italy.—(AP)—The prefect of Bergamo has climaxed his reform campaign with an order banning publications featuring pictures of lightly draped women.

The review Excelsior, printed in Milan, was mentioned specifically and "its sale or diffusion" forbidden throughout the district. The same severe treatment is promised for any other publications which "ape what is done in a certain country to the north," as one of the clerical papers puts it.

Hollywood is receiving a good share of the blame in this part of Italy. Measures are being considered to dam the flood of pictures of film actresses sent from the United States by Hollywood press agents.

The complaint has been made that if the Italian reform movement continues to spread the tabloids will have nothing to print but pictures of Premier Mussolini on horseback.

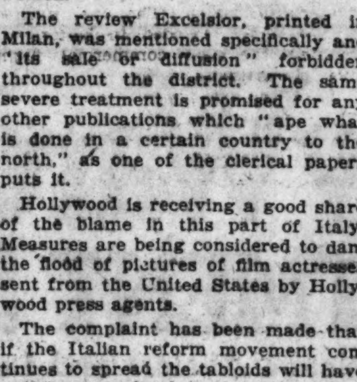
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



Collector Gets His Thrill Out of Wooden Legs

Tastes Among the Hobby Riders Are Varied.

THIS is the time of year when doctors go about telling listless people that what they need is a new interest in life, some refreshing and amusing hobby that will take their minds off their work.

"But a hobby is expensive," the complainers complain.

That depends. The man whose hobby is collecting can openers has not spent a fortune on it. One who collects labels from wine and cordial bottles and pastes them in a scrapbook rides an inexpensive hobby-horse through scenes of some hilarity and comes away with what he considers the best part of the party.

An unsatisfactory feature of that sort of collecting is that the others remain as indifferent to his labels as their collector always is toward the liquids the labels describe. And if one is the only connoisseur of can openers in the world one misses a certain keen edge of delight which some collectors find sharpened by the sense of having won out over an acquisitive adversary.

Belasco Prefers Jades.

Nobody but their owner has any idea of the value of David Belasco's collection of jades, crystals and rosaries that have come to his studio from all over the world and through the centuries.

The jades run mainly to elephants, and they range in size from a fraction of an inch to three feet from trunk to tail. There are enough of them to guarantee good luck and chase away the goblins from a good many lives. And of course there are lamps. One jade and crystal lamp in that collection is said to have cost $15,000. Cabinets of wine and cordial glasses, mostly colored, are outstanding achievements from the connoisseur's point of view.

There are glasses in that studio which are supposed to date back to King Solomon's time. Their owner regards his treasures and wonders why so many of the men and women of his acquaintance find it necessary to go to Europe every year. He stays quietly at home and has what he wants of Europe or the orient sent to his study.

Some Like Old Bottles.

Lord Dunsany, a recent visitor in New York, has a hobby that never was and never will be expensive. He really has two. When the titled Irish playwright wishes to forget the cares that come to an author in those abysmal hours when characters refuse to behave, he goes to a work table, gets out some old tools and becomes a goldsmith.

From thin sheets of gold this patient nobleman fashions handsome picture frames for the photographs of his friends. If his mood happens to be for something more distant and windy he goes hunting and comes back with more quills for his great jar of pens or more of those curved and shining trophies that decorate the hall of his London home, where the staircase is lined with antelopes' horns.

Quite different is the taste of those people whose hobby sends them into queer places in search of old bottles. There are a few fine collections in New York—great bulging vessels that once held fifteen gallons of rum, quarts, pints, half pints, and tiny tubes of amethyst glass that delight the eye of the expert. A thousand people might pass by without even seeing an old bottle in a window.

The along comes some one who stops and looks, whose eyes brighten with enchantment at the sight of a flat or curved or bulging flask whose sides may be decorated with a head of Washington, a railway engine, certain combinations of eagle and serpent, of violin and star. For those who can read the language there are pages and chapters of history in the patterns on old bottles whose shapes and colors and decorations reveal their secrets to the connoisseur.

Hunted Hungry Cats.

William Gillette, the actor, had a humanitarian hobby that occupied his midnight hours for many years when he was a popular favorite on Broadway. He would leave the theater alone and, turning his back on the bright lights, would go sauntering through the darker streets searching for hungry cats. Cats know who are worthy of being liked and on these they bestow their confidence.

Even those that had been most scared and kicked never needed much coaxing when Mr. Gillette came along, his pockets bulging with food. He would talk to them, feed them, pat them and pet them until his pockets were empty. Then he would go home. The next night and the next he would be back with a banquet for neglected cats. If he found a sick or starving one that needed special care he would tuck it in the crook of his arm and take it home.

One could always identify Mr. Gillette's dressing room from the photographs on his makeup table. They were pictures of cats in silver frames.

Rooney Wants Can Opener.

Nora Bayes collected bottles of perfume. Perfume to her was something to be seen, not smelled. She had dozens of bottles, big and little, from which the stopper had never been removed. She kept them in a glass cabinet, where the sunlight by day and electric light by night could reveal the soft beauty of the perfumes' color and the shapes of the shining bottles.

Pat Rooney is the man who goes in for can openers. Hours when he is not working in the theater are often spent strolling through those basement sections of stores where kitchen utensils are sold. Always this customer wants can openers. Dozens of them hang in rows in his kitchen, like the rows of keys in Baldpate Inn. Whenever he gives a present to a friend there is sure to be a can opener in the package.

James Barry, another vaudevillian, is the man who will go to endless trouble to get the label off a bottle and into his book whose pages of design and color grow thicker with the years.

Book Hobby Expensive.

Book collecting, of course, is one of the best known and most expensive of all the hobbies that men and women ride. During the years from 1629 to 1681, the kindly vicar of Stratford-on-Avon kept a careful diary of events. And in numerous entries he casually mentioned the name of the bad boy of the village—one William Shakespeare. The other day, at a London auction, this little book—the so-called Ward diary—was purchased for $52,000!

A royal collector with an unconventional hobby is King Alfonso of Spain, who cherishes all the things which have at some time endangered his life, such as a large stone on which he struck his head when a child. The skin of a horse, killed when a bomb was thrown into the royal carriage on Alfonso's wedding day, is another important piece in the collection.

Even some of the royal women have assortments of unusual objects, although feminine collectors are rather rare.

Whim for Tall Soldiers.

Frederick the Great of Prussia collected less permanent oddities for his Potsdam palace—tall soldiers! And before his time was the "mad" king of Bavaria who spent a fortune on hats of all ages and nations. Even the stern and militaristic Kaiser Wilhelm II. had a hobby, an assortment of ties and scarfs from all over the world, from the humblest cotton bows to the most costly silken cravats.

For eccentricity few can outdo the hobby of Lord Randolph Churchill, who gathered the personal effects of condemned criminals and was especially fond of teeth taken from hanged men. He is equaled, however, by a Nebraskan who has access to a penitentiary out there. All criminals, upon entering the jail, are shaved and the hair of the more famous ones, carefully indexed and labeled, may be found in the Nebraskan's collection.

A similarly grewsome assortment is that of a Connecticut man, who has amassed samples of artificial legs of every kind illustrating the evolution from peglegs like that of Long John Silver to the most perfect modern mechanisms.

PROUD OF RARE PLANT

THE St. Joseph lily belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Kasper, 7555 South Shore drive, blooms only once every seven years, and the fact that it is just now in blossom makes it a source of interest to florists throughout the city. The bulb from which the plant is an offspring came from Germany twenty-eight years ago. According to legend, a miracle happened whenever the rare plant, ordinarily unattractive, bursts into bloom.

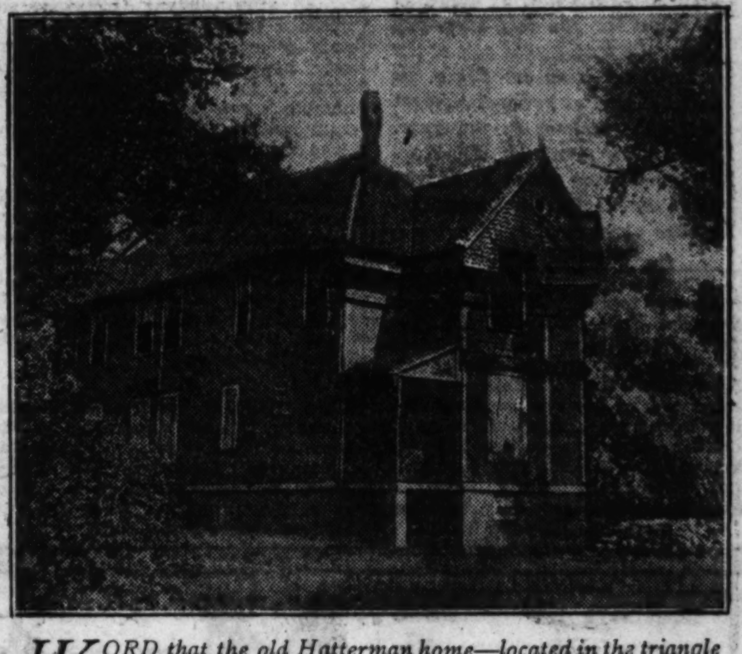
HAPPY DAYS GONE BY



WORD that the old Hatterman home—located in the triangle formed by Howard street and Malvern and Rogers avenues—is to be torn down this summer will bring a pang of regret to many north siders who recall the house and yard about it as a play place. A skating pond and an orchard filled with fruit were some of the attractions that once drew children for miles around.

Turkish Women Ignore Orders to Remove Veil

CONSTANTINOPLE.—(AP)— Public antagonism has forced the Turkish government to abandon strict enforcement of the prohibition against veils for women and fezes for men.

The older generation will be left to follow the old customs and efforts henceforth will be centered in persuading the young people of Turkey to obey the regulations designed to westernize the country.

Stories are told of Turkish girls who leave their homes for school each morning demurely veiled. At a safe distance from their parents they produce a tam o' shanter or other western hat, remove their veils, and go on their way.

France Drai Lion's Share of Tourist Trade

Paris Popular in Spite of Living Costs.

PARIS.—(AP)—France draws lion's share of the world's tourist business this summer, despite higher living cost. Steamship companies report a decrease in the total volume of travel from the United States. The invasion was late in starting and the peak is already past. All indications point to an early ebb tide of westward bound tourists, many of whom express a wish to be in the United States when the fur begins to fly in the presidential campaign.

Busy Until November.

Passage west is hard to obtain during August and September, but accomodations during October are comparatively plentiful. Last year and the year before the rush did not subside until November.

Tourist business in the provinces along the seacoasts and in the mountain districts is better this year than of 1926.

Paris is getting to be an old story to many trans-Atlantic visitors. The number of those who have been here before is proportionately greater this year. They stop for a few days of theater-going and shopping, and the "sights" of the city are no longer necessary for them.

All Come to Paris.

But they all come to Paris, practically all of them. Perhaps only half of those who cross the Atlantic this summer see London.

The proportion who get to Berlin and Rome and further afield is even less. But most of them still see Paris, coming and going.

The hotels and tourist agencies say they remain here fewer days than they used to. And the merchants complain that they buy less.

Shoppers' Service Tales

Accommodating.

Several weeks ago I had occasion to use a special size pasteboard box. I looked in vain for it until I went down town to make a purchase. While in one of the large department stores I asked a floorwalker if there would be a chance of procuring the desired box. He at once called an attendant, to whom I described the size and kind of box I wished, and directly he returned with pr

I offered to pay for it, but he declined to accept it, expressing pleasure in accommodating a patron. The following week I again wished to buy a summer suit and suggested going to the store where I had been treated so kindly.

A couple of years ago I was down town prowling around, and across a real find, a frock that shrieked Paris, marked down from $145 to $50. Of course I wished it and only having $30 with me a deposit and had the dress put in will-call office.

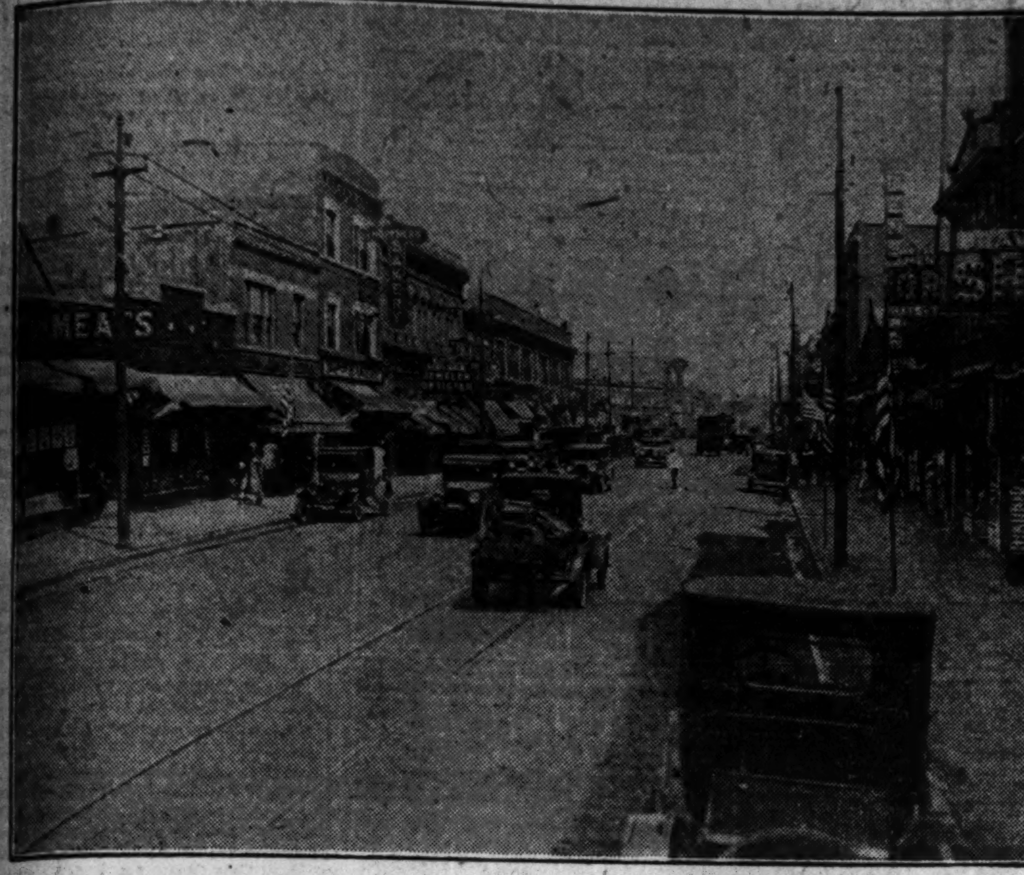
LINCOLN, NEAR LAWRENCE AVENUE



FLAGS floated from their poles along the curbing when this picture was taken of Lincoln avenue, lending a holiday touch to the progressive thoroughfare. You are looking northwest toward the juncture of Lincoln with Lawrence and Western avenues. The truck, speeding down the car tracks, may have to pause at the corner because it's one of the neighborhood's busiest spots.

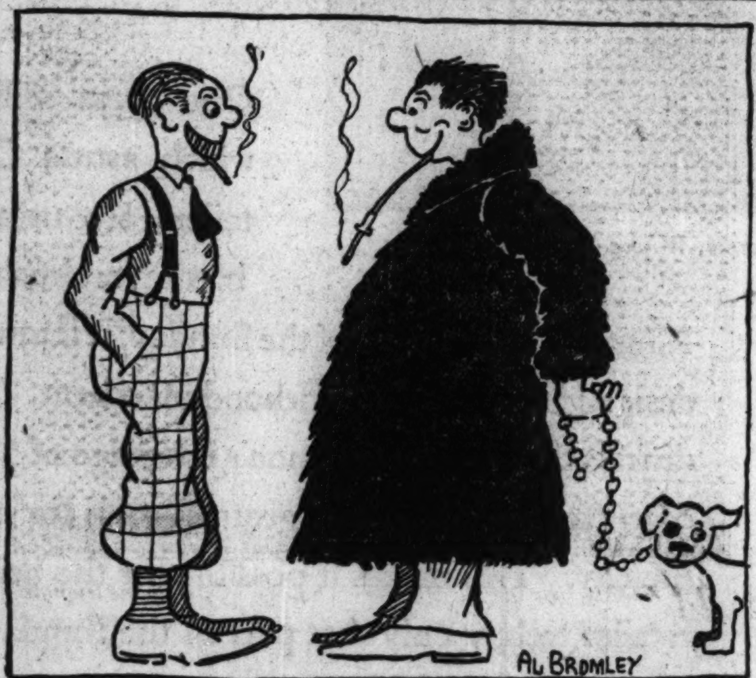
Al Unearths a New Language

Claims to Have Heard Twentieth Lingo Spoken in Our Midst

By Snowshoe Al.

THE author was recently informed by a gentleman of even less importance than himself that only nineteen foreign languages are spoken in these United States. Said author disagrees with other unimportant gentleman and submits the following mess of curious lingo to support his own personal belief that twenty foreign languages are spoken in our midst. He claims to have overheard this queer collection of words and sounds on a college campus, but you can believe that or not:



QUESTION: "So yuh grabbed yourself a new roommate, huh? Hoozee?"

ANSWER: "O, ain'tcha heard? It's Freddie, the Dormitory Nomad—I had a helluva time yankin' him loose from that Gypsy Camp, because he sure soaks up a flock o' comedy among them Cliff Dwellers—it took me t'ree hours tuh converse him into migratin' over tuh my landlady's wigwam an' mixin' his laundry wit' mine. Yuh know, he comes from my home town. Me an' him gits along swell!"

* *

Slings Merry Mucilage.

QUESTION: "Yeh? What breed o' Dodo is he?"

ANSWER: "Smoking Bow-wow, what a panic that bird hatched out to become! He's one o' them guys what wouldn't change their garters often even if they did wear 'em around their tonsils. Sa-a-y, that geezer's gonna be a winning number in the business world some day, accept it from me! He's got a brain like a domino—the double blank. I wouldn't fool yuh—yuh could blindfold him an' git the photographers ready an' stand by wit' an open checkbook—an' still he'd pick the wrong cigaret! Har, har! I wish he'd git over the idea that a hippodrome is a hippopotamus' feminine acquaintance. Even so, me an' him gits along swell."

QUESTION: "Izzee a good worker?"

ANSWER: "O, curious person, you convulse me! Freddie wouldn't stroll a block for a caravan! He allus evaporates right after supper an' doesn't float through our door again till the zero hour, an' he ain't been to no library, neither. When he returns he's so wobbly that he can hardly drop his anchor, an' he smells like a collision between a pair of beer trucks. Baby, what a whale of a difference just a few scents make! Sa-a-y, the hardest work that bimbo does is ride the Frosh. O, how that hombre loves tuh sink his spurs into the Green Caps! What a Campus Cossack he turned out to become! Still, me an' him gits along swell!"

QUESTION: "Duzzee go in heavy for Alcoholic Exercise?"

ANSWER: "O, duzzee! That youth can sling Merry Mucilage past his Adam's apple so fast that his tonsils never git a chance to dodge! Every bartender in America grinned when our hero was born. Every other baby in our town cried for the moon but this bozo cried for hip pockets in his rubber panties. Sa-a-y, he won't learn to play Bridge because the word reminds him of water!"

Crashed for the Blond.

QUESTION: "Izzee well supplied wit' bucks?"

ANSWER: "Yeh, I fear so—he's only two weeks behind wit' his share o' the room rent—I'm SIX. Yeh, he's fairly loose wit' his wampum."

QUESTION: "Duzzee gallop out much wit' the Sorority Inmates?"

ANSWER: "Naw, he steers clear o' them Minnehahas! He used tuh trade strangle-holds wit' one o' them Elves but she squeezed too hard one night an' rattled a bone in his neck. Har, har, an' tears of unrestrained mirth! 'Listen, Spider,' says him tuh her, 'crawl back into your web an' park there, because this fly ain't wrestlin' you no more until some o' your brute strength deserts yuh!' He meant it, too—he still passes The Elves' Dugouts on the dead gallop! But, if you're asking me—which would be unbelievable—I think he's skidded outa the frying utensil into the hot embers, because I hear he just crashed loudly for the wicked Blond which shuffles the crockery in Smith's Food Foundry downtown. Har, har!"

QUESTION: "Yeh? What's so funny about that?"

ANSWER: "O, me! O, my! O, us! You ain't heard somethin' yet! That Filly is just full of bright sayings! 'Aha,' she says tuh me, 'so you is a college student, huh? Well, why don'tcha git outa the rut?' 'I don't connect with your meaning,' says him tuh she. 'That's just one of your habits,' says her tuh him, 'you are allus fumbling good advice. However, yuh got the right idea by snugglin' up tuh me, because I'm a wow when it comes tuh guiding uncertain little footsteps towards Success. I'll make somethin' outa yuh yet!' Har, har! I'll say she will! He'll soon be using nothin' but bananas an' peanuts for stomach fuel. Yuh can expect tuh see him breezin' across the campus some mornin' wit' a cocoanut under each elbow. I allus kids him about her but he never gets real sore. Yeh, me an' him gits along swell!"

The Bunion Battle.

QUESTION: "Didja know that the Math prof bawled him out yesterday mornin' for coming late to class?"

ANSWER: "I ain't capable of registering Incredulity! He was only ahead of time once in his life. Har, har! He sure caused lots o' wear an' tear on the neighborhood calendars on that occasion! Aw, that Math prof! Sa-a-y, I'll sell yuh my share o' that simp for a dime an' I won't even question the coin's genuineness! Cheat me if yuh want—make me an offer!"

QUESTION: "You ain't slopping over wit' affection for him, huh?"

ANSWER: "O, superfluous conversation! O, wanton waste of words! O, hell! Believe it or not, but they got the idea for mechanical refrigeraprof's noble features. One of his early lectures inspired some inventor, an' it resulted in the Hot Blast Furnace. tion by just gazing upon the Math Anyhow, that's my narrative an' I'm glued to it."

QUESTION: "Yuh gonna be at the Bunion Battle tonight?"

ANSWER: "Well, I hope tuh inform yuh in the affirmative! I wouldn't miss hearing that orchestra on a bet. O, person, can't that outfit exhale Fahrenheit, though?"

* *

Hauling Edna.

QUESTION: "Yuh draggin' any extra feet wit' yuh?"

ANSWER: "I ain't saying 'no.' I'm hauling Edna. Yuh want the fourth Clinch wit' her? I've already signed up to fight the first t'ree rounds. Yeh? All right, I'll asker. Well, s'long."

QUESTION: "Where yuh goin' now?"

ANSWER: "Back tuh my igloo tuh chew the fabric wit' Freddie. He's probably gonna show up this P. M. wit' his Crockery Smasher. If he does I'll sling razz at him forever—he won't git sore—me an' him gits along swell! Adios!"

QUESTION: "Whoa! Cease motion! Don't be in such a haste to disappear beyond the horizon yet, because I wouldst ask thee a couple vital questions. Yea, two questions I wouldst fling at thee. Wouldst hear them?"

ANSWER: "Let it happen! Toss 'em one at a time—don't crowd my intellect. What's the first question?"

* *

Headed for Tepee.

QUESTION: "Lend me ten berries?"

ANSWER: "Me? You flatterer! Turn me upside down an' shake me, an' I'll give yuh 80 per cent of anything you find. If you find anything the first time, I'll pay yuh a salary to shake me from now on. The tailor what put pockets in this pair of pants was a humorist, doggone him! I'm as free from shekels as a butterfly is from teeth. I git money from home about as often as One-Eyed Connelly buys a ticket from the scalpers. That's that! Now, what's the other question?"

QUESTION: "Lend me five berries?"

ANSWER: "Listen, Dumber Than Necessary, are yuh sure yuh don't want tuh ask me three questions? No? Yes?"

QUESTION: "Gimme a buck, willya? Lend me a frogskin?"

ANSWER: "That's more like it! Here's 10 cents—I'll slip yuh the other 90 tonight."

QUESTION: "Well, see that yuh don't forget! I hate like hell tuh have anybody owe me money! Gimme a cigaret, willya?"

ANSWER: "Ain't got none. Don't forget tuh gimme back my dollar heap much pronto. S'long. I'm headed for my tepee. If I don't see yuh tonight I'll look for yuh in the Comic Section next Sunday."

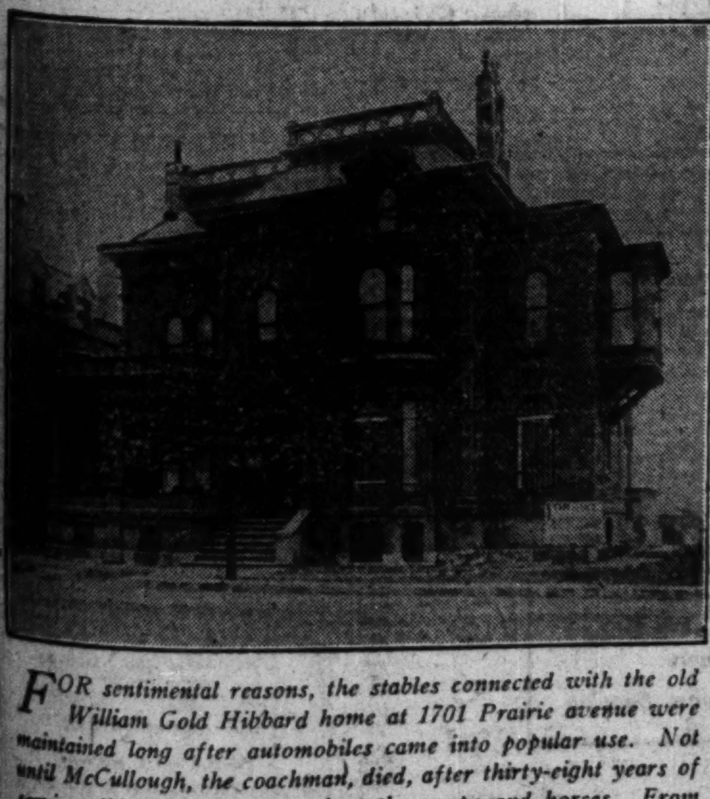
FAMOUS HOMES



FOR sentimental reasons, the stables connected with the old William Gold Hibbard home at 1701 Prairie avenue were maintained long after automobiles came into popular use. Not until McCullough, the coachman, died, after thirty-eight years of service, did a limousine supplant the coupe and horses. From this home McCullough drove coaches to the marriages of six children of the Hibbard family, to the christening of sixteen grandchildren, and to the weddings of three granddaughters. Palatial Air Liners Ready for Sea Trip

England Hopes to Be First to Cross Ocean.

LONDON.—(AP)—Great Britain has thrown her last reserves of science into the fight to wrest from Germany the honor of launching the first trans-Atlantic air liner.

Two giants of the air, the British R-100 now being built at Howden and the German LZ-127 nearing completion at Friedrichshafen, will make their first flights soon. The one finished first will be recorded in history as making the first commercial flight over the Atlantic.

The Germans are now in the lead. Their Zeppelin is expected to be in the air before the middle of August, whereas it will be toward the end of September before the British are ready to test the R-100. Construction difficulties, the failure of materials to arrive and other factors may alter this prospect.

Cost Millions.

For many months in the giant sheds at Howden and Friedrichshafen hundreds of workmen have been climbing like spiders over the largest metal sausages in the world.

Each of the new dirigibles is bulkier than an ocean liner. The metal skeleton is covered with cotton fabric which has been treated with aluminum paint. Each has cost millions of dollars to construct. When completed, as they hope to be, within a month or two, the two airships, each on its own route, will inaugurate a line of commercial air travel across the Atlantic. The R-100 expects to make a direct crossing from Cardington, England, to New York, and the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen to the Azores and then to New York.

Imagine an airship comprising three decks, the two upper decks for the passengers, and the lower for the crew. Imagine a dining room capable of holding 50 persons, floor on which the entire passenger list can dance, promenade decks, comfortable cabins, all in an airship.

* *

World's Greatest On Way.

Each airship is capable of carrying a passenger list of 100 and a crew of 40, but the Germans plan to carry only 20 passengers and concentrate on mail and valuable cargo.

Meanwhile in the background looms up the tremendous shape of what will be the greatest airship in the world, the R-101, which is building at Cardington, England. It will not be ready until next year, and will then be placed in use on a route to India.

The R-101 embodies a number of new structural ideas, among them being the use of steel in the framework, instead of duralumin, steel being four times stronger. The R-101 will carry 25 tons of fuel.

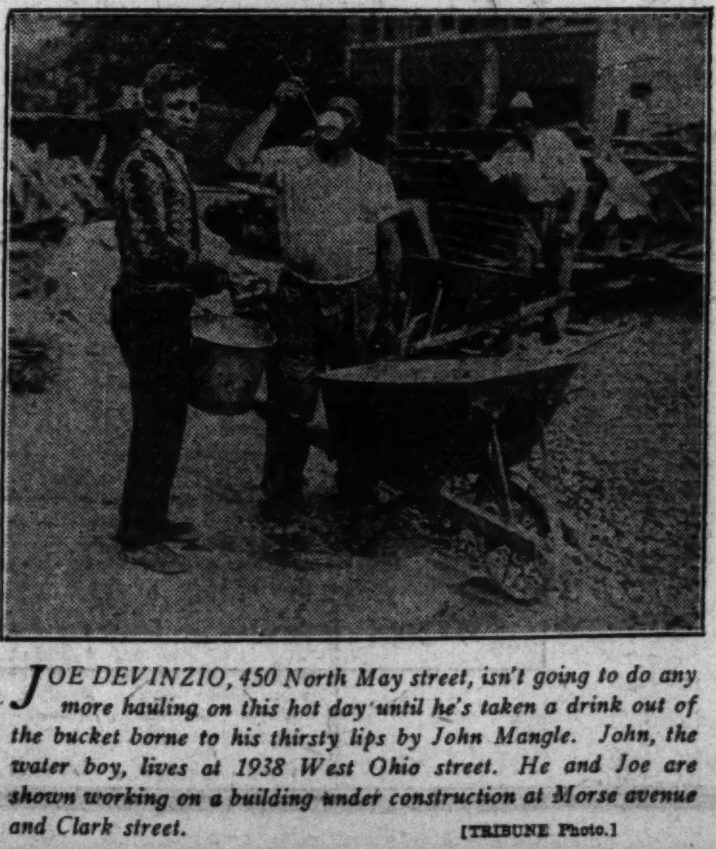
Fists Replace Swords When Deputies Fight

PARIS—(AP)—Marquis of Queensbury rules, with a touch of old London prize ring regulations, now govern the settlement of personal disputes between members of the French parliament.

M. Roux-Freissineng, member for Oran, Algeria, slapped the face of Jean Molle, mayor of Oran and also a deputy from Algeria. A punch on the nose hurts more but is not so much an insult in France as a slap. In pre-war days this incident would have meant a duel.

Today, instead of sending seconds and setting the matter right by a meeting at sunrise, Mayor Molle used his right and left immediately. There followed a lively few minutes. Each was credited with two knock-downs after which the incident was closed along with Mayor Molle's right eye.

A MOMENT'S PAUSE



JOE DEVINZIO, 450 North May street, isn't going to do any more hauling on this hot day until he's taken a drink out of the bucket borne to his thirsty lips by John Mangle. UNDER HIS LEMON TREE

JOHN J. WOLNEWICZ, 2453 Montrose avenue, enjoys tropical vegetation without leaving Chicago. In his florist shop he has several lemon trees, one of which, as you will note, is tall enough for him to stand beneath. It appears that before long the crop will be ready for John to pick. He hasn't decided whether to turn the fruit into pie or lemonade.

HE DIDN'T.

English Writer Claims That Sun Does the Moving

LONDON.—(AP)—A book attempting to prove that the sun revolves around the earth has just been published in England.

It was written by William Edgell of Gloucestershire, and sums up his experiments extending over thirty years. For the last two years he has had a telescope trained on the pole star and night after night he has watched for some sign of motion.

Has the star budged? It has not. But the case of the sun is different. In the morning it was shining in Mr. Edgell's front garden and in the evening it was over the back garden. The argument is impregnable, but the book contains added proof in experiments with oranges, smoke, pendulums, eclipses, and tides.

DURHAM, S. C.—(AP)—A. H. Shearer, newest addition to the Shearer family of Oak Grove township, will bear the name of the next President of the United States. If the New York governor wins, the baby will be called Alfred H. Shearer. Should the Republican win, the parents will name the child A. Hoover Shearer.

Girls in Japan Win Romance and Free Baths

Victory Comes to Workers in Textile Factory.

TOKIO.—(AP)—A strike of working girls in a large Japanese textile factory won a momentous victory including "freedom of marriage" and free baths every day.

The right of girl employes to marry has long been a bone of contention between workers and manufacturers. The strike came about when the owners of the Tokio Muslin company attempted to enforce to the letter their rule against romance.

The custom of enforcing the anti-marriage rule has been in vogue for many years, the argument of the employers being that most of the girl workers are too young to marry and, if they do so, their value to factory work is greatly depreciated.

The girl employés of the muslin company, besides their insistence on freedom of marriage within the factory, also demanded freedom of leaving the factory premises for recreation after 11 p. m.; appointment of special physicians and surgeons for night shifts; adoption of a system of discharge allowances and bonuses for continuous service; better food at lower prices; free tickets for bath houses every day; special cooling facilities during the hot months; payment of half-day wages on national holidays.

Virtually all of these demands were granted.

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table.

meal and chat with another waitress who, it seems, had a grudge against the bus boy for refusing to move a table for her.

My waitress took the blame on herself.

"I told him to put it there," she said; "that's what caused the misunderstanding."

I departed, leaving my table enriched only by the strategic kazoo. I was almost to the corner when I heard her running behind me.

"You forgot something," she cried breathlessly, and I turned to accept the instrument and her apologies for not seeing it sooner.

The Start of the Pursuit.

In my earlier wanderings I had made a barber shop at 1165 East 53d street. I took a chair next to a woman who was having her iron gray hair "sculptured" into a boyish bob. The jolly little barber danced around her, snipping here and there, exclaiming over the beautiful lines in between snips.

"Ah," he gloated, "yesterday was a fine day, nice and hot. All the ladies that had been growing their hair for months came in and had it taken off. And shorter than before, mind you, too."

"Yeah," said one of the other chair occupants, "they take off their hair and their hose at the first sign of warm weather."

"Hose—stockings," wailed the little barber. "You don't mean to say it's the style to go without stockings now? Why, I get all the fashion magazines, and they never mentioned it. Well, I'll have to go home and tell my wife to take off her stockings. That's a style that might save me some money."

My barber was taciturn, attending to his business and nothing else, but the other one vindicated the good name of the profession, and kept up a chatter about this and that and even the other thing. The Heeney-Tunney fight was still on his mind.

"I don't care for Tunney," he said in his decidedly foreign tone. "But I'm glad an Englisher didn't beat an American."

I got my change and a card which told me I might have my hair bobbed at my residence by appointment, and went on down the street.

* *

The Parting of the Ways.

A telegraph office at 1459 East 53d street gave me a bright idea, and I walked in. I waited a while at the desk before a tall, cool blonde came to my assistance.

"I may want to send a telegram to Glenhaven, Mich.," I said. "How long will it take?"

"Half an hour," she said, just like that.

"O, but there isn't an office there," I countered.

"It will have to be routed through Traverse City and telephoned," she announced, after looking it up.

"They haven't got a telephone," I remarked, helpfully.

"It could be mailed," she suggested, "from Traverse City. You had better allow a day for it, then. Do you want to send it now?"

I didn't, and she turned away.

"Wouldn't it get there quicker," I persisted, "if it went by way of Empire?"

"I've already told you the only way it could go," she said firmly. So I went another way.

* *

The Neighborhood Nuisance.

At the I. C. station at 53d street I inquired about prices to the loop. I asked single, round trip, and ten ride rates, and received from the ticket agent brief but informative answers.

"Can you tell me how to get to the nearest public library?" I asked her then.

"There's one downtown," she said, proffering me a ticket.

I wanted one in the neighborhood.

"Well, I don't know where there's one, but she might," pointing to the collector.

I repeated my question to the collector.

"Sure," she said; "47th and Lake Park."

"How do you get there?"

"Take the street car right out here down to 47th, or maybe it's 48th," and, as I hesitated, she added: "You can't miss it; it's a large gray stone building."

* *

In Store and Restaurant.

But I didn't go to the library. Instead I went on down to a drug store at 5301 Hyde Park boulevard, bought a nickel's worth of Ju Ju beans, and gave the clerk the library test.

"Public library," she said, as though she had never heard of one. "No, I don't know of any around here."

So I asked how to get downtown.

"You can take the bus, the street car, or the I. C. from here," she said, and turned to the next customer.

A restaurant at 55th and Harper reminded me that I was hungry. My waitress was genial, but more interested in the men at the next table than in me.

She was angry for a moment when my salad had to be changed because of the dressing, but her good nature returned with the dessert.

"We have tapioca pudding and pie and ice cream," she offered. "The tapioca pudding is awfully nice."

I disagreed, and took the ice cream. She was swatting flies over in a corner when a fat youngster, reminiscent of Peck's bad boy, seized the swatter and began plying it on her. After a struggle she regained it and, rewarding him with a resounding swat, turned again to the less irritating flies.

Acquiring a Kazoo.

Down the street a ways I passed a music shop at 1173 East Fifty-fifth street. Intrigued by the toy saxophones in the window, I went in and priced them.

The girl showed me straight ones and curly ones and allowed me to demonstrate them myself. I was charmed, but the price, I declared, was too high. That brought the store manager to her aid.

"Show her the brass one, Marguerite," he said. Marguerite obeyed.

I admired the brass one, but not quite enough.

"See," he said, "the finish is beautiful and instruction books come with it. How old a boy did you want it for?"

"I wanted it for a joke, not a boy," I informed him.

He was a bit taken back. "Well, we have some kazoos made to look like saxophones. Marguerite, show her the kazoos. The single one and the double one and that long one there."

Marguerite obeyed, and I saw the kazoos and was given expert instruction in manipulating them. I sought the exit and finally gained it, not, however, without being accompanied by one of the kazoos.

A Riot of Boyhood.

A block or two down I ran into a baby riot. It looked as if all the boys in the world were congregated on that corner, swarming and pushing to get some place I couldn't quite see. I did a little pushing myself and made my way through to discover the cause—a sign outside the drug store at 901 East 55th street: "To Every Boy a Free Cone Between 2 and 3:30."

Inside, two clerks were filling and handing out cones as fast as they could work. One attendant stood at the doorway, trying to keep them in line and see that any one boy didn't get more than his share.

"It's a lot of fun for us," explained one of the clerks, "and the boys certainly appreciate it. You should have been here yesterday. It was ladies' day, and we treated all the girls. We do it once every year."

I went out as a little two year old toddled in for his cone. He was followed by a six footer who might have come under the classification of a boy, but who didn't look it.

* *

The End of the Trail.

It was then that I went to the tea room and found my journey's end. When I went back the second time she was in the kitchen.

"Belle, O, Belle," they called, and she hurried out. I handed her the card, and she didn't know quite what to make of it.

"You've heard of the politeness award, haven't you?" I asked.

"Why, yes—why, no—I mean yes, of course!" Then she recovered herself and said prettily: "I consider it a great honor to be singled out for it. May I show it to the kitchen help?" And she rushed back to tell them the good news.

Her employer, Mrs. E. D. Griffiths, came out to tell me how glad she was that Belle had been given it.

"She's a 100 per cent dependable, Belle Taylor is," she said. "Everybody who comes here loves her."

Belle came back, flushed and eager. She is a widow, she told me, and lives at 5012 Harper avenue, and $50—well, she could do a lot with $50. Her father, down in Chalmers, Ind., would be pleased.

I went down the street, armed with Belle's blessings and thanks, and the ubiquitous kazoo.

Champagne Foe Is Now Facing Suit for Libel

REIMS.—(AP)—The Champagne Wine Growers' syndicate has brought suit for libel against the writer, Paul Reboux, charging that his recent book contains groundless reflections on the virtue of champagne as a beverage.

M. Reboux is a famous gourmet who does not like sparkling wine and says so very forcibly. The wine growers claim that the book has injured their industry and ask that it be suppressed.

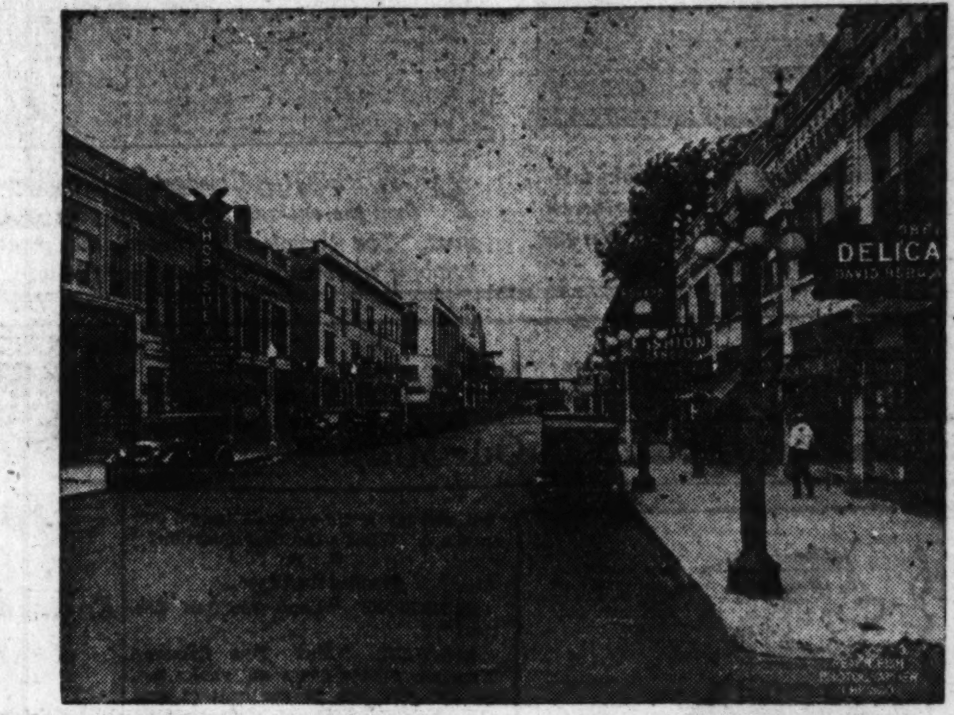
METROPOLITAN MARKETS!

the "Cities Within the City"



Howard Street and Ashland Avenue, Where Rogers Park Buys

AT Chicago's northern boundary two prosperous cities meet. Here the rich suburban community of Evanston joins Rogers Park, one of Chicago's "cities within the city."

These "cities" are Chicago's neighborhoods—the 48 districts of the city in which live its 3,000,000 inhabitants. Each of them is an independent community with its own banks, stores, and places of recreation. In population and wealth they are the equal of the most metropolitan of America's smaller cities.

Rogers Park, for example, has a population of more than 90,000 people, above average in the homes they live in and the comforts and luxuries they buy. 137 grocery and delicatessen stores are necessary to supply them with food; 50 drug stores cater to their needs. From any standpoint Rogers Park in reality is a city, a major market.

The buying center of a metropolis

Howard Street is a trading center of "the city of Rogers Park." This busy street is lined with bright, modern stores which would be a credit to any city in the country. The quality of articles they sell and the progressiveness of their merchandising and selling methods mark Rogers Park merchants as metropolitan retailers. They know the opportunities their "city" offers, and realize that to be "big time" merchants they must use up-to-date methods.

One great selling force which astute Chicago retailers are using in their battle for business is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune, a medium designed for the neighborhood merchant. This section divides the Sunday Tribune's coverage of 580,000 Chicago families into three groups—one for each side of the city. This makes it possible for the neighborhood retailer to buy only that part of the Sunday Tribune's circulation which he can use. In Rogers Park, for example, the Metropolitan Section reaches 20,597 of the 22,197 families in the district. The merchants of the neighborhood can thus secure a coverage of over 92% of their logical next-door customers—plus an additional circulation of 190,000 among north side and suburban families who live near enough to trade in Rogers Park! The cost of this selected circulation is only about a third of complete Sunday Tribune coverage.

You can use this sales force

Your business will profit when you use this method of selling to the "cities within the city." Ask a Tribune man to call and explain how you can repeat the success of scores of other neighborhood merchants by using the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune. Phone Superior 0100.

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

But this friend knows the fifth vice president of the Blank Steamship company. It is all really very simple.

Coiling the Rope.

Then a B. A., clad possibly in a light gray herringbone of the latest cut and wearing a loudly banded panama twitched rakishly over one eye, a sea bag in one hand and a mandolin case in the other, trips blithely along the incredulous waterfront in search of "his" ship. Already influenced by the salty atmosphere, he swing up the gangplank with all the nautical slouch and roll of a deck hand on a municipal ferry boat.

The mate, having read the proffered letter, smiles bleakly, tells the B. A. that he is hired, and vows that the next time that nuisance in a swivel chair wants a case of champagne smuggled in he can buy it on West Houston street instead, and may he be right royally stung!

On leaving port a B. A.'s first job is to assist in coiling and stowing the many fathoms of wire rope that lie snarled up on deck. There is nothing in the world more perverse than wire rope. Catch it in the right mood and it coils itself; try to force it and it leaps eagerly up and puts out an eye, usually waiting to do this until you have eight fathoms or so neatly coiled, which is exasperating. Then, too, since it is always old and badly frayed, it cuts unaccumstomed hands until they literally drip blood.

Finds Sea Is Salty.

By the time it is stowed, the pilot has left, hatches are battened tight, and the mate, who is in a happier mood, orders that the decks be washed down. Since sea water is used and since the action of salt on open cuts is distinctly stimulating, this job impresses upon the B. A. the fact that in this latitude and longitude the sea is decidedly salty. When, a little later, he is put to washing paint work with strong lye water, he begins to wish, especially if a long voyage lies ahead, that he had signed on a Jersey Central boat instead for the trip from Liberty street to Atlantic Highlands.

If he has made the mistake of saying "sir" to the faintly incredulous bosun, it is entirely possible that on the trip out the B. A. will devote himself exclusively to washing paint, and on the trip home to painting. If, on the other hand, he has had the good sense to go aboard unshaven, to look surly and to keep his mouth shut, he may fare better, perhaps even be put on watch.

Fine View of Moonrise.

On the north Atlantic in winter a night watch is not a desirable assignment in July or August, however, it is very pleasant. During the first two hours of a four hour watch his duties may be no more onerous than to stand on the navigating bridge where he rings the ship's bell on each hour and half hour and reports to the mate in charge. For the remaining two hours he may stand alone, far above the sea, on lookout in the crow's nest.

The faint occasional strains of music that reach him from the orchestra far aft accentuates his isolation, the magnificent loneliness of the night, and he sees moonrise at sea as no passenger lounging on the promenade deck has ever seen it.

Although this seems a most desirable assignment, it is sad to remember that an uneasy stomach can ruin one's appreciation of even the loveliest of tropic nights and that two inches of motion on deck may mean two feet or more in the nest.

May Choose Bed on Deck.

This ship was a sailor's paradise. There are others, however, far different and far more numerous. On many of them the bugs have been thriving and multiplying for thousands of bug generations. Having fared badly on the tough hides of thoroughly salted A. B.'s they flock joyously to the tender B. A. As a result, he sleeps in the fo'c'sle on his first night aboard, perhaps for only a part of it, and then transfers to the bare deck where he sleeps well save on those occasions when he is disturbed by rain or cold, or, perhaps, by a venturesome rat scampering over his face.

On a ship of this sort even a B. A. with a seaworthy stomach may starve in the midst of plenty, for that plenty may be of such nauseating quality that he prefers to heave it through a porthole before rather than after eating. The potatoes have gangrene, the rice pudding is sour, and the meat can be cut only if cut with the grain. When the food is as bad as this everything else is usually in keeping. There will be only two watches, which means that a man is four hours on duty, four off, four on and four off for days on end. The disadvantages are obvious.

Complain to Captain.

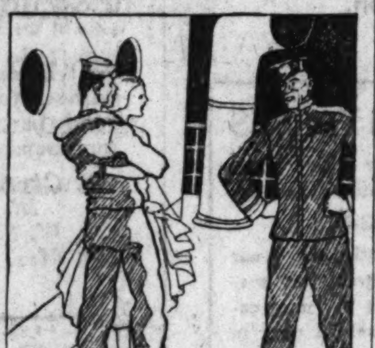
But poor food, hard work, seasickness, cuts, blisters and indigestion do not serve as deterrents.

Upon discovering the bug population of the fo'c'sle a group of college boys once took the matter up with the chief executive of the ship, the captain, who made the mistake of treating the complaint lightly. He smilingly assured them that they must be mistaken since he felt sure that there were no bugs on his ship, asked solicitously if they had been assigned deck chairs, and dismissed them.

They went immediately to the fo'c'sle, collected several dozen assorted bugs and returned with them to the astounded captain. Was the milk sour? They carried the pitcher to the bridge and asked that he smell it. He proclaimed the milk above suspicion, and they demanded that he taste it. Although he was a patient man, he gradually wearied of this sort of thing.

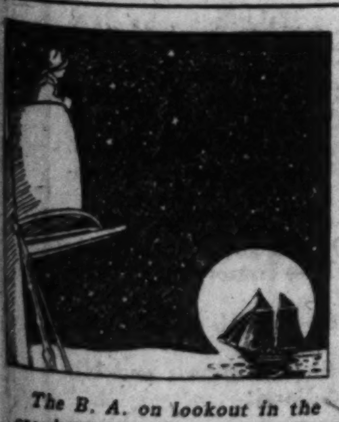
He suffered what was perhaps his greatest shock on a romantic moonlit night somewhere on the Caribbean, when, in the shadows of the boat deck, he discovered a handsome young B. A. in dirty blue dungarees tenderly enfolding a charming young lady from the first cabin. Since then he has not been the same man. Mutiny would have been a less heinous crime.

SHOCKING



A captain is never quite the same man again after discovering a frivolous B. A. of the fo'c'sle tenderly enfolding a young lady from the first cabin.

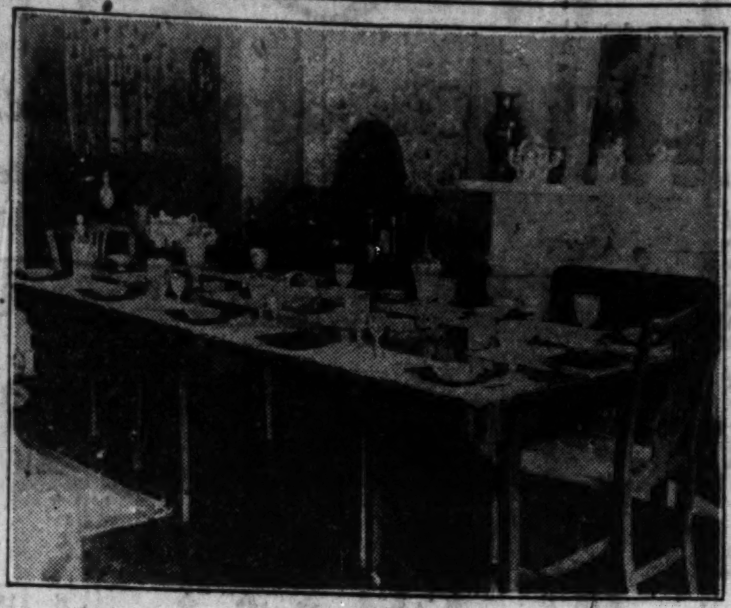
FAVORED



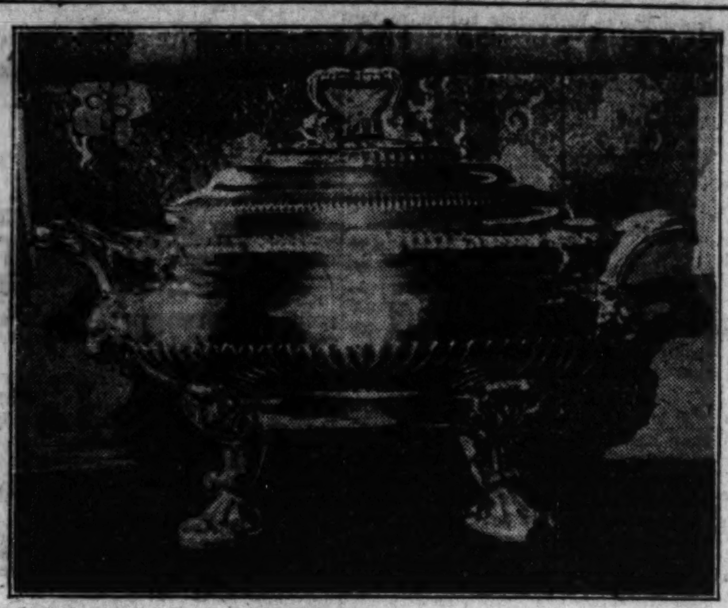
The B. A. on lookout in the crow's nest sees moonrise at sea as no passenger on the promenade deck has ever seen it.

DECORATIVE PIECES FOR THE HOME

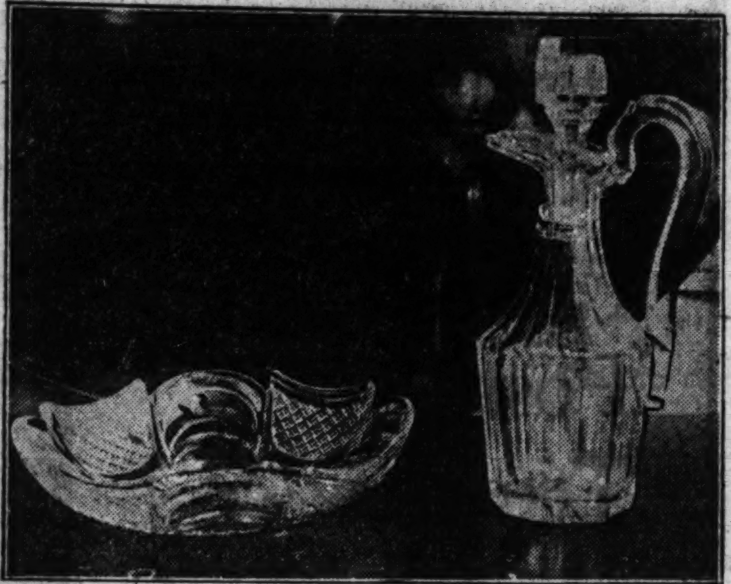
Interesting Offerings of Both Antique and Modernistic Design



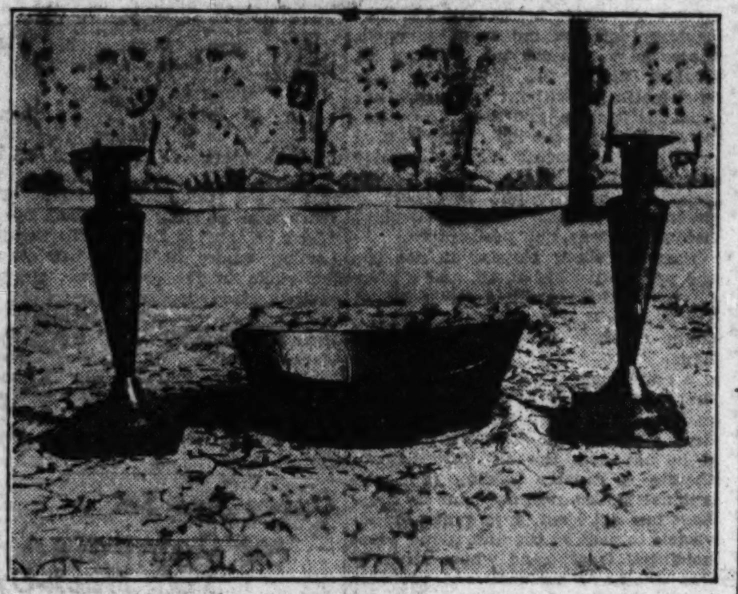
A table set in black and white glass. All the white glass is in the waffle pattern of pressed glass coveted by a collector for country house use. It is sturdy and honest and, combined with the black, is quite striking. It departs from the round in shape.



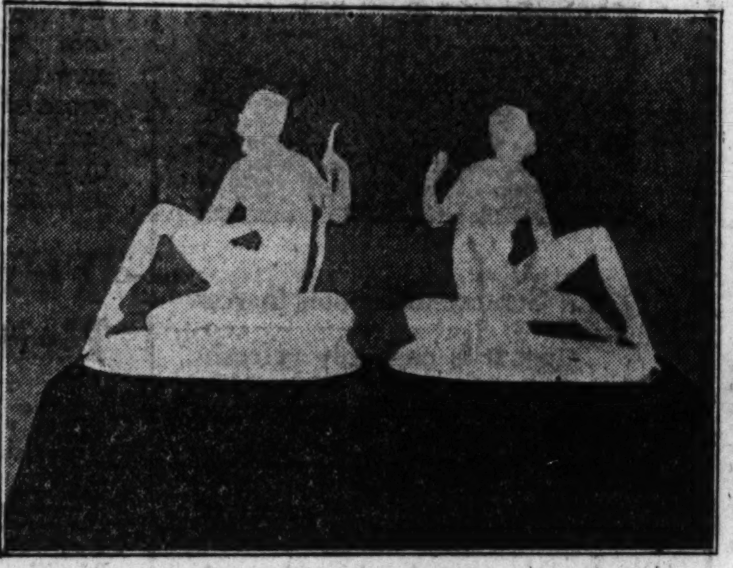
A beautiful soup tureen in sterling silver by Paul Store. It is, of course, a rare piece, and in perfect condition. Either for serving hot dishes or for a centerpiece, it is superb.



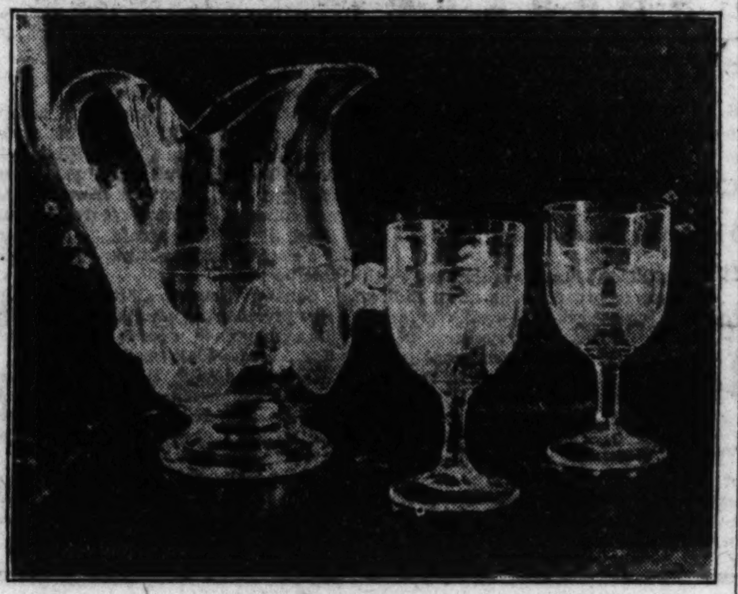
Two pieces of Irish glass. Both old, both beautiful, and both useful. The decanter is about eight inches high and in perfect condition. The price is reasonable.



A fine pair of tole candlesticks and a tole dish. The candlesticks are black, with gold and red figures, and would make an excellent small pair of lamps for a desk or writing table.



A pair of fine faience figures in all white. They are unusually graceful and lend themselves happily to the decoration of a mantelpiece. They would also be delightful among ferns on a dining table.



Some historic pressed glass made to commemorate the death of President Garfield. Note the Victorian garlands of mourning. It is all white and would make a delightful lemonade or ice tea set.

Illusion Aids in Home Life of Magicians

Wives Claim Happiness Is Due to Mystery.

Is it possible that some sort of perpetual mystery in the home is the thing that will keep a lifelong bloom on the romance of marriage? Should a modern husband have some new and surprising daily magic up his sleeve in order to keep a few amusing paces ahead of his wife's perspicacity, and thus maintain his place as a wonderworker in her imagination? And is it advisable for the wife to have her own secret storehouse of mystery whose shelves are never empty?

Two New York women with many years of happy marriage in retrospect answer yes to all three questions. They are Mrs. Harry Houdini and Mrs. Howard Thurston, widow and wife of famous magicians. Mrs. Houdini believes that throughout the thirty-three years of her married life she was the happiest of women.

Mrs. Thurston considers herself the happiest wife in the world. Both these women think it is possible — and profitable—for two people to live together in the closest harmony for years and years and yet keep certain reserves from each other. It seems that magicians and their wives always live like that, and that nobody ever heard of an unhappy marriage in a magician's home.

Both Had Secrets.

It was Mrs. Houdini who recently turned the searchlight on a certain technique of successful wifehood by admitting that in their lifetime together there were things in her mind day after day of which her husband knew nothing at all. Chief among these secrets was her occasional inability to see through much of the magic he performed for the public. That confession came when a committee of magicians asked her to do an act at the recent annual dinner of the Society of American Magicians, of which her husband had been president eight times. They only wanted something simple — pulling rabbits out of a hat, a necktie trick, or showing the guests articles that would disappear astonishingly from her hands.

"But I can't do these tricks. I don't know how," Mrs. Houdini protested.

Never Asked to Explain.

The magicians couldn't believe it. Hadn't she seen Houdini do them hundreds of times? If she didn't know how, it was time she learned. They would teach her. And they did. Three days were spent in tutoring and rehearsing. Mrs. Houdini appeared on the dinner program and gave a successful and amusing performance.

It was all right to tell these acquaintances how little she knew. But there is a convention that magicians' wives must never admit to their husbands that they do not understand and never ask a husband to explain his mysteries.

The Thurston Home.

Does some strange fabric of illusion surround the spacious Long Island home of the Howard Thurstons? Many years ago it was the home of another pair of famous magicians who were very happy there—the late Alexander Herrmann and his wife Adelaide, who still lives in New York.

Mrs. Thurston fancies that sometimes in the evening she sees "the great Herrmann" walking about under the trees—wide spreading Japanese willows, beeches, Chinese maples, silver spruces, cherry trees—and she imagines that he exercises a beneficent influence on all the strange acts that are invented there.

There is a studio on the grounds where tricks are tried out. Would a wife, who is also costumer and designer of stage sets, demand a detailed analysis of the conjurer's art that goes on there? O dear, no! There are things that are never done, words that are never spoken in a magician's family. Take all the mystery out of any relation in life and what have you got left?

Kept Her Popeyed.

Mrs. Thurston never goes to the studio while her husband and his Hindu helpers are working there. She admitted that much of their magic is a mystery to her for weeks at a stretch, that her husband has kept her popeyed ever and anon since she was seventeen. Now their daughter, Jane, is seventeen—a beautiful girl, a singer and dancer and enough of a magician to be preparing for her debut in her father's company next season.

"The mechanical tricks no longer puzzle me," Mrs. Thurston said, "but the psychological magic does. Mr. Thurston's 'suspended animation' mystery I do not understand at all. I don't delve into it much. After watching my husband all these years I do not know how to perform magic. He seems to take it for granted that I know what he knows."

Mystify the Magician.

Both Mrs. Houdini and Mrs. Thurston admit that while it is the magician's business to mystify an audience it is the wife's business to mystify the magician to the extent of convincing him that she understands his tricks whether she does or not.

They both believe that living loses nothing from being embellished by certain amusing byplay, and that any intelligent couple ought to be able to go on being interesting to each other if they will take half as much trouble about being mysterious after marriage as they did before.

Mrs. Houdini intimated that one might as well realize that one never knows what the other is hiding, and that perhaps it is as well not to know. She did not know until after her husband's death that several women, one a widow whom she considered a very dear friend, had been writing love letters to Houdini. She found them in a file, with carbon copies of her husband's replies. There was no word in these answers to make any wife less happy. Still, Mrs. Houdini wishes he hadn't kept that a secret from her. The letters were, of course, returned to the senders for safekeeping. But it could have been possible to have sent them back sooner!

Child Shipments from Hungary on the Increase

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—More than 30,000 destitute Hungarian children have been adopted by families in Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Switzerland and France.

The Hungarian government became sponsor for the movement to find homes abroad for offspring of the exhausted war generation after all public institutions had become overcrowded.

A national women's organization has taken active charge of this unusual "export" trade and is preparing to submit a plan to the United States government whereby Hungarian children could be adopted by American families in addition to the regular quota.

Finding a Treasure.

Speaking of bargains, I think I have had the best luck yet. One afternoon my father and I were out in the country driving. As we drove along, we suddenly experienced the sensation of a flat tire. Father stopped the car, and in order to get off the road pulled up into a rather hospitable looking farm yard, not far away.

As he started to change the tire, a nice little old woman came down to where we were and began to chat with us. Before long, she asked me if I wouldn't like to come into the house and rest. I accepted the invitation and as we entered I was delighted with what I saw. The place was veritably full of marvelous old furniture.

The woman, doubtless unaware of its value, tried to excuse its age and shabbiness. Among all the pieces, I was particularly taken with a gorgeous mahogany chest of drawers which was pushed back in a corner as though in the way. I finally ventured a question as to whether it would be possible for me to buy it.

The owner asked me what I ever could do with the old thing. I assured her I could use it all right, and she told me she thought that perhaps five dollars would be a lot for it.

I fairly shouted "sold," and dashed back to the car to get my father before something happened to shatter my good luck. J. L. T.

Fur for Ten Dollars.

One day as I happened to be walking through one of the department stores I noticed a beautiful fox fur neckpiece on a table.

I asked the saleslady how much it was and she said $10. Thinking it was quite cheap, I purchased it.

After a few years it needed to be cleaned, so I brought it to a furrier. He told me that that kind of fur was very rare and it was worth at least $100. C. O'C.

Money from Old Furniture.

While living in a small western town some years ago I bought two pieces of furniture from a neighbor who was moving away.

One was a neat looking white kitchen cabinet, in good condition, price one dollar. I gave it two coats of white enamel, which I had in the house, left from the bedroom woodwork. When I finished, the cabinet was a beauty. I used that cabinet five years and then sold all my household goods at a sale and it brought four and a half dollars.

The other piece of furniture was an old fashioned washstand. I paid twenty-five cents for it.

Having oak floor varnish on hand, I gave it a coat. I used it five years as a radio stand. At my sale it brought two dollars.

Fair enough! M. L. W.

Among Old Bottles.

I was called in by a housewife to buy and clear away a quantity of old bottles for which I paid a few cents. In sorting them I found a full bottle of pre-war whisky worth $6.

Evidently friend husband had been holding out on wifie. C. S. W.

English Radio Fans Anxious for Dialogue

Discussions by Noted Men in Demand.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A new use for radio was found here recently in connection with motor races between London and Holyhead. The difficult problem of keeping the watches of the official timekeepers synchronized during the races was solved by providing them with small portable radio sets, from which they received the official time signals from Greenwich.

Hardly a week goes by that some new step forward is not reported from the Baird laboratories where the television work is rapidly going forward. The latest is the abolition of the great banks of strong lights that formerly had to be used to illuminate the object of which an image was to be transmitted. Baird has not succeeded in transmitting images illuminated only by ordinary daylight—and that at a time when the sun was not shining.

India Likes Radio.

Eric Dunstan, general manager of the Indian Broadcasting company, has just returned to India after a four months visit to England, where he made arrangements for the relay of English programs in India. The Indian relays will begin with a fortnightly program picked up from 5SW, London, which will begin its broadcasting at a time suitable for Indian listeners. Mr. Dunstan reports a steadily increasing interest in radio in India, and says that the future of broadcasting in that country is assured of prosperity.

The radio conversation continues to interest England, and the probability is that the British fan will hear a good many programs in the near future. Radio journals, deploring the fact that conversation seems to have become a lost art in our present hectic society, suggest that it is up to the wireless to restore it to us. Instead of cut and dried talks, they say, let us have two noted men, or more, get together before a microphone and talk impromptu for half an hour on any subject that interests them.

Hamlet on the Air.

Shakespeare went on the radio in London recently when for the first time a more or less complete version of Hamlet was broadcast. As only an hour and a half was available for the performance, there were necessary cuts, but a reader linked up the breaks in the play, and the main scenes were presented in their entirety. Whether the ghost of Shakespeare listened in on the spectral performance or not no one has hazarded a guess, but if he did the sounds of his famous character's words coming from empty air probably succeeded in making "each individual hair to stand on end like quills upon the fretful porcupine."

The formation of a national chorus of 250 voices primarily for broadcasting purposes has been begun by the British Broadcasting association. The organization will be made up strictly of amateurs who are members of other choral societies of London and vicinity. It is to be heard not only over the radio, but also at the B. B. C. symphony concerts given at Queen's hall.

W-G-N to Present "Robin Hood, Inc." for the First Time

Radio next Thursday night will "Robin Hood, Inc.," a new musical comedy dealing with the merry outlaw and his times, will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, before it has been presented on the stage. The libretto is the work of Frederick H. Martens, and the music was written by Allan Benedict.

"Robin Hood, Inc.," is the next of the series of musical comedy presentations which listeners are hearing under the able direction of Harry W. Spingold, who began this radio series with revivals of the old La Salle theater successes by Hough and Adams. Some of the works heard had their original presentation back in the nineties, but "Robin Hood, Inc.," is brand new and as yet unproduced on the stage. The same cast that has taken part in the other Spingold revivals will be heard in "Robin Hood, Inc."

Musical Programs to Fill Open Dates in Baseball on W-G-N

The baseball schedules of the Cubs and Sox are such as to result in two open dates this week, and W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is planning to fill the time usually devoted to the baseball broadcasts with musical programs. The open dates are Wednesday and Thursday, and each afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock will find some well known W-G-N vocal performer at the microphone.

On Wednesday afternoon Mark Love, the popular basso, will be heard in groups of songs, and piano solos by Fern Scull are also planned. These artists will be heard in addition to the regular tea time instrumental quartet. On Thursday afternoon, Gida La Tille, soprano, will be the principal performer.

Lingeman Recital Scheduled on W-G-N for Tuesday Night

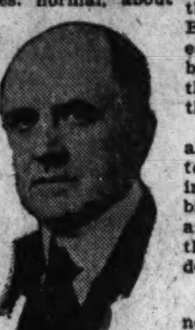
Headlining the week's offering of classical music from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is the half hour cello recital by Johann Lingeman, premier cellist of the station's concert orchestra. Mr. Lingeman will be heard Tuesday night between 9:30 and 10 o'clock. The product of European training, Mr. Lingeman has played with many of the old world's best known symphony orchestras as a soloist, in addition to numerous concert engagements in this country.

In his concert Tuesday night, which will be made up entirely of classic selections, Mr. Lingeman will use his Amati cello, valued at $30,000.

Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.

ARTICLE XX.



B. M. ROGERS.

Hands at bridge are divided into three general classes: normal, about 70 per cent; abnormal, 22 per cent; and freaks the other 8 per cent.

In these articles we have given the bidding conventions of normal hands and the minimum number of tricks the bidder must hold in order to make a bid, the number of tricks his partner is assumed to hold in order that the partner may win the bid, and the assumption that if it is a suit bid the kind of trumps credited to the player at the left of the bidder. Subsequently, both the support of the partner and further advances by the original bidder tell the definite story of the number of tricks held in the two hands. This is what is known as scientific bidding and announces [in the language of the game] exactly the minimum number of tricks there are in the two hands under the assumptions. The only variance therefrom arises in the possibility that the left hand opponent does not hold the trump cards accredited to him. We have also given the method of handling two of the three kinds of abnormal hands. The method of handling the 3 suitor will come later.

In this article we will take up the method of bidding "freak hands"—namely: hands that contain seven or more cards of one suit, as freaks of two 6 card suits follow the plan laid down for two 5 card suits.

A partnership game is a misnomer unless partners coöperate; in other words, tell each other those things which are permissible both in the bidding and in the play.

No one can satisfactorily coöperate who has not learned the conventions of bidding generally recognized, and concerning which there is no practical dissension among experts, or those having a standing as authors on the game. Writing a book on it does not of itself give the author a standing, nor make the author an authority, as that requires the support of experts of experience. No one particular person as a writer on bridge who has yet reached recognition has "the standard authority."

The articles published in this paper outline only such conventions as are in perfect harmony with the views of recognized experts and about which there is no controversy in the Auction Bridge magazine, a publication interested in bringing to the attention of bridge players any and all questions that make for the improvement of the greatest of card games.

Original bids only are conventionally recognized as definitely informatory as to the number of quick tricks in the bidder's hands, and if a suit bid, positive location of one of them and the minimum number of tricks that the hand will win at the specified declaration.

A bid of one in a suit says to partner this hand contains 4 tricks, 2 of them quick and 1 in the suit bid. A bid of 2 says this hand has 6 cards in the suit named headed by ace, king, queen, or practically 6 tricks, and a side card of reëntry. Any other suit bid of 2 is what is known as an auction crime. A bid of 3 says to partner this hand has not the quick tricks required for a bid of 1 or 2, and is practically worthless, except at the trump named, and with that trump I can take 6 tricks in my own hand. When a higher bid is made it means an additional trick in the bidder's hands.

There are two kinds of freak hands, one of which should never be shown in the first round of the bidding, and the other should have two or more quick tricks and should be bid on the first round to go game, with the assumption that partner will hold two tricks in support of the bid. This means that a preëmptive or shut out bid should be four in the major suit and five in the minor suit, and that the bidder of a major suit shall have eight tricks in his own hand, and the bidder of the minor suit must have nine tricks in his own hand.

A preëmptive bid does not necessarily prevent a partner from bidding, but he would be expected to keep still unless he had as good a hand with four honors, and he would be expected to support the preëmptive bid the first round if there was an overbid by opponents to show that he held at least the number of tricks assumed by his partner to be in his hands.

A bid of less than five in a minor suit is not preëmptive nor good judgment. If a minor suit is not worth a bid of five, a bid of three rather than four would be better, or a bid of one, if it has the requisites that bid.

It is occasionally true that a hand has neither the requisites conventionally for a bid of one, or two, or four or five, and yet holds a probability of a game with a suit trump and that has a bar to bidding no trump, as for example, void of a suit or holding a singleton and such a hand will take a bid of three. For example:

Spades—K, J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2.
Hearts—K, 9.
Diamonds—8.
Clubs—A, K, 2.
Or
Spades—A, 5, 4.
Hearts—A, Q, 8, 7, 5, 3, 2.
Diamonds—5.
Clubs—J, 8.

The first example above has not the conventional requirement for a bid of 1. The second has the requirement for such a bid, but a bid of 3 should be made in either case, as both are lacking the conventional holding required for a bid of 1 no trump.

It must be understood that in all that has been said above in regard to bidding, whether preëmptive or not, is for an original bid by a first or second hand. Original bids whether preëmptive or not made after two passes or three passes require the additional tricks that are recognized as necessary after the partner has passed.

A preëmptive bid of a freak hand would be an exhibition of poor judgment if the strength of the hand was distributed and the holding would permit a bid of 1 as a gradual advance in the bid might bring a double that could be defeated and would be worth more, as a shutout bid will not be doubled unless the doubler is sure of defeating it without any assistance from his partner, and that rarely happens. Raising the bid from 1 to 4 or 5 over opponents gives a greater opportunity for one of them to believe that what might have been a preëmptive bid can safely be doubled because it was not preëmptive.

Some excellent players do not use the preëmptive bid at all, and if they have not the requisites for a bid of 1 or 2, or 3, they wait until the second round to show the strength of their hand.

A preëmptive bid should be the first and last bid of the player that makes it, and any further action must depend wholly upon the partner who, if he advances the bid, will indicate thereby a greater holding than the original bidder assumed him to have. Last but not least, it is generally advisable to pass on the first round when holding a freak hand whose strength lies wholly in the suit and the suit is not established.

Allen McQuhae to Be Heard in Tennyson Lyric

Concert Falls on Eve of Poet's Birthday.

Allen McQuhae, tenor, and the Sittig trio will present the concert in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight, to be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The string trio will play two numbers, with seven well known songs by the Irish tenor.

The concert falling on the eve of Tennyson's birthday, Mr. McQuhae will feature in his program the poet's best known love lyric, "Come Into the Garden, Maud," considered by critics one of the great love songs of the English tongue.

The Poem, "Maud."

The tragic poem, "Maud," of which the song is a part, appeared in 1855.

The lyric is the climax to the story as the lovers were discovered in the garden and Maud's brother killed in the duel that followed.

The lover fled to Brittany, where he became insane following the sudden death of the 17 year old heroine.

Songs to Be Heard.

Balfe, a native of Dublin, started his career as a violinist. He later studied singing in Italy and in his twentieth year made his debut as Figaro at the Italian Opera, Paris. Ten years later he sang in his own opera, "Joan of Arc," at Drury Lane theater, London, where, at 15, he had played the violin in the orchestra. He has written many operas.

McQuhae's program includes "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," "The Next Market Day," "Little Boy Blue," "Where My Caravan Has Rested," "Twilight Shadows Are Falling," and "I Heard You Singing." The trio will play "Swanee River" and Beethoven's minuet in G.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE biggest show on earth! Admission only three pins! Radio entertainment is as free as rain water. All you need to buy is something to catch it in. The good folk hold out their bushel basket radio horns and collect the manna from the heavens.

The broadcasters are the butter-and-egg men by appointment to his majesty, the American fan. They put the finest talent of the world at the beck and call of the public and never pass the hat.

Yet they have their sordidly materialistic moments. About eight times a day they sit down and ask, "Who's going to pay for it?"

As in the case of the weather and Charlie Dawes' pipe, everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything.

Of course, after five years of broadcasting gratis, it's rather late to suggest that Santa Claus operate on a strictly cash basis. The broadcasters should have laid down a box office plan before they rushed pell-mell into their philanthropies.

MANY a pretty theory has been teed up for consideration, and by and large they have all been sliced into the rough. Some have popped the question of licensing radio listeners, the proceeds to go to the broadcasters. Former Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has said of this:

LADEES AN' GEN'MEN THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH!
RADIO ADMISSION FREE

"This country would never stand for licensing or taxing radio listeners. That idea works only when one company has a monopoly and all the revenue so derived goes into one pool. And we don't like monopoly. And, then, how are you going to have a police force snooping around for illicit aerials and searching people's homes?"

Of a proposed tax on radio equipment, Mr. Hoover stated:

"[illegible] go into the theaters and pay admission, and that solves the problem right there for the stage and concert hall; but it is obvious that there is no such way of getting the radio audience to pay for what it gets. So you've got to approach that some other way—leaving out the license tax scheme.

"I've heard only one very feasible suggestion. That is to fix a certain tax—say two per cent, for instance—on the sale of radio equipment. . . . You could provide enough that way to pay for daily programs of the best skill and talent throughout the year."

ONE STATION, WHB of Kansas City, inaugurated a plan of selling annual "box seats" to its "invisible theater," with printed programs and life size theater tickets being sent to all who contributed to the visible box office, entitling them to a specified seat. There were many voluntary contributions, but the stunt was abandoned after a while.

So, after all's said and little's done, we find the broadcasters reverting to the basic formula of program broadcasting—the brandishing of indirect advertising. The good will, the "institutional publicity," and the trademark advertising that are derived from sandwiching the name of a product or an institution in between program offerings warrant the broadcasting expenditures, they say.

The majority of the broadcasting stations advertise only one thing, the firm name of the organizations operating them, and this is construed not so much as advertising as it is an identification of the station the listener is hearing. Some stations maintain themselves as agencies for the advertising of others' trade names, selling time on the air as newspaper advertising space is sold. The advertisers may be charged from $75 to $1,000 an hour to present their entertainers on the air, the rates varying with the time of day and the extent of the territory the station covers.

THE ADVERTISER

A MOTLEY family is engaged in the business of broadcasting as an indirect advertising medium—radio manufacturers, theaters, newspapers, department stores, universities, state experimental stations, churches, fraternal socities, railroads, and hotels.

It's mild advertising and innocuous propaganda that are sustaining the radio stations and providing the biggest show on earth free of charge. It will remain mild and innocuous, because whenever it starts to run amuck the audiences will attend to the matter themselves.

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

TO most people B. A. means Bachelor of Arts; A. B., little more than the beginning of the alphabet. In nautical language, however, A. B. means able seaman—a man who can tie a bowline, chip paint, splice wire cable, or steer a ship. B. A. to A. B.—rather a radical transformation this, to be effected as casually as many college men do effect it every summer.

But effect it many a B. A. does, and that is why, if you are one of the hundreds of thousands of Americans who make an annual pilgrimage to Europe, you may find your stewards, your brass polishers, or the bus boys who make themselves generally useful aboard your ship have been recruited from the ranks of new graduates of the most distinguished colleges in the land.

With commencement week comes the urge to launch out into the world of adventure and romance. Harassed by professors, surfeited with things academic, the poor B. A. feels that he would "sell his tired soul for the bucking beam sea roll of a black Bilboa tramp." But, unfortunately, since many first mates won't have them aboard at any price, the market for tired undergraduate souls is not always good.

Can't Be Fired at Sea.

Mates know that although most of the boys who ship before the mast are keen to learn and willing to work, they are woefully green, and that a green man can wreck the works even more thoroughly afloat than ashore. Then, too, you can fire a man ashore, but what can you do at sea? Give him a life preserver and say, "Here, when we cross the equator you're through?" Hardly. Having signed a man on in New York, let us say, you must bring him back to New York. If you fire him in a foreign port the government will speak to you about it.

But your undergrad stands in small awe of first mates. He finds that a fraternity brother has a third cousin. Regarded as an isolated fact, this is neither significant nor remarkable. Fraternity brothers not infrequently have third cousins. This particular third cousin, however, can obtain an introduction to a man—not merely an ordinary man, but one who can write a letter to a friend. This fact is also not remarkable. Many men have friends to whom they can write letters.

James Harrington, aged 82, wishes Al Smith well in his campaign for the presidency and he's going to send the Democratic nominee this big, nickel plated horseshoe. Mr. Harrington, who lives at 657 Briar place, has been shoeing horses in Chicago for the last sixty-five years. In fact, a year ago at the state convention in Elgin he was honored as being the oldest active horseshoer in the state. The apron worn by Mr. Harrington is one which he bought from the blacksmiths' union forty-five years ago.

Commissioner of Public Works Richard W. Wolfe, our local cultural uplift influence in poetry, was quite amused at the excitement that swept the north side anent the discovery of a street with perfectly good paving. The street, Robbins terrace, is privately owned, and therefore Mr. Wolfe could not be held responsible for its condition. Ha! Ha!

To fellow villagers who find it a wee bit sultry to adventure their souls among the masterpieces of the Art institute these August days, ye ed prescribes a Skokie sunset. Drive west in Wilmette in Lake street, past Ridge road of storied Indian legend, and on to Hibbard road. Thence north to Willow road, in Winnetka, or as far as Elm street, if one so wishes. But, once in Hibbard road, drive slowly. Better yet, park your car alongside some meadow, sweet now with the breath of clover, and let your jaded city eyes focus upon the horizon. The western sky is nature's canvas, and as the great golden orb sinks slowly behind the distant treetops she splashes from her cosmic paint pot such colors as no mortal hand can ever hope to compass. A Skokie sunset is the only earthly thing your humble correspondent has ever encountered that is comparable in beauty to the Twenty-third Psalm.

JUDGE DANIEL P. TRUDE.

DAN was convalescing from his first attack of Blackstone's Commentaries when the "I Knew Him When" club camera surprised him in the foregoing still life study. Even so, note the judicial poise and dignity.

As the keen minded reader may have suspected, Dan was not yet on the bench. He had not left the high chair, wherein, family tradition hath it, his first childish utterance was lisped, viz: "Oyez oyez, the honorable meal of the Trude family is now in session."

Well, Dan early gave promise of his procilivities for public office. He started in running, acquiring his C on the track team of the University of Chicago, where he won both the low hurdles and the law hurdles. He's been on our municipal bench so long now we regard him as a perennial.

Son of Alfred Samuel Trude, nephew of former Judge George A. Trude, second cousin of Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude. Really, as we were saying, is it any wonder our legal guild invariably refers to Dan's family as tried and Trude?

Can You Name Twin Words in This New Quiz?

Here's Chance to Test Skill at Homonyms.

Did you ever hear of homonym? Yes, it is a distant cousin of a synonym. Homonyms are words which have the same sound, but are spelled differently and have different meanings—"ball" and "bawl," for example.

In the quiz that follows, pairs of homonyms are suggested by definitions or synonyms such as are used in cross word puzzles.

Credit yourself with 2 points for each set guessed correctly. Then a score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and 100 means that you are quite an etymologist!

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table

Neighborhood Nuisance Found to Be Reporter.

By Helen Dare

THE kazoo turned the trick for her—the kazoo that I left on the edge of the table where one usually leaves a tip. She followed me half way down the block to return it.

It had been a lean day for politeness until then. Not that any one had been really rude. That takes too much of an effort. They had been polite enough—but only enough. Here I had found politeness plus.

I made my way to a table in the tea room at 1450 Hyde Park boulevard. A cheery good afternoon directed my glance to the waitress. She was slim and pretty, her face was young and pleasant looking, although her hair was turning gray.

As I pondered long over the menu she stood patiently beside me, with no trace of irritation even in a movement. I finally gave my order and then, when she was almost to the kitchen, called her back and changed it.

* *

Recovering the Kazoo.

"Now, you want the tea ball left out," she said, repeating my instructions, "and you don't want any extra dressing on the salad. Is that right?"

I nodded and she went out, only to be called back by a rough masculine voice in the hallway. It came from a soiled looking individual, with shirt sleeves rolled up and hat awry—obviously not a customer.

"Is Mrs. Griffiths here?" he grunted.

"Why, no," she said. "I'm sorry. Can I do something for you?"

"Naw, I gotta see Mrs. Griffiths."

"Well, I'll find out when she'll be back," and she disappeared again, returning to tell him he might find the lady in at 5 o'clock.

She brought in my order, correct in all its specifications, and exchanged pleasantries with me over the weather. Then she retired to the back of the room to type menus for the evening

OUR esteemed fellow townsman and Standard Oil factotum, Frank Surdukowski, had the misfortune to be kicked in the eye by a cow last month, and the organ is still black and blue as we go to press. Mr. Surdukowski ever since has been subjected to base calumnies and contumelies. Aspersions of an alibi have even been broadcast, and frequently, on social occasions, when Frank has arisen to explicate further as to the circumstances, he has been greeted with a loud raspberry. Tsk! Tsk! What is this country coming to? Is there to be no liberty of person whatsoever? A man is certainly entitled to an honest shiner honestly arrived at, and we congratulate Frank that it was a cow and not a mule.

In addition, there will be 4,000 free balloons.

GAGE PARK is agog, as we say, over the design of H. D. Wells of 7115 South Hoyne avenue to perfect a man-carrying glider. As regards the folks and flivs in history, John J. Wright of 2124 West 103d street claims a record. He avouches he has the oldest flivver in Chicago, if not in the U. S. A., excluding, of course, Mr. Ford's own collections. It is of the vintage of 1903, some decades before Henry made a lady out of Lizzie. It is one of the original two cylinder type. Somewhat battered, altogether squeaky, decidedly rusty—but the engine chugs on as merrily as Mr. Tennyson's brook. It can do all of 18 miles an hour. Mr. Wright discovered it in a barn near Memphis, Tenn., and promptly acquired it. It antedates the model T by five years. Which reminds ye ed there must be some rare specimens of the latter model rattling over what we laughingly called our pavements. What appears to be the oldest four cylinder flivver in these parts is owned by a frat house at Northwestern university, but you never can tell.

Of late a queer fishy taste in lake water has been detected by the discriminating palates of Lake Foresters. Superintendent John C. McNicol of that suburb's water department, after due research, explains that it is due to the little plant organism known as algae, and that there is nothing to worry about. Scientists, says Superintendent McNicol, declare that it is the algae that give to fish the fishy aura or personality, and that without the algae fish would not taste like fish at all. So chemically pure, in fact, is the algae that one may safely use the water it inhabits in synthetic gin without poisoning the water.

South Chicago residents are complaining that the speed of the interurban busses through the city's streets constitute a menace. They frequently travel 40 miles an hour, it is alleged. Two drivers were arrested last week. They were fined $25 and costs, but later were discharged. One citizen writes that "to observe one of these thundering busses with open cut out, traveling through heavy boulevard traffic at 25 to 40 miles an hour, gives one a sobering and creepy sensation. It is an increasing menace, borne out by the daily casualties listed in the press."

You see the Rocky mountains and the

And all the scenic glory of that western land.

Figaro McGee, well known historian of the drama, now summering in our midst, says he is enjoying himself immensely. "I admire you westerners," he said, "and particularly your great, pulsing city, with its indomitable 'I Will' spirit. I wonder if you appreciate the bigness and vastness of it all. Do you know that the spring moving peak in Chicago this year reached a total of 84,028 families; that you have 183 concerns wholesaling lumber planing mill products; that 33 department stores sold $18,489,200 worth of men's and boys' clothing, this figure representing more than 20 per cent of the entire retail sales of men's and boys' clothing in Chicago in 1926? Reformers in Italy Frown on Hollywood

BERGAMO, Italy.—(AP)—The prefect of Bergamo has climaxed his reform campaign with an order banning publications featuring pictures of lightly draped women.

The review Excelsior, printed in Milan, was mentioned specifically and 'its sale or diffusion" forbidden throughout the district. The same severe treatment is promised for any other publications which "ape what is done in a certain country to the north," as one of the clerical papers puts it.

Hollywood is receiving a good share of the blame in this part of Italy. Measures are being considered to dam the flood of pictures of film actresses sent from the United States by Hollywood press agents.

The complaint has been made that if the Italian reform movement continues to spread the tabloids will have nothing to print but pictures of Premier Mussolini on horseback.

Modern Crook Seeks Refuge With New Nose

Underworld Now Takes Up Plastic Surgery.

THE underworld has at last taken up plastic surgery. The old-time disguises so generously used in melodrama and detective story, as well as in real life, following the believing heyday of Gaboriau, long ago proved a sham and a delusion. Modern sleuths were not to be deceived by copiously dyed hair, crow's wing mustaches and walnut stained skin, even when coupled with tramp's rags or society attire, whichever the fugitive had scarcely ever worn before. Indeed, this bizarre camouflage was much more liable to attract than to repel police inquisition—and fingerprints did the rest.

When the late Morgan Robertson wrote years ago his famous tale about the betrayed and ruined husband who went to a mysterious surgeon, and over a period of years had his face slowly and with great suffering changed so completely that he was able to return to his old home town without being recognized, scores of men with pasts to bury must have been startled into renewed hope.

And as they read of the face changer's studied revenge, capped by final admission of his true identity, they must have sighed with despair. If only such things could be done in real life!

Why Not the Bandit?

Today, the progress of plastic surgery, seemingly, has revived this dream in the underworld. If Jack Dempsey could have his nose straightened and Fanny Brice could follow suit, to mention two well known beneficiaries of the newest surgical science—why couldn't the bank bandit and the train robber, their loot safely cached, have their faces changed, the insides of their fingers burned to obliterate fingerprints, and perhaps take on a little weight and manners, and live happily and luxuriously ever after?

Noted surgeons, like Dr. J. Eastman Sheehan, who has performed wonders in face surgery, such as eradication of cancer scars and burns, who has remade eye sockets, chins, noses, and even foreheads, are inclined to believe that man, like the leopard, cannot change his spots. Even though he obtained a new and totally different face, there would still be such persistent "spots" as his habits of speech, thought and mind, preferences in clothing, climates and companions in the opinion of these savants. Police hold much the same view.

Willie Jackson's Case.

But the fact remains that plastic surgery daily makes new strides toward perfect and easeful remodeling of the human face. And it is well established that present-day criminals—at least the leaders—keep as closely in touch with scientific discoveries that may aid their depredations as does the great doctor with those that may help his patients.

The late Willie Jackson was a Chicago bandit, holdup man and gangster, and from the viewpoint of his own kind he was a good one. He had a long record of arrests and surprisingly few convictions. He was a man of medium height, who looked about thirty pounds overweight. His complexion was white as the belly of a fish, only not so clean; and a gangster fist or two had smashed down flat the bridge of his nose. And he was, as you may guess, no kind of Beau Brummell.

On the morning of Feb. 22, this year, Willie Jackson slouched into Grand Trunk train No. 10 at the Chicago terminal and sank down in a seat. He looked at no one, as a crook is apt to do in such cases, and no one looked long at him. He had a ticket for St. Mary's cemetery, a flag or signal stop a few miles from Evergreen Park, a regular station stop. At his request the conductor pulled the air cord and let him off at the cemetery.

Draws a "Gat."

For three successive days Willie made this same trip, until the conductor probably thought he had a job or something about the cemetery. But on the third day, as Willie stepped off the train, he drew a good sized "gat," and ordered the conductor and passengers to stay still in the car on pain of death. He stood there while six pals covered the engineer and fireman, blasted open a mail car door, beat and tied the clerks and made off with two bank transfer bags containing $133,000 designed to pay workers in Evergreen Park industries that night.

Has Face Changed.

Expert sleuthing turned up the fact that the robbery was planned for a certain morning, and the additional but false information that it was to be put on at a station called Harvey rather than at St. Mary's. While the bandits worked at the cemetery, the police waited patiently at Harvey. But you may imagine they lost no time in rounding up "Limpy" and his pals. In three days, they had them all—all save Willie Jackson and a certain Vergil Litzinger; they had recovered, too, all the money except $47,000 which Willie and Vergil had, in one way or another, gotten away with.

What means Vergil employed to keep out of police clutches nobody knows to this day. Perhaps he, too, resorted to plastic surgery. But Willie Jackson came straight to New York city and had his face changed. He had his nose reformed and straightened. He grew a mustache, and had his black hair permanently curled; then he had both hair and mustache dyed auburn. Likewise, he had himself tanned well with ultra violet rays. He reduced his weight nearly forty pounds. This done, he bought himself a complete wardrobe of clothes such as the well dressed young man wears, and a sporty roadster. Then he retired to the quiet little town of Olean, N. Y., where he posed, successfully, as an interior decorator come to the quiet place to work out new designs and ornaments for the New York trade.

Old Life Calls.

Well provided with cash, Willie Jackson might, quite reasonably, have lived out his days completely separated, so far as this earth goes, from the consequences of his past. But somehow the old life called.

Some weeks after he left Olean, Willie Jackson was found dead, shot neatly behind the left ear, in the rear of one of his old Chicago haunts.

Even as he lay dead, the police did not know him. Lieut. Louis Klatzco, student of gangsters, who knew the unregenerate Willie well, looked at the sprawling body and shrugged without recognition. A New York bootlegger who tried to cut in on Chicago's beer klans, was his guess. And it was only through the usual routine fingerprint search that Willie Jackson's real identity was disclosed.

CHEST MADE IN 1492

BACK in 1490 the King of Hanover ordered one Peter Gessner to make this chest. Peter put in two years at the task and died before his labors were finished. Eventually the chest fell into the hands of relatives of Alfred Eusepke. Mr. Eusepke, shown standing by the interesting antique, came to Chicago with his family a year ago, bringing the heirloom with him. Mr. Eusepke lives at 546 West 37th street.

POLICING THE POSTS

THEY like things spic and span at Harrison street and Cicero avenue, so they're having the street light posts painted up for the summer. The Metropolitan camera found Messrs. F. Grot of 2557 South 61st avenue and Max Strutz of 2931 Keating street busy at the post-painting job.

Titles Given Back by Czech Republic

PRAGUE.—(AP)—Czecho-Slovakia, which since its creation as an independent republic in 1918, forbade the assumption of titles to nobility or the receiving or wearing by its citizens of foreign decorations, has now revived the custom of other European countries of rewarding those who have rendered service to the state. Czech citizens may hereafter not only receive foreign decorations but may assume any titles they may have had before the war.

Mother Uses Baby to Hide Smuggling

CONSTANTINOPLE—(AP)—An incident unique in the annals of Turkish smugglers occurred recently at the customs house here when a Turkish woman arriving from abroad attempted to smuggle in a quantity of contraband tobacco tightly packed around the body of her four month old baby.

When the customs officials began unwinding the suspiciously bulging swathes of material which Moslem tradition binds round the legs and arms of infants, the mother took to her heels, abandoning baby and tobacco.

France Draws Lion's Share of Tourist Trade

Paris Popular in Spite of Living Costs.

PARIS.—(AP)—France drew the lion's share of the world's tourist business this summer despite higher living cost and new taxes. Steamship companies report a small decrease in the total volume of travel from the United States. The annual invasion was late in starting and the peak is already past. All indications point to an early ebb tide of homeward bound tourists, many of whom express a wish to be in the United States when the fur begins to fly during the presidential campaigns.

Busy Until November.

Passage west is hard to obtain during August and September whereas accomodations during October are comparatively plentiful. Last year and the year before the rush did not subside until November.

Tourist business in the provinces along the seacoasts and in the mountain districts is better than in 1927, though not so good as the boomtimes of 1926.

Paris is getting to be an old story to many trans-Atlantic visitors. The number of those who have been here before is proportionately greater each year. They stop for a few days of theater-going and shopping. The "sights" of the city are no longer necessary for them.

All Come to Paris.

But they all come to Paris, or mostly all of them. Perhaps only half of those who cross the Atlantic each summer see London.

The proportion who get to Berlin and Rome and further afield is even less. But most of them still see Paris, coming and going

The hotels and tourist agencies say they remain here fewer days now than they used to. And the merchants complain that they buy less.

Finding a Treasure.

Speaking of bargains, I think I have had the best luck yet. One afternoon my father and I were out in the country driving. As we drove along, we suddenly experienced the sensation of a flat tire. Father stopped the car, and in order to get off the road pulled up into a rather hospitable looking farm yard, not far away.

As he started to change the tire, a nice little old woman came down to where we were and began to chat with us. Before long, she asked me if I wouldn't like to come into the house and rest. I accepted the invitation and as we entered I was delighted with what I saw. The place was veritably full of marvelous old furniture.

The woman, doubtless unaware of its value, tried to excuse its age and shabbiness. Among all the pieces, I was particularly taken with a gorgeous mahogany chest of drawers which was pushed back in a corner as though in the way. I finally ventured a question as to whether it would be possible for me to buy it.

The owner asked me what I ever could do with the old thing. I assured her I could use it all right, and she told me she thought that perhaps five dollars would be a lot for it.

I fairly shouted "sold," and dashed back to the car to get my father before something happened to shatter my good luck. J. L. T.

Fur for Ten Dollars.

One day as I happened to be walking through one of the department stores I noticed a beautiful fox fur neckpiece on a table.

I asked the saleslady how much it was and she said $10. Thinking it was quite cheap, I purchased it.

After a few years it needed to be cleaned, so I brought it to a furrier. He told me that that kind of fur was very rare and it was worth at least $100. C. O'C.

Among Old Bottles.

I was called in by a housewife to buy and clear away a quantity of old bottles for which I paid a few cents. In sorting them I found a full bottle of pre-war whisky worth $6.

Evidently friend husband had been holding out on wifie. C. S. W.

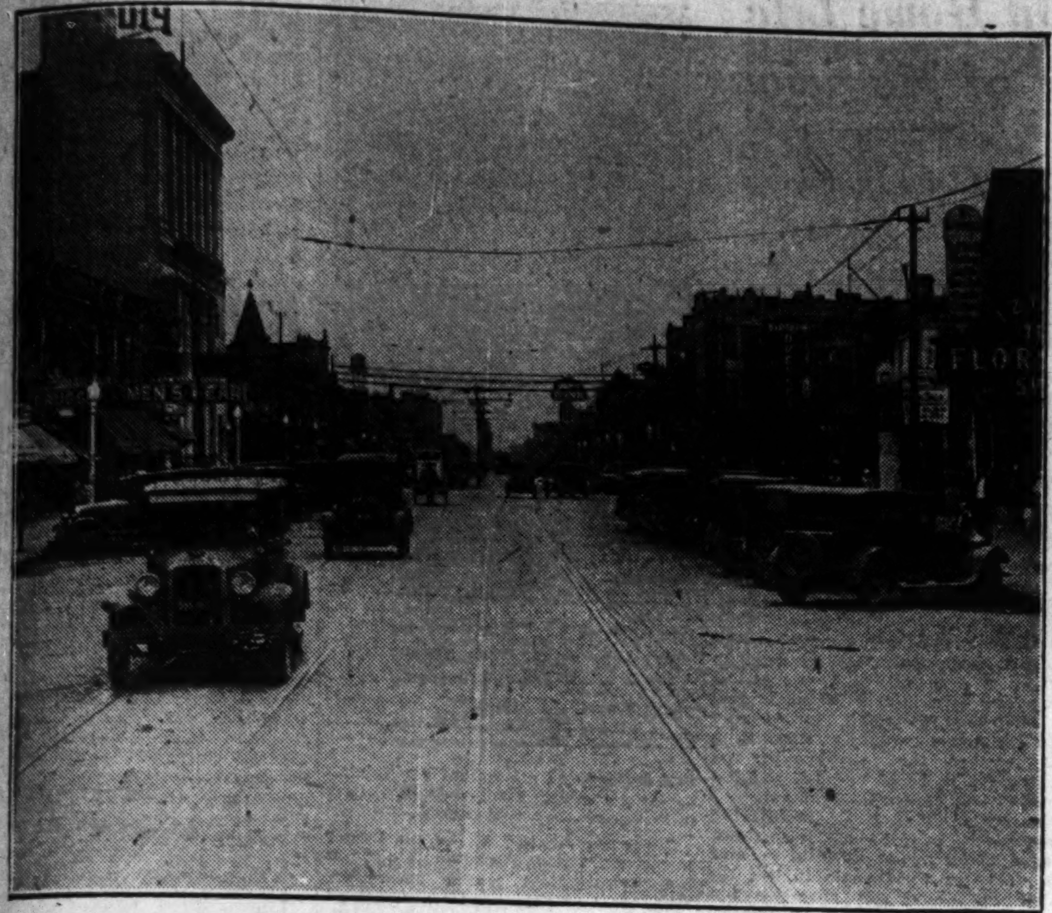
BUSY BUSINESS THOROUGHFARE



CHICAGO is dotted with bustling, growing, outlying business sections, and this is one of them. In this instance the camera man was looking east on North avenue at Keystone avenue. The amount of business being transacted on that particular day may be judged by the number of autos parked in front of the shops and stores. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

IN SCENIC CHICAGO

HER BOWER OF ROSES

Al Unearths a New Language

Claims to Have Heard Twentieth Lingo Spoken in Our Midst

By Snowshoe Al.

THE author was recently informed by a gentleman of even less importance than himself that only nineteen foreign languages are spoken in these United States. Said author disagrees with other unimportant gentleman and submits the following mess of curious lingo to support his own personal belief that twenty foreign languages are spoken in our midst. He claims to have overheard this queer collection of words and sounds on a college campus, but you can believe that or not:

QUESTION: "So yuh grabbed yourself a new roommate, huh? Hoozee?"

ANSWER: "O, ain'tcha heard? It's Freddie, the Dormitory Nomad—I had a helluva time yankin' him loose from that Gypsy Camp, because he sure soaks up a flock o' comedy among them Cliff Dwellers—it took me t'ree hours tuh converse him into migratin' over tuh my landlady's wigwam an' mixin' his laundry wit' mine. Yuh know, he comes from my home town. Me an' him gits along swell!"

* *

Slings Merry Mucilage.

QUESTION: "Yeh? What breed o' Dodo is he?"

ANSWER: "Smoking Bow-wow, what a panic that bird hatched out to become! He's one o' them guys what wouldn't change their garters often even if they did wear 'em around their tonsils. Sa-a-y, that geezer's gonna be a winning number in the business world some day, accept it from me! He's got a brain like a domino—the double blank. I wouldn't fool yuh—yuh could blindfold him an' git the photographers ready an' stand by wit' an open checkbook—an' still he'd pick the wrong cigaret! Har, har! I wish he'd git over the idea that a hippodrome is a hippopotamus' feminine acquaintance. Even so, me an' him gits along swell."

QUESTION: "Izzee a good worker?"

ANSWER: "O, curious person, you convulse me! Freddie wouldn't stroll a block for a caravan! He allus evaporates right after supper an' doesn't float through our door again till the zero hour, an' he ain't been to no library, neither. When he returns he's so wobbly that he can hardly drop his anchor, an' he smells like a collision between a pair of beer trucks. Baby, what a whale of a difference just a few scents make! Sa-a-y, the hardest work that bimbo does is ride the Frosh. O, how that hombre loves tuh sink his spurs into the Green Caps! What a Campus Cossack he turned out to become! Still, me an' him gits along swell!"

QUESTION: "Duzzee go in heavy for Alcoholic Exercise?"

ANSWER: "O, duzzee! That youth can sling Merry Mucilage past his Adam's apple so fast that his tonsils never git a chance to dodge! Every bartender in America grinned when our hero was born. Every other baby in our town cried for the moon but this bozo cried for hip pockets in his rubber panties. Sa-a-y, he won't learn to play Bridge because the word reminds him of water!"

Crashed for the Blond.

QUESTION: "Izzee well supplied wit' bucks?"

ANSWER: "Yeh, I fear so—he's only two weeks behind wit' his share o' the room rent—I'm SIX. Yeh, he's fairly loose wit' his wampum."

QUESTION: "Duzzee gallop out much wit' the Sorority Inmates?"

ANSWER: "Naw, he steers clear o' them Minnehahas! He used tuh trade strangle-holds wit' one o' them Elves but she squeezed too hard one night an' rattled a bone in his neck. Har, har, an' tears of unrestrained mirth! 'Listen, Spider,' says him tuh her, 'crawl back into your web an' park there, because this fly ain't wrestlin' you no more until some o' your brute strength deserts yuh!' He meant it, too—he still passes The Elves' Dugouts on the dead gallop! But, if you're asking me—which would be unbelievable—I think he's skidded outa the frying utensil into the hot embers, because I hear he just crashed loudly for the wicked Blond which shuffles the crockery in Smith's Food Foundry downtown. Har, har!"

QUESTION: "Yeh? What's so funny about that?"

ANSWER: "O, me! O, my! O, us! You ain't heard somethin' yet! That Filly is just full of bright sayings! 'Aha,' she says tuh me, 'so you is a college student, huh? Well, why don'tcha git outa the rut?' 'I don't connect with your meaning,' says him tuh she. 'That's just one of your habits,' says her tuh him, 'you are allus fumbling good advice. However, yuh got the right idea by snugglin' up tuh me, because I'm a wow when it comes tuh guiding uncertain little footsteps towards Success. I'll make somethin' outa yuh yet!' Har, har! I'll say she will! He'll soon be using nothin' but bananas an' peanuts for stomach fuel. Yuh can expect tuh see him breezin' across the campus some mornin' wit' a cocoanut under each elbow. I allus kids him about he, but he never gets real sore. Yeh, me an' him gits along swell!"

The Bunion Battle.

QUESTION: "Didja know that the Math prof bawled him out yesterday mornin' for coming late to class?"

ANSWER: "I ain't capable of registering Incredulity! He was only ahead of time once in his life. Har, har! He sure caused lots o' wear an' tear on the neighborhood calendars on that occasion! Aw, that Math prof! Sa-a-y, I'll sell yuh my share o' that simp for a dime an' I won't even question the coin's genuineness! Cheat me if yuh want—make me an offer!"

QUESTION: "You ain't slopping over wit' affection for him, huh?"

ANSWER: "O, superfluous conversation! O, wanton waste of words! O, hell! Believe it or not, but they got the idea for mechanical refrigeraprof's noble features. One of his early lectures inspired some inventor, an' it resulted in the Hot Blast Furnace. tion by just gazing upon the Math Anyhow, that's my narrative an' I'm glued to it."

QUESTION: "Yuh gonna be at the Bunion Battle tonight?"

ANSWER: "Well, I hope tuh inform yuh in the affirmative! I wouldn't miss hearing that orchestra on a bet. O, person, can't that outfit exhale Fahrenheit, though?"

* *

Hauling Edna.

QUESTION: "Yuh draggin' any extra feet wit' yuh?"

ANSWER: "I ain't saying 'no.' I'm hauling Edna. Yuh want the fourth Clinch wit' her? I've already signed up to fight the first t'ree rounds. Yeh? All right, I'll asker. Well, s'long."

QUESTION: "Where yuh goin' now?"

ANSWER: "Back tuh my igloo tuh chew the fabric wit' Freddie. He's probably gonna show up this P. M. wit' his Crockery Smasher. If he does I'll sling razz at him forever—he won't git sore—me an' him gits along swell! Adios!"

QUESTION: "Whoa! Cease motion! Don't be in such a haste to disappear beyond the horizon yet, because I wouldst ask thee a couple vital questions. Yea, two questions I wouldst fling at thee. Wouldst hear them?"

ANSWER: "Let it happen! Toss 'em one at a time—don't crowd my intellect. What's the first question?"

* *

Headed for Tepee.

QUESTION: "Lend me ten berries?"

ANSWER: "Me? You flatterer! Turn me upside down an' shake me, an' I'll give yuh 80 per cent of anything you find. If you find anything the first time, I'll pay yuh a salary to shake me from now on. The tailor what put pockets in this pair of pants was a humorist, doggone him! I'm as free from shekels as a butterfly is from teeth. I git money from home about as often as One-Eyed Connelly buys a ticket from the scalpers. That's that! Now, what's the other question?"

QUESTION: "Lend me five berries?"

ANSWER: "Listen, Dumber Than Necessary, are yuh sure yuh don't want tuh ask me three questions? No? Yes?"

QUESTION: "Gimme a buck, willya? Lend me a frogskin?"

ANSWER: "That's more like it! Here's 10 cents—I'll slip yuh the other 90 tonight."

QUESTION: "Well, see that yuh don't forget! I hate like hell tuh have anybody owe me money! Gimme a cigaret, willya?"

ANSWER: "Ain't got none. Don't forget tuh gimme back my dollar heap much pronto. S'long. I'm headed for my tepee. If I don't see yuh tonight I'll look for yuh in the Comic Section next Sunday."

PROUD OF RARE PLANT

THE St. Joseph lily belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Kasper, 7555 South Shore drive, blooms only once every seven years, and the fact that it is just now in blossom makes it a source of interest to florists throughout the city. The bulb from which the plant is an offspring came from Germany twenty-eight years ago. According to legend, a miracle happened whenever the rare plant, ordinarily unattractive, bursts into bloom. Palatial Air Liners Ready for Sea Trip

England Hopes to Be First to Cross Ocean.

LONDON.—(AP)—Great Britain has thrown her last reserves of science into the fight to wrest from Germany the honor of launching the first trans-Atlantic air liner.

Two giants of the air, the British R-100 now being built at Howden and the German LZ-127 nearing completion at Friedrichshafen, will make their first flights soon. The one finished first will be recorded in history as making the first commercial flight over the Atlantic.

The Germans are now in the lead. Their Zeppelin is expected to be in the air before the middle of August, whereas it will be toward the end of September before the British are ready to test the R-100. Construction difficulties, the failure of materials to arrive and other factors may alter this prospect.

* *

Cost Millions.

For many months in the giant sheds at Howden and Friedrichshafen hundreds of workmen have been climbing like spiders over the largest metal sausages in the world.

Each of the new dirigibles is bulkier than an ocean liner. The metal skeleton is covered with cotton fabric which has been treated with aluminum paint. Each has cost millions of dollars to construct. When completed, as they hope to be, within a month or two, the two airships, each on its own route, will inaugurate a line of commercial air travel across the Atlantic. The R-100 expects to make a direct crossing from Cardington, England, to New York, and the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen to the Azores and then to New York.

Imagine an airship comprising three decks, the two upper decks for the passengers, and the lower for the crew. Imagine a dining room capable of holding 50 persons, floor on which the entire passenger list can dance, promenade decks, comfortable cabins, all in an airship.

* *

World's Greatest On Way.

Each airship is capable of carrying a passenger list of 100 and a crew of 40, but the Germans plan to carry only 20 passengers and concentrate on mail and valuable cargo.

Meanwhile in the background looms up the tremendous shape of what will be the greatest airship in the world, the R-101, which is building at Cardington, England. It will not be ready until next year, and will then be placed in use on a route to India.

The R-101 embodies a number of new structural ideas, among them being the use of steel in the framework, instead of duralumin, steel being four times stronger. The R-101 will carry 25 tons of fuel.

UNDER HIS LEMON TREE

JOHN J. WOLNEWICZ, 2453 Montrose avenue, enjoys tropical vegetation without leaving Chicago. In his florist shop he has several lemon trees, one of which, as you will note, is tall enough for him to stand beneath. It appears that before long the crop will be ready for John to pick. He hasn't decided whether to turn the fruit into pie or lemonade.

High Cost of Brides Stirs Syrian Youths

DAMASCUS, Syria.—(AP)—The high price of brides is beginning to worry young and marriageable men in the east.

A massmeeting held here recently elected a committee to seek a modification of the custom requiring a man who would marry to pay over a handsome sum of money to the father of the girl of his choice. The western custom is more to the liking of the eastern swain.

The men working for the reform say that they are not impelled by selfish motives, but are interested in the welfare of the state; marriages they say are on the decrease owing to the greed of parents who have been raising prices in the marriage markets.

HER CUP OF SORROW.

"Did she have on full dress?"

"O, yes, and running over."

Girls in Japan Win Romance and Free Baths

Victory Comes to Workers in Textile Factory.

TOKIO.—(AP)—A strike of working girls in a large Japanese textile factory won a momentous victory including "freedom of marriage" and free baths every day.

The right of girl employes to marry has long been a bone of contention between workers and manufacturers. The strike came about when the owners of the Tokio Muslin company attempted to enforce to the letter their rule against romance.

The custom of enforcing the antimarriage rule has been in vogue for many years, the argument of the employers being that most of the girl workers are too young to marry and, if they do so, their value to factory work is greatly depreciated.

The girl employés of the muslin company, besides their insistence on freedom of marriage within the factory, also demanded freedom of leaving the factory premises for recreation after 11 p. m.; appointment of special physicians and surgeons for night shifts; adoption of a system of discharge allowances and bonuses for continuous service; better food at lower prices; free tickets for bath houses every day; special cooling facilities during the hot months; payment of half-day wages on national holidays.

Virtually all of these demands were granted.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH.

"Which would you rather have—a million dollars or twelve daughters?"

"Twelve daughters."

"Why is that?"

"If I had a million dollars I should always be wanting more, if I had twelve daughters it would be enough."

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

But this friend knows the fifth vice president of the Blank Steamship company. It is all really very simple.

Coiling the Rope.

Then a B. A., clad possibly in a light gray herringbone of the latest cut and wearing a loudly banded panama twitched rakishly over one eye, a sea bag in one hand and a mandolin case in the other, trips blithely along the incredulous waterfront in search of "his" ship. Already influenced by the salty atmosphere, he swing up the gangplank with all the nautical slouch and roll of a deck hand on a municipal ferry boat.

The mate, having read the proffered letter, smiles bleakly, tells the B. A. that he is hired, and vows that the next time that nuisance in a swivel chair wants a case of champagne smuggled in he can buy it on West Houston street instead, and may he be right royally stung!

On leaving port a B. A.'s first job is to assist in coiling and stowing the many fathoms of wire rope that lie snarled up on deck. There is nothing in the world more perverse than wire rope. Catch it in the right mood and it coils itself; try to force it and it leaps eagerly up and puts out an eye, usually waiting to do this until you have eight fathoms or so neatly coiled, which is exasperating. Then, too, since it is always old and badly frayed, it cuts unaccumstomed hands until they literally drip blood.

Finds Sea Is Salty.

By the time it is stowed, the pilot has left, hatches are battened tight, and the mate, who is in a happier mood, orders that the decks be washed down. Since sea water is used and since the action of salt on open cuts is distinctly stimulating, this job impresses upon the B. A. the fact that in this latitude and longitude the sea is decidedly salty. When, a little later, he is put to washing paint work with strong lye water, he begins to wish, especially if a long voyage lies ahead, that he had signed on a Jersey Central boat instead for the trip from Liberty street to Atlantic highlands.

If he has made the mistake of saying "sir" to the faintly incredulous bosun, it is entirely possible that on the trip out the B. A. will devote himself exclusively to washing paint, and on the trip home to painting. If, on the other hand, he has had the good sense to go aboard unshaven, to look surly and to keep his mouth shut, he may fare better, perhaps even be put on watch.

Fine View of Moonrise.

On the north Atlantic in winter a night watch is not a desirable assignment in July or August, however, it is very pleasant. During the first two hours of a four hour watch his duties may be no more onerous than, to stand on the navigating bridge where he rings the ship's bell on each hour and half hour and reports to the mate in charge. For the remaining two hours he may stand alone, far above the sea, on lookout in the crow's nest.

The faint occasional strains of music that reach him from the orchestra far aft accentuates his isolation, the magnificent loneliness of the night, and he sees moonrise at sea as no passenger lounging on the promenade deck has ever seen it.

Although this seems a most desirable assignment, it is sad to remember that an uneasy stomach can ruin one's appreciation of even the loveliest of tropic nights and that two inches of motion on deck may mean two feet or more in the nest.

May Choose Bed on Deck.

This ship was a sailor's paradise. There are others, however, far different and far more numerous. On many of them the bugs have been thriving and multiplying for thousands of bug generations. Having fared badly on the tough hides of thoroughly salted A. B.'s they flock joyously to the tender B. A. As a result, he sleeps in the fo'c'sle on his first night aboard, perhaps for only a part of it, and then transfers to the bare deck where he sleeps well save on those occasions when he is disturbed by rain or cold, or, perhaps, by a venturesome rat scampering over his face.

On a ship of this sort even a B. A. with a seaworthy stomach may starve in the midst of plenty, for that plenty may be of such nauseating quality that he prefers to heave it through a porthole before rather than after eating. The potatoes have gangrene, the rice pudding is sour, and the meat can be cut only if cut with the grain.

When the food is as bad as this everything else is usually in keeping. There will be only two watches, which means that a man is four hours on duty, four off, four on and four off for days on end. The disadvantages are obvious.

* *

Complain to Captain.

But poor food, hard work, seasickness, cuts, blisters and indigestion do not serve as deterrents.

Upon discovering the bug population of the fo'c'sle a group of college boys once took the matter up with the chief executive of the ship, the captain, who made the mistake of treating the complaint lightly. He smilingly assured them that they must be mistaken since he felt sure that there were no bugs on his ship, asked solicitously if they had been assigned deck chairs, and dismissed them.

They went immediately to the fo'c'sle, collected several dozen assorted bugs and returned with them to the astounded captain. Was the milk sour? They carried the pitcher to the bridge and asked that he smell it. He proclaimed the milk above suspicion, and they demanded that he taste it. Although he was a patient man, he gradually wearied of this sort of thing.

He suffered what was perhaps his greatest shock on a romantic moonlit night somewhere on the Caribbean, when, in the shadows of the boat deck, he discovered a handsome young B. A. in dirty blue dungarees tenderly enfolding a charming young lady from the first cabin. Since then he has not been the same man. Mutiny would have been a less heinous crime.

SHOCKING

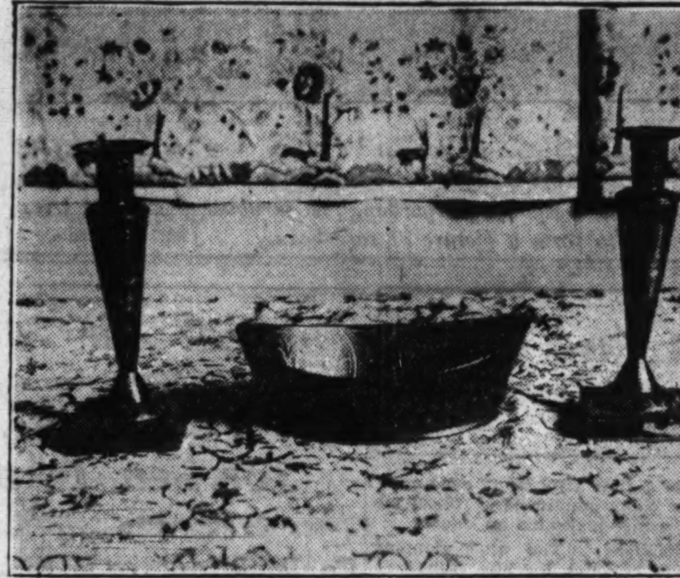
DECORATIVE PIECES FOR THE HOME

Interesting Offerings of Both Antique and Modernistic Design

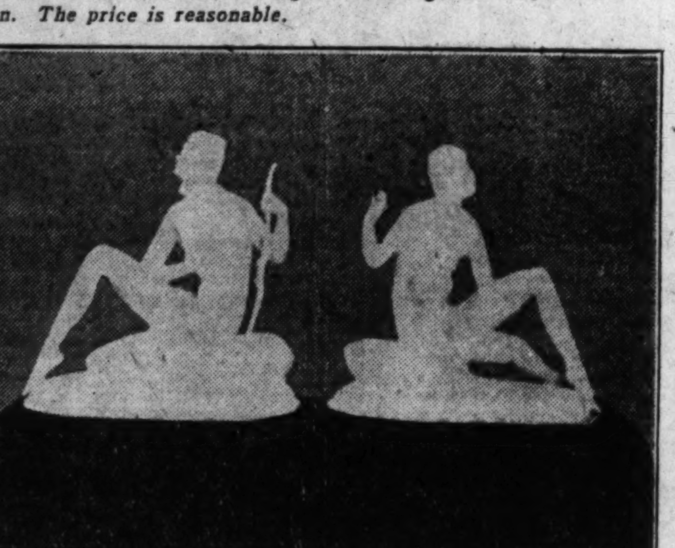
A table set in black and white glass. All the white glass is in the waffle pattern of pressed glass coveted by a collector for country house use. It is sturdy and honest and, combined with the black, is quite striking. It departs from the round in shape.

A beautiful soup tureen in sterling silver by Paul Store. It is, of course, a rare piece, and in perfect condition. Either for serving hot dishes or for a centerpiece, it is superb.

Two pieces of Irish glass. Both old, both beautiful, and both useful. The decanter is about eight inches high and in perfect condition. The price is reasonable.



A fine pair of tole candlesticks and a tole dish. The candlesticks are black, with gold and red figures, and would make an excellent small pair of lamps for a desk or writing table.



A pair of fine faience figures in all white. They are unusually graceful and lend themselves happily to the decoration of a mantelpiece. They would also be delightful among ferns on a dining table.

Some historic pressed glass made to commemorate the death of President Garfield. Note the Victorian garlands of mourning. It is all white and would make a delightful lemonade or ice tea set.

Kaiser's Town Gets News of Col. Lindbergh

DOORN.—(AP)—To this village of 4,000 inhabitants, made famous by the presence of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II. of Germany, the news has apparently just penetrated that a certain Col. Lindbergh is an aviator of note.

The village general store has placed on display "the latest novelty," a Lindbergh scarfpin. It represents in silver a miniature airplane propeller with the word "Lindbergh" engraved on the blade.

TOO TRUE.

Teacher—I asked your boy yesterday who wrote "Macbeth" and he told me he didn't.

Illusion Aids in Home Life of Magicians

Wives Claim Happiness Is Due to Mystery.

IS it possible that some sort of perpetual mystery in the home is the thing that will keep a lifelong bloom on the romance of marriage? Should a modern husband have some new and surprising daily magic up his sleeve in order to keep a few amusing paces ahead of his wife's perspicacity, and thus maintain his place as a wonderworker in her imagination? And is it advisable for the wife to have her own secret storehouse of mystery whose shelves are never empty?

Two New York women with many years of happy marriage in retrospect answer yes to all three questions. They are Mrs. Harry Houdini and Mrs. Howard Thurston, widow and wife of famous magicians. Mrs. Houdini believes that throughout the thirty-three years of her married life she was the happiest of women.

Mrs. Thurston considers herself the happiest wife in the world. Both these women think it is possible — and profitable—for two people to live together in the closest harmony for years and years and yet keep certain reserves from each other. It seems that magicians and their wives always live like that, and that nobody ever heard of an unhappy marriage in a magician's home.

Both Had Secrets.

It was Mrs. Houdini who recently turned the searchlight on a certain technique of successful wifehood by admitting that in their lifetime together there were things in her mind day after day of which her husband knew nothing at all. Chief among these secrets was her occasional inability to see through much of the magic he performed for the public. That confession came when a committee of magicians asked her to do an act at the recent annual dinner of the Society of American Magicians, of which her husband had been president eight times. They only wanted something simple — pulling rabbits out of a hat, a necktie trick, or showing the guests articles that would disappear astonishingly from her hands.

"But I can't do these tricks. I don't know how," Mrs. Houdini protested.

Never Asked to Explain.

The magicians couldn't believe it. Hadn't she seen Houdini do them hundreds of times? If she didn't know how, it was time she learned. They would teach her. And they did. Three days were spent in tutoring and rehearsing. Mrs. Houdini appeared on the dinner program and gave a successful and amusing performance.

It was all right to tell these acquaintances how little she knew. But there is a convention that magicians' wives must never admit to their husbands that they do not understand and never ask a husband to explain his mysteries.

The Thurston Home.

Does some strange fabric of illusion surround the spacious Long Island home of the Howard Thurstons? Many years ago it was the home of another pair of famous magicians who were very happy there—the late Alexander Herrmann and his wife Adelaide, who still lives in New York.

Mrs. Thurston fancies that sometimes in the evening she sees "the great Herrmann" walking about under the trees—wide spreading Japanese willows, beeches, Chinese maples, silver spruces, cherry trees—and she imagines that he exercises a beneficent influence on all the strange acts that are invented there.

There is a studio on the grounds where tricks are tried out. Would a wife, who is also costumer and designer of stage sets, demand a detailed analysis of the conjurer's art that goes on there? O dear, no! There are things that are never done, words that are never spoken in a magician's family. Take all the mystery out of any relation in life and what have you got left?

Kept Her Popeyed.

Mrs. Thurston never goes to the studio while her husband and his Hindu helpers are working there. She admitted that much of their magic is a mystery to her for weeks at a stretch, that her husband has kept her popeyed ever and anon since she was seventeen. Now their daughter, Jane, is seventeen—a beautiful girl, a singer and dancer and enough of a magician to be preparing for her debut in her father's company next season.

"The mechanical tricks no longer puzzle me," Mrs. Thurston said, "but the psychological magic does. Mr. Thurston's 'suspended animation' mystery I do not understand at all. I don't delve into it much. After watching my husband all these years I do not know how to perform magic. He seems to take it for granted that I know what he knows."

Mystify the Magician.

Both Mrs. Houdini and Mrs. Thurston admit that while it is the magician's business to mystify an audience it is the wife's business to mystify the magician to the extent of convincing him that she understands his tricks whether she does or not.

They both believe that living loses nothing from being embellished by certain amusing byplay, and that any intelligent couple ought to be able to go on being interesting to each other if they will take half as much trouble about being mysterious after marriage as they did before.

Mrs. Houdini intimated that one might as well realize that one never knows what the other is hiding, and that perhaps it is as well not to know. She did not know until after her husband's death that several women, one a widow whom she considered a very dear friend, had been writing love letters to Houdini. She found them in a file, with carbon copies of her husband's replies. There was no word in these answers to make any wife less happy. Still, Mrs. Houdini wishes he hadn't kept that a secret from her. The letters were, of course, returned to the senders for safekeeping. But it could have been possible to have sent them back sooner!

Child Shipments from Hungary on the Increase

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—More than 11,000 destitute Hungarian children have been adopted by families in Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Switzerland and France.

The Hungarian government became sponsor for the movement to find homes abroad for offspring of the exhausted war generation after all public institutions had become overcrowded.

A national women's organization has taken active charge of this unusual "export" trade and is preparing to submit a plan to the United States government whereby Hungarian children could be adopted by American families in addition to the regular quota.

Collector Gets His Thrill Out of Wooden Legs

Tastes Among the Hobby Riders Are Varied.

THIS is the time of year when doctors go about telling listless people that what they need is a new interest in life, some refreshing and amusing hobby that will take their minds off their work.

"But a hobby is expensive," the complainers complain.

That depends. The man whose hobby is collecting can openers has not spent a fortune on it. One who collects labels from wine and cordial bottles and pastes them in a scrapbook rides an inexpensive hobby-horse through scenes of some hilarity and comes away with what he considers the best part of the party.

An unsatisfactory feature of that sort of collecting is that the others remain as indifferent to his labels as their collector always is toward the liquids the labels describe. And if one is the only connoisseur of can openers in the world one misses a certain keen edge of delight which some collectors find sharpened by the sense of having won out over an acquisitive adversary.

Belasco Prefers Jades.

Nobody but their owner has any idea of the value of David Belasco's collection of jades, crystals and rosaries that have come to his studio from all over the world and through the centuries.

The jades run mainly to elephants, and they range in size from a fraction of an inch to three feet from trunk to tail. There are enough of them to guarantee good luck and chase away the goblins from a good many lives. And of course there are lamps. One jade and crystal lamp in that collection is said to have cost $15,000. Cabinets of wine and cordial glasses, mostly colored, are outstanding achievements from the connoisseur's point of view.

There are glasses in that studio which are supposed to date back to King Solomon's time. Their owner regards his treasures and wonders why so many of the men and women of his acquaintance find it necessary to go to Europe every year. He stays quietly at home and has what he wants of Europe or the orient sent to his study.

Some Like Old Bottles.

Lord Dunsany, a recent visitor in New York, has a hobby that never was and never will be expensive. He really has two. When the titled Irish playwright wishes to forget the cares that come to an author in those abysmal hours when characters refuse to behave, he goes to a work table, gets out some old tools and becomes a goldsmith.

From thin sheets of gold this patient nobleman fashions handsome picture frames for the photographs of his friends. If his mood happens to be for something more distant and windy he goes hunting and comes back with more quills for his great jar of pens or more of those curved and shining trophies that decorate the hall of his London home, where the staircase is lined with antelopes' horns.

Quite different is the taste of those people whose hobby sends them into queer places in search of old bottles. There are a few fine collections in New York—great bulging vessels that once held fifteen gallons of rum, quarts, pints, half pints, and tiny tubes of amethyst glass that delight the eye of the expert. A thousand people might pass by without even seeing an old bottle in a window.

The along comes some one who stops and looks, whose eyes brighten with enchantment at the sight of a tall or curved or bulging flask whose sides may be decorated with a head of Washington, a railway engine, certain combinations of eagle and serpent, of violin and star. For those who can read the language there are pages and chapters of history in the patterns on old bottles whose shapes and colors and decorations reveal their secrets to the connoisseur.

Hunted Hungry Cats.

William Gillette, the actor, had a humanitarian hobby that occupied his midnight hours for many years when he was a popular favorite on Broadway. He would leave the theater alone and, turning his back on the bright lights, would go sauntering through the darker streets searching for hungry cats. Cats know who are worthy of being liked and on these they bestow their confidence.

Even those that had been most scared and kicked never needed much coaxing when Mr. Gillette came along, his pockets bulging with food. He would talk to them, feed them, pat them and pet them until his pockets were empty. Then he would go home. The next night and the next he would be back with a banquet for neglected cats. If he found a sick or starving one that needed special care he would tuck it in the crook of his arm and take it home.

One could always identify Mr. Gillette's dressing room from the photographs on his makeup table. They were pictures of cats in silver frames

Rooney Wants Can Opener.

Nora Bayes collected bottles of perfume. Perfume to her was something to be seen, not smelled. She had dozens of bottles, big and little, from which the stopper had never been removed. She kept them in a glass cabinet, where the sunlight by day and electric light by night could reveal the soft beauty of the perfumes' color and the shapes of the shining bottles.

Pat Rooney is the man who goes in for can openers. Hours when he is not working in the theater are often spent strolling through those basement sections of stores where kitchen utensils are sold. Always this customer wants can openers. Dozens of them hang in rows in his kitchen, like the rows of keys in Baldpate Inn. Whenever he gives a present to a friend there is sure to be a can opener in the package.

James Barry, another vaudevillian, is the man who will go to endless trouble to get the label off a bottle and into his book whose pages of design and color grow thicker with the years.

Book Hobby Expensive.

Book collecting, of course, is one of the best known and most expensive of all the hobbies that men and women ride. During the years from 1629 to 1681, the kindly vicar of Stratford-on-Avon kept a careful diary of events. And in numerous entries he casually mentioned the name of the bad boy of the village—one William Shakespeare. The other day, at a London auction, this little book—the so-called Ward diary—was purchased for $52,000!

A royal collector with an unconventional hobby is King Alfonso of Spain, who cherishes all the things which have at some time endangered his life, such as a large stone on which he struck his head when a child. The skin of a horse, killed when a bomb was thrown into the royal carriage on Alfonso's wedding day, is another important piece in the collection.

Even some of the royal women have assortments of unusual objects, although feminine collectors are rather rare.

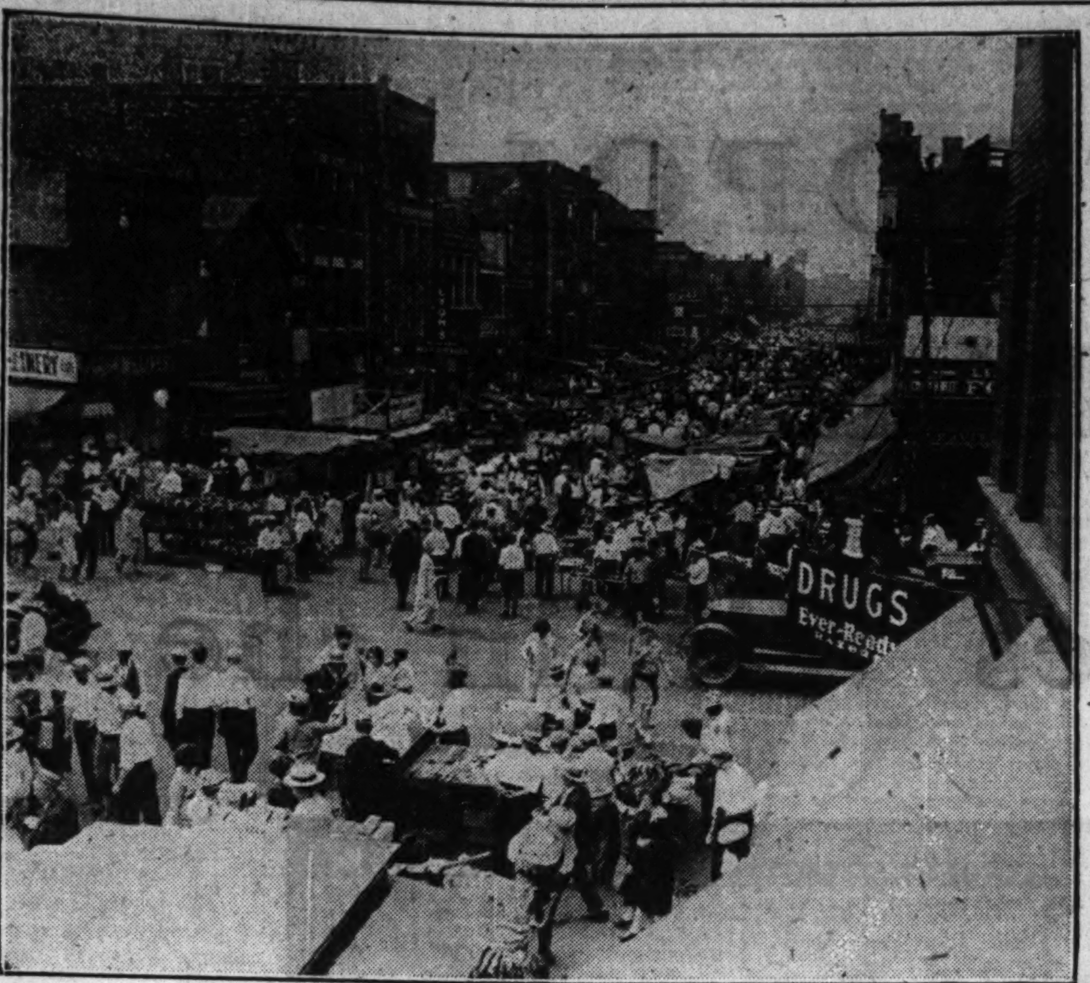
Whim for Tall Soldiers.

Frederick the Great of Prussia collected less permanent oddities for his Potsdam palace—tall soldiers! And before his time was the "mad" king of Bavaria who spent a fortune on hats of all ages and nations. Even the stern and militaristic Kaiser Wilhelm II. had a hobby, an assortment of ties and scarfs from all over the world, from the humblest cotton bows to the most costly silken cravats.

For eccentricity few can outdo the hobby of Lord Randolph Churchill, who gathered the personal effects of condemned criminals and was especially fond of teeth taken from hanged men. He is equaled, however, by a Nebraskan who has access to a penitentiary out there. All criminals, upon entering the jail, are shaved and the hair of the more famous ones, carefully indexed and labeled, may be found in the Nebraskan's collection.

A similarly grewsome assortment is that of a Connecticut man, who has amassed samples of artificial legs of every kind, illustrating the evolution from peglegs like that of Long John Silver to the most perfect modern mechanisms.

THE HUMIDITY HITS MAXWELL STREET



THE hot spell has not slowed up business on Maxwell street, apparently, but both tradesman and customer seem to have doffed their coats to suit the requirements of the climate. In the foreground we have a rush on the counter devoted to something besides overshoes, and the row of bonfires that graced the thoroughfare in winter is missing.

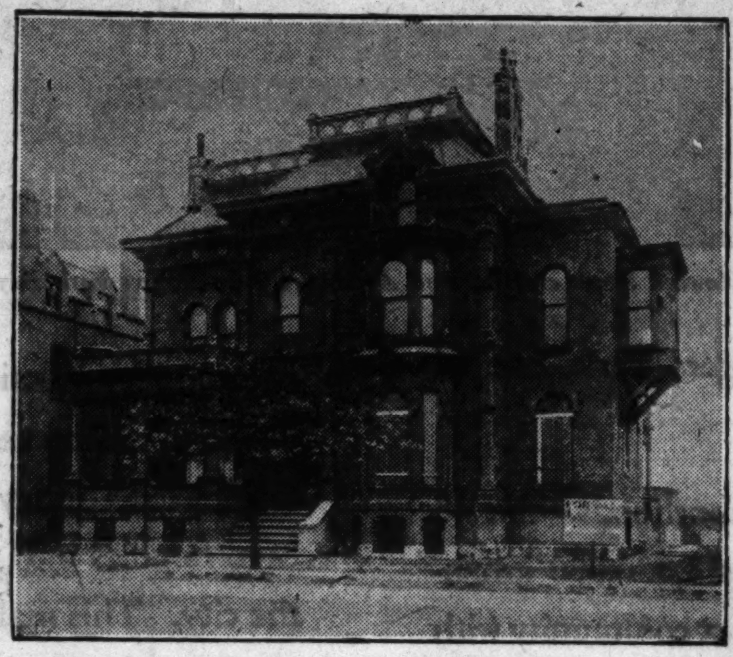
FAMOUS HOMES



FOR sentimental reasons, the stables connected with the old William Gold Hibbard home at 1701 Prairie avenue were maintained long after automobiles came into popular use. Not until McCullough, the coachman, died, after thirty-eight years of service, did a limousine supplant the coupe and horses. From this home McCullough drove coaches to the marriages of six children of the Hibbard family, to the christening of sixteen grandchildren, and to the weddings of three granddaughters.

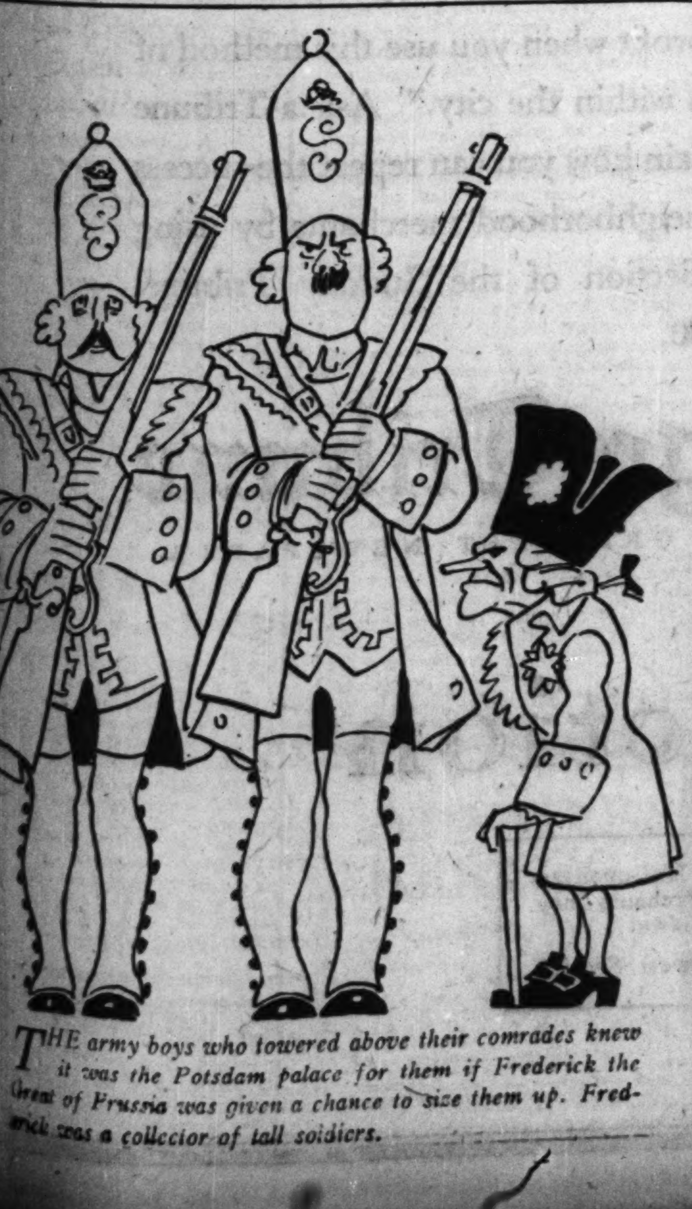
ABOUT TO BE COLLECTED



THE army boys who towered above their comrades knew it was the Potsdam palace for them if Frederick the Great of Prussia was given a chance to size them up. Frederick was a collector of tall soldiers.

Turkish Women Ignore Orders to Remove Veil

CONSTANTINOPLE.—(AP)—Public antagonism has forced the Turkish government to abandon strict enforcement of the prohibition against veils for women and fezes for men.

The older generation will be left to follow the old customs and efforts henceforth will be centered in persuading the young people of Turkey to obey the regulations designed to westernize the country.

Stories are told of Turkish girls who leave their homes for school each morning demurely veiled. At a safe distance from their parents they produce a tam o' shanter or other western hat, remove their veils, and go on their way.

PRETTY GOOD FOR A STARTER.

"There are many momentous questions before the people."

"There are," answered Senator Sorghum.

"What do you think is the most important advice to be given?"

"For a starter, the most important advice would be, 'Don't everybody try to talk at once.'"—Washington Star.

Modern Portias Pout When Told to Dine Alone

LONDON.—(AP)—A group of London's attractive young Portias strongly objected when an attempt was made to segregate them from male lawyers at lunch time.

The question came up at a recent meeting of the Law society. It was pointed out that twenty young women have just been added to the growing list of women practicing law. As a result many of them were obliged to eat their lunches at the same tables with men, a situation which the society solemnly discussed.

The suggestion was made that tables decked with flowers should be marked "For Ladies Only," but the project was nipped in the bud by the ladies themselves.

Jugoslavs Honor Killers Who Began World War

SARAJEVO, Jugo-Slavia.—(AP)—Jugo-Slavia has erected a massive marble tablet to the two murderers who started the world war.

It marks the spot where Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his archduchess were assassinated in 1914.

The monument glorifies the assassins because their act has resulted in the independence of all southern Slavs.

Accommodating.

Several weeks ago I had occasion to use a special size pasteboard box and looked in vain for it until I went downtown to make a purchase. While in one of the large department stores I asked a floorwalker if there would be a chance of procuring the desired box. He at once called an attendant to whom I described the size and kind of box I wished, and directly he returned with precisely the kind I wished.

I offered to pay for it, but he declined to accept it, expressing his pleasure in accommodating a patron. The following week my husband wished to buy a summer suit and I suggested going to the store where I had been treated so kindly.

His purchase, and the treatment accorded him, has proven highly satisfactory, and I am glad for the privilege of saying a kind word for our Chicago stores.

C. M. M.

Honesty Plus Courtesy.

While shopping in the book department of a large downtown store, I was short changed $2.

Never looking, I put the money in my pocket. Half an hour later, passing the same department, I heard some one calling. Turning around I found the clerk extending my change.

That is my idea of the height of honesty and the store has won my everlasting patronage. J. H. S.

Store Made It Right.

My sister purchased an attractive sports coat of white chinchilla at one of the leading department stores of Chicago. Opening the box after returning home, she noticed a flaw in the front of the coat. Unable to return it herself, I gladly consented to take it back where, I might add, courtesy reigns, for the head of the coat department ushered me to a seat, whereupon he took the bill and coat and said he would see what he could do.

Inside of ten minutes he returned with over a three dollar reduction if I would keep the coat. I did not have to go to the adjusting bureau or to this head man or that for signatures. I had a comfortable seat and real service.

Would I trade there again? Always. E. H.

Made It Right.

A month ago I bought a pair of tennis shoes for my boy. He wanted to wear them when school days were over. On opening the parcel I discovered both shoes were for the left foot. Having no check, I doubted if they would exchange them, but I took a chance and went to the store.

The clerk recognized the box and paper wrapping and not only gave me the right shoes, but he paid my carfare, as it was their mistake, and asked me to come again. J. K. P.

Confidence in a Store.

This spring I ordered some hedging and trees which one of the department stores had advertised on sale. Some of it did not grow and I called them and asked them if they could suggest something. They said they would send a man out to inspect it, which they did about a month later.

He made out a list of all that did not grow and imagine my surprise when I received a refund about a week later, which was more than unexpected, as the shrubbery had been on sale.

Suffice it to say, I shall never hesitate to order anything from this store again. L. B. M.

Given a Discount.

After shopping all day for shoes, I finally found a pair that suited me. I was just about to hand the money to the salesman when he noticed that the soles were slightly soiled. I was willing to take the shoes anyway, but he said it wouldn't be fair for the store to sell soiled merchandise at the regular price. So he told me to wait until he spoke to the foreman.

The salesman soon returned, saying I could have the shoes with a discount of $2.00. Of course I purchased them. Since then I have purchased all my shoes at that store, because I was so pleased with the courtesy that has been bestowed on me there.

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table.

CHEERFUL

Mrs. Belle Taylor of 5012 Harper avenue offers politeness plus at a south side tea room, with the result that she is made even more cheerful than before.

meal and chat with another waitress who, it seems, had a grudge against the bus boy for refusing to move a table for her.

My waitress took the blame on herself.

"I told him to put it there," she said; "that's what caused the misunderstanding."

I departed, leaving my table enriched only by the strategic kazoo. I was almost to the corner when I heard her running behind me.

"You forgot something," she cried breathlessly, and I turned to accept the instrument and her apologies for not seeing it sooner.

The Start of the Pursuit.

In my earlier wanderings I had made a barber shop at 1165 East 53d street. I took a chair next to a woman who was having her iron gray hair "sculptured" into a boyish bob. The jolly little barber danced around her, snipping here and there, exclaiming over the beautiful lines in between snips.

"Ah," he gloated, "yesterday was a fine day, nice and hot. All the ladies that had been growing their hair for months came in and had it taken off. And shorter than before, mind you, too."

"Yeah," said one of the other chair occupants, "they take off their hair and their hose at the first sign of warm weather."

"Hose—stockings," wailed the little barber. "You don't mean to say it's the style to go without stockings now? Why, I get all the fashion magazines, and they never mentioned it. Well, I'll have to go home and tell my wife to take off her stockings. That's a style that might save me some money."

My barber was taciturn, attending to his business and nothing else, but the other one vindicated the good name of the profession, and kept up a chatter about this and that and even the other thing. The Heeney-Tunney fight was still on his mind.

"I don't care for Tunney," he said in his decidedly foreign tone. "But I'm glad an Englisher didn't beat an American."

I got my change and a card which told me I might have my hair bobbed at my residence by appointment, and went on down the street.

* *

The Parting of the Ways.

A telegraph office at 1459 East 53d street gave me a bright idea, and I walked in. I waited a while at the desk before a tall, cool blonde came to my assistance.

"I may want to send a telegram to Glenhaven, Mich.," I said. "How long will it take?"

"Half an hour," she said, just like that.

"O, but there isn't an office there," I countered.

"It will have to be routed through Traverse City and telephoned," she announced, after looking it up.

"They haven't got a telephone," I remarked, helpfully.

"It could be mailed," she suggested, "from Traverse City. You had better allow a day for it, then. Do you want to send it now?"

I didn't, and she turned away.

"Wouldn't it get there quicker," I persisted, "if it went by way of Empire?"

"I've already told you the only way it could go," she said firmly. So I went another way.

* *

The Neighborhood Nuisance.

At the I. C. station at 53d street I inquired about prices to the loop. I asked single, round trip, and ten ride rates, and received from the ticket agent brief but informative answers.

"Can you tell me how to get to the nearest public library?" I asked her then.

"There's one downtown," she said, proffering me a ticket.

I wanted one in the neighborhood.

"Well, I don't know where there's one, but she might," pointing to the collector.

I repeated my question to the collector.

"Sure," she said; "47th and Lake Park."

"How do you get there?"

"Take the street car right out here down to 47th, or maybe it's 48th," and, as I hesitated, she added: "You can't miss it; it's a large gray stone building."

* *

In Store and Restaurant.

But I didn't go to the library. Instead I went on down to a drug store at 5301 Hyde Park boulevard, bought a nickel's worth of Ju Ju beans, and gave the clerk the library test.

"Public library," she said, as though she had never heard of one. "No, I don't know of any around here."

So I asked how to get downtown.

"You can take the bus, the street car, or the I. C. from here," she said, and turned to the next customer.

A restaurant at 55th and Harper reminded me that I was hungry. My waitress was genial, but more interested in the men at the next table than in me.

She was angry for a moment when my salad had to be changed because of the dressing, but her good nature returned with the dessert.

"We have tapioca pudding and pie and ice cream," she offered. "The tapioca pudding is awfully nice."

I disagreed, and took the ice cream. She was swatting flies over in a corner when a fat youngster, reminiscent of Peck's bad boy, seized the swatter and began plying it on her. After a struggle she regained it and, rewarding him with a resounding swat, turned again to the less irritating flies.

Acquiring a Kazoo.

Down the street a ways I passed a music shop at 1173 East Fifty-fifth street. Intrigued by the toy saxophones in the window, I went in and priced them.

The girl showed me straight ones and curly ones and allowed me to demonstrate them myself. I was charmed, but the price, I declared, was too high. That brought the store manager to her aid.

"Show her the brass one, Marguerite," he said. Marguerite obeyed.

I admired the brass one, but not quite enough.

"See," he said, "the finish is beautiful and instruction books come with it. How old a boy did you want it for?"

"I wanted it for a joke, not a boy," I informed him.

He was a bit taken back. "Well, we have some kazoos made to look like saxophones. Marguerite, show her the kazoos. The single one and the double one and that long one there."

Marguerite obeyed, and I saw the kazoos and was given expert instruction in manipulating them. I sought the exit and finally gained it, not, however, without being accompanied by one of the kazoos.

A Riot of Boyhood.

A block or two down I ran into a baby riot. It looked as if all the boys in the world were congregated on that corner, swarming and pushing to get some place I couldn't quite see. I did a little pushing myself and made my way through to discover the cause—a sign outside the drug store at 901 East 55th street: "To Every Boy a Free Cone Between 2 and 3:30."

Inside, two clerks were filling and handing out cones as fast as they could work. One attendant stood at the doorway, trying to keep them in line and see that any one boy didn't get more than his share.

"It's a lot of fun for us," explained day, and we treated all the girls. We do it once every year."

I went out as a little two year old toddled in for his cone. He was folone of the clerks, "and the boys certainly appreciate it. You should have been here yesterday. It was ladies' lowed by a six footer who might have come under the classification of a boy, but who didn't look it.

The End of the Trail.

It was then that I went to the tea room and found my journey's end. When I went back the second time she was in the kitchen.

"Belle, O, Belle," they called, and she hurried out. I handed her the card, and she didn't know quite what to make of it.

"You've heard of the politeness award, haven't you?" I asked.

"Why, yes—why, no—I mean yes, of course!" Then she recovered herself and said prettily: "I consider it a great honor to be singled out for it. May I show it to the kitchen help?" And she rushed back to tell them the good news.

Her employer, Mrs. E. D. Griffiths, came out to tell me how glad she was that Belle had been given it.

"She's a 100 per cent dependable, Belle Taylor is," she said. "Everybody who comes here loves her."

Belle came back, flushed and eager. She is a widow, she told me, and lives at 5012 Harper avenue, and $50—well, she could do a lot with $50. Her father, down in Chalmers, Ind., would be pleased.

I went down the street, armed with Belle's blessings and thanks, and the ubiquitous kazoo.

Imperial Salon May Reopen in German Capital

BERLIN. — (AP) — The "Empress Hermine," wife of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, is reported to be preparing to open an imperial salon in Berlin during the coming winter season.

A well known firm which specialized in uniforms and elaborate liveries of the pre-war period has just received a large order for equipment. Other signs point to an organized attempt to revive some of the glittering pomp that marked social affairs before the war.

The former emperor's consort is said to plan a series of receptions, to which those of the old nobility who have remained faithful to the house of Hohenzollern are to be invited. These social affairs are to take place in the so-called Netherland palace, Unter den Linden, near the former imperial palace. The Netherlands palace has remained the property of the Hohenzollern family.

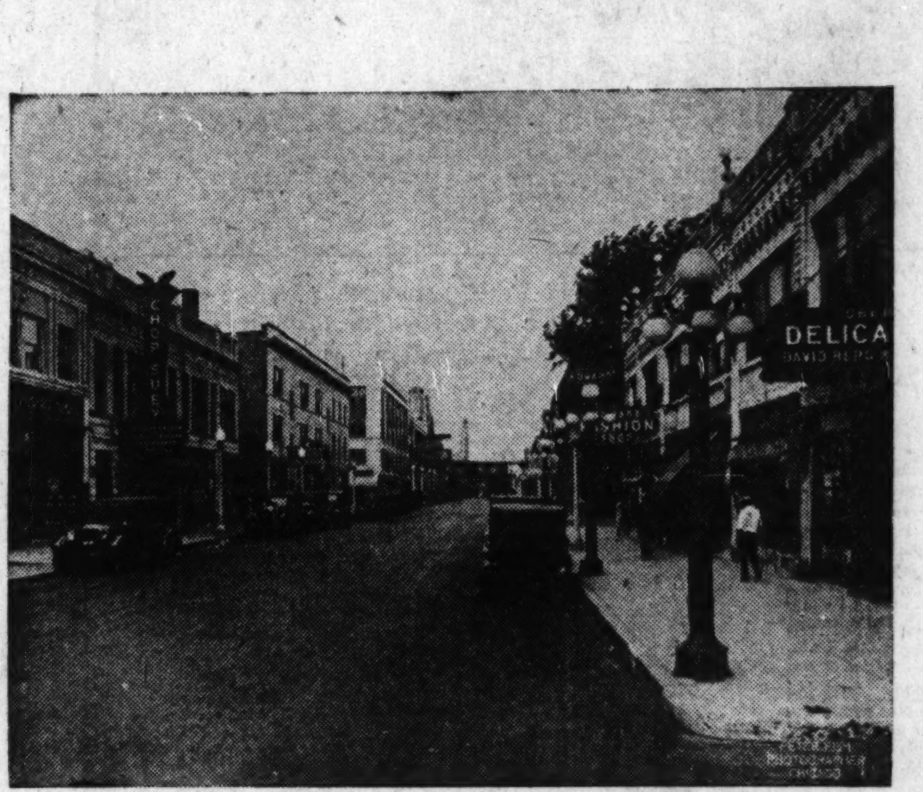
An attempt to give tea parties a year or two ago failed because the former courtiers could not accustom themselves to the thought of seeing some one in the place of the late Empress Auguste Victoria, whose memory is sacred to all monarchists. Princess Hermine, however, now apparently believes that enough time has elapsed and that a second attempt to open an imperial salon will be crowned with success.

On Political Fence.

DURHAM, S. C.—(AP)—A. H. Shearer, newest addition to the Shearer family of Oak Grove township, will bear the name of the next President of the United States. If the New York governor wins, the baby will be called Alfred H. Shearer. Should the Republican win, the parents will name the child A. Hoover Shearer.

METROPOLITAN MARKETS!

the "Cities Within the City"



Howard Street and Ashland Avenue, Where Rogers Park Buys

AT Chicago's northern boundary two prosperous cities meet. Here the rich suburban community of Evanston joins Rogers Park, one of Chicago's "cities within the city."

These "cities" are Chicago's neighborhoods—the 48 districts of the city in which live its 3,000,000 inhabitants. Each of them is an independent community with its own banks, stores, and places of recreation. In population and wealth they are the equal of the most metropolitan of America's smaller cities.

Rogers Park, for example, has a population of more than 90,000 people, above average in the homes they live in and the comforts and luxuries they buy. 137 grocery and delicatessen stores are necessary to supply them with food; 50 drug stores cater to their needs. From any standpoint Rogers Park in reality is a city, a major market.

The buying center of a metropolis

Howard Street is a trading center of "the city of Rogers Park." This busy street is lined with bright, modern stores which would be a credit to any city in the country. The quality of articles they sell and the progressiveness of their merchandising and selling methods mark Rogers Park merchants as metropolitan retailers. They know the opportunities their "city" offers, and realize that to be "big time" merchants they must use up-to-date methods.

One great selling force which astute Chicago retailers are using in their battle for business is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune, a medium designed for the neighborhood merchant. This section divides the Sunday Tribune's coverage of 580,000 Chicago families into three groups—one for each side of the city. This makes it possible for the neighborhood retailer to buy only that part of the Sunday Tribune's circulation which he can use. In Rogers Park, for example, the Metropolitan Section reaches 20,597 of the 22,197 families in the district. The merchants of the neighborhood can thus secure a coverage of over 92% of their logical next-door customers—plus an additional circulation of 190,000 among north side and suburban families who live near enough to trade in Rogers Park! The cost of this selected circulation is only about a third of complete Sunday Tribune coverage.

You can use this sales force

Your business will profit when you use this method of selling to the "cities within the city." Ask a Tribune man to call and explain how you can repeat the success of scores of other neighborhood merchants by using the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune. Phone Superior 0100.

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Metropolitan Section

The Chicago Tribune publishes as a part of its regular Sunday issue a Metropolitan Section, the circulation of which is divided so that local neighborhood merchants may advertise in any one or more of the three sides of Chicago and suburbs as follows:

English Radio Fans Anxious for Dialogue

Discussions by Noted Men in Demand.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A new use for radio was found here recently in connection with motor races between London and Holyhead. The difficult problem of keeping the watches of the official timekeepers synchronized during the races was solved by providing them with small portable radio sets, from which they received the official time signals from Greenwich.

Hardly a week goes by that some new step forward is not reported from the Baird laboratories where the television work is rapidly going forward. The latest is the abolition of the great banks of strong lights that formerly had to be used to illuminate the object of which an image was to be transmitted. Baird has not succeeded in transmitting images illuminated only by ordinary daylight—and that at a time when the sun was not shining.

India Likes Radio.

Eric Dunstan, general manager of the Indian Broadcasting company, has just returned to India after a four months visit to England, where he made arrangements for the relay of English programs in India. The Indian relays will begin with a fortnightly program picked up from 5SW, London, which will begin its broadcasting at a time suitable for Indian listeners. Mr. Dunstan reports a steadily increasing interest in radio in India, and says that the future of broadcasting in that country is assured of prosperity.

The radio conversation continues to interest England, and the probability is that the British fan will hear a good many programs in the near future. Radio journals, deploring the fact that conversation seems to have become a lost art in our present hectic society, suggest that it is up to the wireless to restore it to us. Instead of cut and dried talks, they say, let us have two noted men, or more, get together before a microphone and talk impromptu for half an hour on any subject that interests them.

Hamlet on the Air.

Shakespeare went on the radio in London recently when for the first time a more or less complete version of Hamlet was broadcast. As only an hour and a half was available for the performance, there were necessary cuts, but a reader linked up the breaks in the play, and the main scenes were presented in their entirety. Whether the ghost of Shakespeare listened in on the spectral performance or not no one has hazarded a guess, but if he did the sounds of his famous character's words coming from empty air probably succeeded in making "each individual hair to stand on end like quills upon the fretful porcupine."

The formation of a national chorus of 250 voices primarily for broadcasting purposes has been begun by the British Broadcasting association. The organization will be made up strictly of amateurs who are members of other choral societies of London and vicinity. It is to be heard not only over the radio but also at the B. B. C. symphony concerts given at Queen's hall.

W-G-N to Present "Robin Hood, Inc." for the First Time

Radio next Thursday night will hear "Robin Hood, Inc.," a new musical comedy dealing with the merry outlaw and his times, will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, before it has been presented on the stage. The libretto is the work of Frederick H. Martens, and the music was written by Allan Benedict.

"Robin Hood, Inc.," is the next of the series of musical comedy presentations which listeners are hearing under the able direction of Harry W. Spingold, who began this radio series with revivals of the old La Salle theater successes by Hough and Adams. Some of the works heard had their original presentation back in the nineties, but "Robin Hood, Inc.," is brand new and as yet unproduced on the stage. The same cast that has taken part in the other Spingold revivals will be heard in "Robin Hood, Inc."

The baseball schedules of the Cubs and Sox are such as to result in two open dates this week, and W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is planning to fill the time usually devoted to the baseball broadcasts with musical programs. The open dates are Wednesday and Thursday, and each afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock will find some well known W-G-N vocal performer at the microphone.

On Wednesday afternoon Mark Love, the popular basso, will be heard in groups of songs, and piano solos by Fern Scull are also planned. These artists will be heard in addition to the regular tea time instrumental quartet. On Thursday afternoon, Gida La Tille, soprano, will be the principal performer.

Lingeman Recital Scheduled on W-G-N for Tuesday Night

Headlining the week's offering of classical music from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is the half hour cello recital by Johann Lingeman, premier cellist of the station's concert orchestra. Mr. Lingeman will be heard Tuesday night between 9:30 and 10 o'clock. The product of European training, Mr. Lingeman has played with many of the old world's best known symphony orchestras as a soloist, in addition to numerous concert engagements in this country.

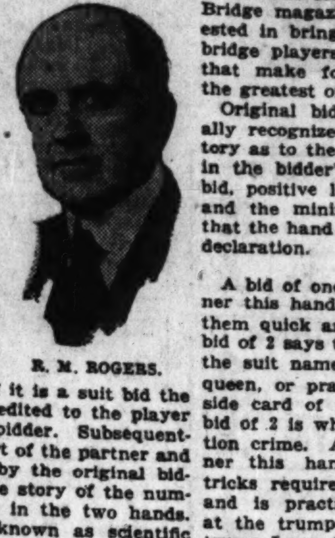
Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.
ARTICLE XX.



R. M. ROGERS.

Hands at bridge are divided into three general classes: normal, about 70 per cent; abnormal, 22 per cent; and freaks the other 8 per cent.

In these articles we have given the bidding conventions of normal hands and the minimum number of tricks the bidder must hold in order to make a bid, the number of tricks his partner is assumed to hold in order that the partner may win the bid, and the assumption that if it is a suit bid the kind of trumps credited to the player at the left of the bidder. Subsequently, both the support of the partner and further advances by the original bidder tell the definite story of the number of tricks held in the two hands. This is what is known as scientific bidding and announces [in the language of the game] exactly the minimum number of tricks there are in the two hands under the assumptions. The only variance therefrom arises in the possibility that the left hand opponent does not hold the trump cards accredited to him. We have also given the method of handling two of the three kinds of abnormal hands. The method of handling the 3 suitor will come later.

In this article we will take up the method of bidding "freak hands"—namely: hands that contain seven or more cards of one suit, as freaks of two 6 card suits follow the plan laid down for two 5 card suits.

A partnership game is a misnomer unless partners coöperate; in other words, tell each other those things which are permissible both in the bidding and in the play.

No one can satisfactorily coöperate who has not learned the conventions of bidding generally recognized, and concerning which there is no practical dissension among experts, or those having a standing as authors on the game. Writing a book on it does not of itself give the author a standing, nor make the author an authority, as that requires the support of experts of experience. No one particular person as a writer on bridge who has yet reached recognition has "the standard authority."

The articles published in this paper outline only such conventions as are in perfect harmony with the views of recognized experts and about which there is no controversy in the Auction Bridge magazine, a publication interested in bringing to the attention of bridge players any and all questions that make for the improvement of the greatest of card games.

Original bids only are conventionally recognized as definitely informatory as to the number of quick tricks in the bidder's hands, and if a suit bid, positive location of one of them and the minimum number of tricks that the hand will win at the specified declaration.

A bid of one in a suit says to partner this hand contains 4 tricks, 2 of them quick and 1 in the suit bid. A bid of 2 says this hand has 6 cards in the suit named headed by ace, king, queen, or practically 6 tricks, and a side card of reëntry. Any other suit bid of 2 is what is known as an auction crime. A bid of 3 says to partner this hand has not the quick tricks required for a bid of 1 or 2, and is practically worthless, except at the trump named, and with that trump I can take 6 tricks in my own hand. When a higher bid is made it means an additional trick in the bidder's hands.

There are two kinds of freak hands, one of which should never be shown in the first round of the bidding, and the other should have two or more quick tricks and should be bid on the first round to go game, with the assumption that partner will hold two tricks in support of the bid. This means that a preëmptive or shut out bid should be four in the major suit and five in the minor suit, and that the bidder of a major suit shall have eight tricks in his own hand, and the bidder of the minor suit must have nine tricks in his own hand.

A preëmptive bid does not necessarily prevent a partner from bidding, but he would be expected to keep still unless he had as good a hand with four honors, and he would be expected to support the preëmptive bid the first round if there was an overbid by opponents to show that he held at least the number of tricks assumed by his partner to be in his hands.

A bid of less than five in a minor suit is not preëmptive nor good judgment. If a minor suit is not worth a bid of five, a bid of three rather than four would be better, or a bid of one, if it has the requisites that bid.

It is occasionally true that a hand has neither the requisites conventionally for a bid of one, or two, or four or five, and yet holds a probability of a game with a suit trump and that has a bar to bidding no trump, as for example, void of a suit or holding a singleton and such a hand will take a bid of three. For example:

Spades—K, J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2.
Hearts—K, 9.
Diamonds—8.
Clubs—A, K, 2.
Or
Spades—A, 5, 4.
Hearts—A, Q, 8, 7, 5, 3, 2.
Diamonds—5.
Clubs—J, 8.

The first example above has not the conventional requirement for a bid of 1. The second has the requirement for such a bid, but a bid of 3 should be made in either case, as both are lacking the conventional holding required for a bid of 1 no trump.

It must be understood that in all that has been said above in regard to bidding, whether preëmptive or not, is for an original bid by a first or second hand. Original bids whether preëmptive or not made after two passes or three passes require the additional tricks that are recognized as necessary after the partner has passed.

A preëmptive bid of a freak hand would be an exhibition of poor judgment if the strength of the hand was distributed and the holding would permit a bid of 1 as a gradual advance in the bid might bring a double that could be defeated and would be worth more, as a shutout bid will not be doubled unless the doubler is sure of defeating it without any assistance from his partner, and that rarely happens. Raising the bid from 1 to 4 or 5 over opponents gives a greater opportunity for one of them to believe that what might have been a preëmptive bid can safely be doubled because it was not preëmptive.

Some excellent players do not use the preëmptive bid at all, and if they have not the requisites for a bid of 1 or 2, or 3, they wait until the second round to show the strength of their hand.

A preëmptive bid should be the first and last bid of the player that makes it, and any further action must depend wholly upon the partner who, if he advances the bid, will indicate thereby a greater holding than the original bidder assumed him to have. Last but not least, it is generally advisable to pass on the first round when holding a freak hand whose strength lies wholly in the suit and the suit is not established.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE biggest show on earth! Admission only three pins! Radio entertainment is as free as rain water. All you need to buy is something to catch it in. The good folk hold out their bushel basket radio horns and collect the manna from the heavens.

The broadcasters are the butter-and-egg men by appointment to his majesty, the American fan. They put the finest talent of the world at the beck and call of the public and never pass the hat.

Yet they have their sordidly materialistic moments. About eight times a day they sit down and ask, "Who's going to pay for it?"

As in the case of the weather and Charlie Dawes' pipe, everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything.

Of course, after five years of broadcasting gratis, it's rather late to suggest that Santa Claus operate on a strictly cash basis. The broadcasters should have laid down a box office plan before they rushed pell-mell into their philanthropies.

MANY a pretty theory has been teed up for consideration, and by and large they have all been sliced into the rough. Some have popped the question of licensing radio listeners, the proceeds to go to the broadcasters. Former Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has said of this:

"This country would never stand for licensing or taxing radio listeners. That idea works only when one company has a monopoly and all the revenue so derived goes into one pool. And we don't like monopoly. And, then, how are you going to have a police force snooping around for illicit aerials and searching people's homes?"

Of a proposed tax on radio equipment, Mr. Hoover stated:

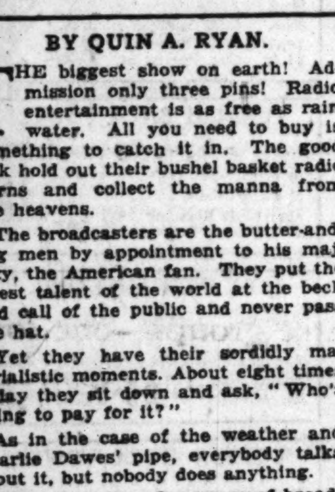
"People go into the theaters and pay admission, and that solves the problem right there for the stage and concert hall; but it is obvious that there is no such way of getting the radio audience to pay for what it gets. So you've got to approach that some other way—leaving out the license tax scheme.

"I've heard only one very feasible suggestion. That is to fix a certain tax—say two per cent, for instance—on the sale of radio equipment. . . . You could provide enough that way to pay for daily programs of the best skill and talent throughout the year."

ONE STATION, WHB of Kansas City, inaugurated a plan of selling annual "box seats" to its "invisible theater," with printed programs and life size theater tickets being sent to all who contributed to the visible box office, entitling them to a specified seat. There were many voluntary contributions, but the stunt was abandoned after a while.

So, after all's said and little's done, we find the broadcasters reverting to the basic formula of program broadcasting—the brandishing of indirect advertising. The good will, the "institutional publicity," and the trademark advertising that are derived from sandwiching the name of a product or an institution in between program offerings warrant the broadcasting expenditures, they say.

The majority of the broadcasting stations advertise only one thing, the firm name of the organizations operating them, and this is construed not so much as advertising as it is an identification of the station the listener is hearing. Some stations maintain themselves as agencies for the advertising of others' trade names, selling time on the air as newspaper advertising space is sold. The advertisers may be charged from $75 to $1,000 an hour to present their entertainers on the air, the rates varying with the time of day and the extent of the territory the station covers.



LADEES AN' GEN'MEN THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH!
RADIO ADMISSION FREE

A MOTLEY family is engaged in the business of broadcasting as an indirect advertising medium—radio manufacturers, theaters, newspapers, department stores, universities, state experimental stations, churches, fraternal socities, railroads, and hotels.

Their simple trademarks, as they are set off occasionally amid the nightly fireworks display, pay for the public's gigantic free show.

It's mild advertising and innocuous propaganda that are sustaining the radio stations and providing the biggest show on earth free of charge. It will remain mild and innocuous, because whenever it starts to run amuck the audiences will attend to the matter themselves.

Allen McQuhae to Be Heard in Tennyson Lyric

Concert Falls on Eve of Poet's Birthday.

Allen McQuhae, tenor, and the Sittig trio will present the concert in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight, to be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The string trio will play two numbers, with seven well known songs by the Irish tenor.

The concert falling on the eve of Tennyson's birthday, Mr. McQuhae will feature in his program the poet's best known love lyric, "Come Into the Garden, Maud," considered by critics one of the great love songs of the English tongue.

The music is by Michael William Balfe, best known as the composer of "The Bohemian Girl."

The Poem, "Maud."

The tragic poem, "Maud," of which the song is a part, appeared in 1855.

The lyric is the climax to the story as the lovers were discovered in the garden and Maud's brother killed in the duel that followed.

The lover fled to Brittany, where he became insane following the sudden death of the 17 year old heroine.

Songs to Be Heard.

Balfe, a native of Dublin, started his career as a violinist. He later studied singing in Italy and in his twentieth year made his debut as Figaro at the Italian Opera, Paris. Ten years later he sang in his own opera, "Joan of Arc," at Drury Lane theater, London, where, at 15, he had played the violin in the orchestra. He has written many operas.

McQuhae's program includes "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," "The Next Market Day," "Little Boy Blue," "Where My Caravan Has Rested," "Twilight Shadows Are Falling," and "I Heard You Singing." The trio will play "Swanee River" and Beethoven's minuet in G.

A speech which Secretary Hoover will make at his birthplace, West Branch, Ia., will also be broadcast. The date has been tentatively set for Aug. 25.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Here is the thrill of radio at its best.

TRY THE 1929 ELECTRIC SET MODEL 40

$77 (without tubes)

MODEL 40 A. C. Set. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle, alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77.
Also Model 42 A. C. set, $86, and Model 44 A. C. set, $106 (without tubes).
Battery sets, $49 and $68 (less tubes and batteries).

OWNERS of the new Atwater Kent 40 say they have never heard a better radio than the Atwater Kent 40. They say it exactly meets their desire for a compact electric receiver that would bring in the programs clearly and give no trouble at all. They say they didn't realize until they tried the Atwater Kent 40 that even the largest and best-equipped of radio factories could produce so fine a set at so low a price.

That's what they say—these thousands who are so enthusiastically spreading the reputation of Model 40—which works from a lamp socket at a cost of only a fraction of a cent an hour.

The nearest Atwater Kent dealer would like to hear what you say, and he'll give you a home demonstration. With Smith and Hoover getting ready to go on the air—and with all sorts of enjoyable programs being broadcast every day—why not say "Home Demonstration" today?

W-G-N RADIO PROGRAM

The Chicago Tribune Station

On the Drake Hotel
416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles

SUNDAY—AUGUST 5

"Heah Me Tawkin' to Yo!!!"

It's Fess Williams, and "heah him tawkin' to yo," tonight as he opens with an "e'spo'tulation" at 11 o'clock. He and Harry Gourfain have heaped hot note on top of blue note until they and their riot are ready to break out in the jazziest storm rhythm you ever heard. Just hear it and grin. Chuckle comfortably with Fess Williams, then just try to make your foot behave.

Fawn Post Trowbridge

ON Sunday afternoon in August it is certainly refreshing to hear the sweet soprano voice of Fawn Post Trowbridge. Her gay classics will certainly enliven you as she skips through difficult passages with remarkable ease. Her half hour begins at 2:10 this afternoon.

HOOPLAS and HISSES

Tell Us Not in Mournful Numbers

W-G-N:

Sirs: Maybe you enjoy having your station sound like a funeral chapel, or maybe you just want no one to listen to it. At any rate, no matter which you are trying for, your station is a howling success.

HARVEY SPUR,
Athens, Ill.

We Keep Our Face Washed

W-G-N:

Gentlemen: Your program last evening was most enjoyable. I want to express my appreciation of Frank Smith. It is rarely one hears such clearness and beauty of tone.

May I add that your entertainment is always clean and wholesome and worth while at all times. Very truly yours, D. H.

"YERROUT!"

THE Sox and the Yanks are going at it today out at the south side diamond at 2:55. It's going to be a good game and it's going to be broadcast to you from W-G-N. Make yourself some lemonade, set the loudspeaker out on the porch and see the Big Game through the eyes of the announcer from your favorite chair.

Salerno . . .

LAWRENCE SALERNO will entertain you, he will, too. You'll enjoy his expressive baritone voice as he sings those songs which come so naturally to him. He'll offer his melodious twenty-five minutes at 2:30 this afternoon.

South Side Widow-Waitress Lands $50 Politeness Prize

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

To most people B. A. means Bachelor of Arts; A. B., little more than the beginning of the alphabet. In nautical language, however, A. B. means able seaman—a man who can tie a bowline, chip paint, splice wire cable, or steer a ship. B. A. to A. B.—rather a radical transformation this, to be effected as casually as many college men do effect it every summer.

But effect it many a B. A. does, and that is why, if you are one of the hundreds of thousands of Americans who make an annual pilgrimage to Europe, you may find your stewards, your brass polishers, or the bus boys who make themselves generally useful aboard your ship have been recruited from the ranks of new graduates of the most distinguished colleges in the land.

With commencement week comes the urge to launch out into the world of adventure and romance. Harassed by professors, surfeited with things academic, the poor B. A. feels that he would "sell his tired soul for the bucking beam sea roll of a black Bilboa tramp." But, unfortunately, since many first mates won't have them aboard at any price, the market for tired undergraduate souls is not always good.

Can't Be Fired at Sea.

Mates, know that although most of the boys who ship before the mast are keen to learn and willing to work, they are woefully green, and that a green man can wreck the works even more thoroughly afloat than ashore. Then, too, you can fire a man ashore, but what can you do at sea? Give him a life preserver and say, "Here, when we cross the equator you're through?" Hardly. Having signed a man on in New York, let us say, you must bring him back to New York. If you fire him in a foreign port the government will speak to you about it.

But your undergrad stands in small awe of first mates. He finds that a fraternity brother has a third cousin. Regarded as an isolated fact, this is neither significant nor remarkable. Fraternity brothers not infrequently have third cousins. This particular third cousin, however, can obtain an introduction to a man—not merely an ordinary man, but one who can write a letter to a friend. This fact is also not remarkable. Many men have friends to whom they can write letters.

GOOD LUCK

James Harrington, aged 82, wishes Al Smith well in his campaign for the presidency and he's going to send the Democratic nominee this big, nickel plated horseshoe. Mr. Harrington, who lives at 657 Briar place, has been shoeing horses in Chicago for the last sixty-five years. In fact, a year ago at the state convention in Elgin he was honored as being the oldest active horseshoer in the state. The apron worn by Mr. Harrington is one which he bought from the blacksmiths' union forty-five years ago.

W. H. THOMPSON, formerly of the Hotel Sherman, was a visitor last week from Eagle River, Wis., where he has been indulging in fishing and thinking.

Commissioner of Public Works Richard W. Wolfe, our local cultural uplift influence in poetry, was quite amused at the excitement that swept the north side anent the discovery of a street with perfectly good paving. The street, Robbins terrace, is privately owned, and therefore Mr. Wolfe could not be held responsible for its condition. Ha! Ha!

To fellow villagers who find it a wee bit sultry to adventure their souls among the masterpieces of the Art institute these August days, ye ed prescribes a Skokie sunset. Drive west in Wilmette in Lake street, past Ridge road of storied Indian legend, and on to Hibbard road. Thence north to Willow road, in Winnetka, or as far as Elm street, if one so wishes. But, once in Hibbard road, drive slowly. Better yet, park your car alongside some meadow, sweet now with the breath of clover, and let your jaded city eyes focus upon the horizon. The western sky is nature's canvas, and as the great golden orb sinks slowly behind the distant treetops she splashes from her cosmic paint pot such colors as no mortal hand can ever hope to compass. A Skokie sunset is the only earthly thing your humble correspondent has ever encountered that is comparable in beauty to the Twenty-third Psalm.

Harry Frank, the baker, of 5221 Drexel avenue, says the school and laboratory of his popular profession at West 69th street and Emerald avenue has evolved a new type of milk solids bread, six ounces of which equal in nutrition a pound of the best sirloin steak or ten eggs. Let the housewives rejoice.

JUDGE DANIEL P. TRUDE.

DAN was convalescing from his first attack of Blackstone's Commentaries when the "I Knew Him When" club camera surprised him in the foregoing still life study. Even so, note the judicial poise and dignity.

As the keen minded reader may have suspected, Dan was not yet on the bench. He had not left the high chair, wherein, family tradition hath it, his first childish utterance was lisped, viz: "Oyez oyez, the honorable meal of the Trude family is now in session."

Well, Dan early gave promise of his procilivities for public office. He started in running, acquiring his C on the track team of the University of Chicago, where he won both the low hurdles and the law hurdles. He's been on our municipal bench so long now we regard him as a perennial.

Son of Alfred Samuel Trude, nephew of former Judge George A. Trude, second cousin of Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude. Really, as we were saying, is it any wonder our legal guild invariably refers to Dan's family as tried and Trude?

Can You Name Twin Words in This New Quiz?

Here's Chance to Test Skill at Homonyms.

Did you ever hear of homonym? Yes, it is a distant cousin of a synonym. Homonyms are words which have the same sound, but are spelled differently and have different meanings—"ball" and "bawl," for example.

Credit yourself with 2 points for each set guessed correctly. Then a score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and 100 means that you are quite an etymologist!

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table

Neighborhood Nuisance Found to Be Reporter.

By Helen Dare

THE kazoo turned the trick for her—the kazoo that I left on the edge of the table where one usually leaves a tip. She followed me half way down the block to return it.

It had been a lean day for politeness until then. Not that any one had been really rude. That takes too much of an effort. They had been polite enough—but only enough. Here I had found politeness plus.

I made my way to a table in the tea room at 1450 Hyde Park boulevard. A cheery good afternoon directed my glance to the waitress. She was slim and pretty, her face was young and pleasant looking, although her hair was turning gray.

As I pondered long over the menu she stood patiently beside me, with no trace of irritation even in a movement. I finally gave my order and then, when she was almost to the kitchen, called her back and changed it.

* *

Recovering the Kazoo.

"Now, you want the tea ball left out," she said, repeating my instructions, "and you don't want any extra dressing on the salad. Is that right?"

I nodded and she went out, only to be called back by a rough masculine voice in the hallway. It came from a soiled looking individual, with shirt sleeves rolled up and hat awry—obviously not a customer.

"Is Mrs. Griffiths here?" he grunted.

"Why, no," she said. "I'm sorry. Can I do something for you?"

"Naw, I gotta see Mrs. Griffiths."

"Well, I'll find out when she'll be back," and she disappeared again, returning to tell him he might find the lady in at 5 o'clock.

She brought in my order, correct in all its specifications, and exchanged pleasantries with me over the weather. Then she retired to the back of the room to type menus for the evening

OUR esteemed fellow townsman and Standard Oil factotum, Frank Surdukowski, had the misfortune to be kicked in the eye by a cow last month, and the organ is still black and blue as we go to press. Mr. Surdukowski ever since has been subjected to base calumnies and contumelies. Aspersions of an alibi have even been broadcast, and frequently, on social occasions, when Frank has arisen to explicate further as to the circumstances, he has been greeted with a loud raspberry. Tsk! Tsk! What is this country coming to? Is there to be no liberty of person whatsoever? A man is certainly entitled to an honest shiner honestly arrived at, and we congratulate Frank that it was a cow and not a mule.

In addition, there will be 4,000 free balloons.

GAGE PARK is agog, as we say, over the design of H. D. Wells of 7115 South Hoyne avenue to perfect a man-carrying glider. As regards the folks and flivs in history, John J. Wright of 2124 West 103d street claims a record. He avouches he has the oldest flivver in Chicago, if not in the U. S. A., excluding, of course, Mr. Ford's own collections. It is of the vintage of 1903, some decades before Henry made a lady out of Lizzie. It is one of the original two cylinder type. Somewhat battered, altogether squeaky, decidedly rusty—but the engine chugs on as merrily as Mr. Tennyson's brook. It can do all of 18 miles an hour. Mr. Wright discovered it in a barn near Memphis, Tenn., and promptly acquired it. It antedates the model T by five years. Which reminds ye ed there must be some rare specimens of the latter model rattling over what we laughingly called our pavements. What appears to be the oldest four cylinder flivver in these parts is owned by a frat house at Northwestern university, but you never can tell.

Of late a queer fishy taste in lake water has been detected by the discriminating palates of Lake Foresters. Superintendent John C. McNicol of that suburb's water department, after due research, explains that it is due to the little plant organism known as algae, and that there is nothing to worry about. Scientists, says Superintendent McNicol, declare that it is the algae that give to fish the fishy aura or personality, and that without the algae fish would not taste like fish at all. So chemically pure, in fact, is the algae that one may safely use the water it inhabits in synthetic gin without poisoning the water.

South Chicago residents are complaining that the speed of the interurban busses through the city's streets constitute a menace. They frequently travel 40 miles an hour, it is alleged. Two drivers were arrested last week. They were fined $25 and costs, but later were discharged. One citizen writes that "to observe one of these thundering busses with open cut out, traveling through heavy boulevard traffic at 25 to 40 miles an hour, gives one a sobering and creepy sensation. It is an increasing menace, borne out by the daily casualties listed in the press."

You see the Rocky mountains and the canyons grand,
And all the scenic glory of that western land.

Figaro McGee, well known historian of the drama, now summering in our midst, says he is enjoying himself immensely. "I admire you westerners," he said, "and particularly your great, pulsing city, with its indomitable 'I Will' spirit. I wonder if you appreciate the bigness and vastness of it all. Do you know that the spring moving peak in Chicago this year reached a total of 84,028 families; that you have 183 concerns wholesaling lumber planing mill products; that 33 department stores sold $18,489,200 worth of men's and boys' clothing, this figure representing more than 20 per cent of the entire retail sales of men's and boys' clothing in Chicago in 1926? Reformers in Italy Frown on Hollywood

BERGAMO, Italy.—(AP)—The prefect of Bergamo has climaxed his reform campaign with an order banning publications featuring pictures of lightly draped women.

The review Excelsior, printed in Milan, was mentioned specifically and 'its sale or diffusion" forbidden throughout the district. The same severe treatment is promised for any other publications which "ape what is done in a certain country to the north," as one of the clerical papers puts it.

Hollywood is receiving a good share of the blame in this part of Italy. Measures are being considered to dam the flood of pictures of film actresses sent from the United States by Hollywood press agents.

The complaint has been made that if the Italian reform movement continues to spread the tabloids will have nothing to print but pictures of Premier Mussolini on horseback.

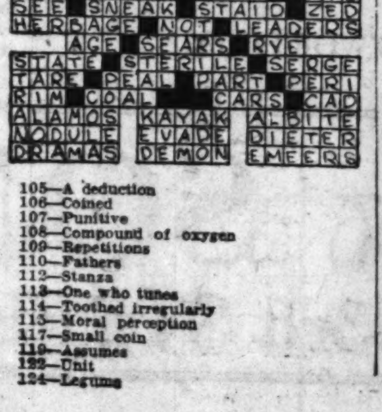
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



Collector Gets His Thrill Out of Wooden Legs

Tastes Among the Hobby Riders Are Varied.

THIS is the time of year when doctors go about telling listless people that what they need is a new interest in life, some refreshing and amusing hobby that will take their minds off their work.

"But a hobby is expensive," the complainers complain.

That depends. The man whose hobby is collecting can openers has not spent a fortune on it. One who collects labels from wine and cordial bottles and pastes them in a scrapbook rides an inexpensive hobby-horse through scenes of some hilarity and comes away with what he considers the best part of the party.

An unsatisfactory feature of that sort of collecting is that the others remain as indifferent to his labels as their collector always is toward the liquids the labels describe. And if one is the only connoisseur of can openers in the world one misses a certain keen edge of delight which some collectors find sharpened by the sense of having won out over an acquisitive adversary.

Belasco Prefers Jades.

Nobody but their owner has any idea of the value of David Belasco's collection of jades, crystals and rosaries that have come to his studio from all over the world and through the centuries.

The jades run mainly to elephants, and they range in size from a fraction of an inch to three feet from trunk to tail. There are enough of them to guarantee good luck and chase away the goblins from a good many lives. And of course there are lamps. One jade and crystal lamp in that collection is said to have cost $15,000. Cabinets of wine and cordial glasses, mostly colored, are outstanding achievements from the connoisseur's point of view.

There are glasses in that studio which are supposed to date back to King Solomon's time. Their owner regards his treasures and wonders why so many of the men and women of his acquaintance find it necessary to go to Europe every year. He stays quietly at home and has what he wants of Europe or the orient sent to his study.

Some Like Old Bottles.

Lord Dunsany, a recent visitor in New York, has a hobby that never was and never will be expensive. He really has two. When the titled Irish playwright wishes to forget the cares that come to an author in those abysmal hours when characters refuse to behave, he goes to a work table, gets out some old tools and becomes a goldsmith.

From thin sheets of gold this patient nobleman fashions handsome picture frames for the photographs of his friends. If his mood happens to be for something more distant and windy he goes hunting and comes back with more quills for his great jar of pens or more of those curved and shining trophies that decorate the hall of his London home, where the staircase is lined with antelopes' horns.

Quite different is the taste of those people whose hobby sends them into queer places in search of old bottles. There are a few fine collections in New York—great bulging vessels that once held fifteen gallons of rum, quarts, pints, half pints, and tiny tubes of amethyst glass that delight the eye of the expert. A thousand people might pass by without even seeing an old bottle in a window.

The along comes some one who stops and looks, whose eyes brighten with enchantment at the sight of a flat or curved or bulging flask whose sides may be decorated with a head of Washington, a railway engine, certain combinations of eagle and serpent, of violin and star. For those who can read the language there are pages and chapters of history in the patterns on old bottles whose shapes and colors and decorations reveal their secrets to the connoisseur.

Hunted Hungry Cats.

William Gillette, the actor, had a humanitarian hobby that occupied his midnight hours for many years when he was a popular favorite on Broadway. He would leave the theater alone and, turning his back on the bright lights, would go sauntering through the darker streets searching for hungry cats. Cats know who are worthy of being liked and on these they bestow their confidence.

Even those that had been most scared and kicked never needed much coaxing when Mr. Gillette came along, his pockets bulging with food. He would talk to them, feed them, pat them and pet them until his pockets were empty. Then he would go home. The next night and the next he would be back with a banquet for neglected cats. If he found a sick or starving one that needed special care he would tuck it in the crook of his arm and take it home.

One could always identify Mr. Gillette's dressing room from the photographs on his makeup table. They were pictures of cats in silver frames.

Rooney Wants Can Opener.

Nora Bayes collected bottles of perfume. Perfume to her was something to be seen, not smelled. She had dozens of bottles, big and little, from which the stopper had never been removed. She kept them in a glass cabinet, where the sunlight by day and electric light by night could reveal the soft beauty of the perfumes' color and the shapes of the shining bottles.

Pat Rooney is the man who goes in for can openers. Hours when he is not working in the theater are often spent strolling through those basement sections of stores where kitchen utensils are sold. Always this customer wants can openers. Dozens of them hang in rows in his kitchen, like the rows of keys in Baldpate Inn. Whenever he gives a present to a friend there is sure to be a can opener in the package.

James Barry, another vaudevillian, is the man who will go to endless trouble to get the label off a bottle and into his book whose pages of design and color grow thicker with the years.

Book Hobby Expensive.

Book collecting, of course, is one of the best known and most expensive of all the hobbies that men and women ride. During the years from 1629 to 1681, the kindly vicar of Stratford-on-Avon kept a careful diary of events. And in numerous entries he casually mentioned the name of the bad boy of the village—one William Shakespeare. The other day, at a London auction, this little book—the so-called Ward diary—was purchased for $52,000!

A royal collector with an unconventional hobby is King Alfonso of Spain, who cherishes all the things which have at some time endangered his life, such as a large stone on which he struck his head when a child. The skin of a horse, killed when a bomb was thrown into the royal carriage on Alfonso's wedding day, is another important piece in the collection.

Even some of the royal women have assortments of unusual objects, although feminine collectors are rather rare.

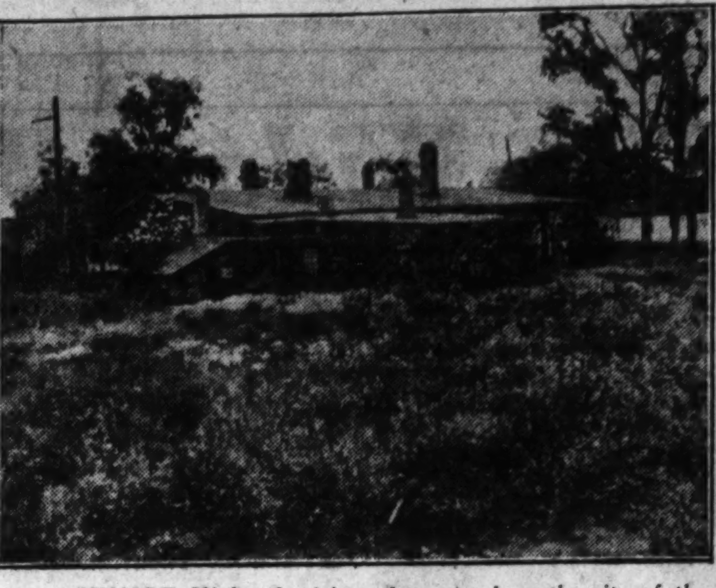
Whim for Tall Soldiers.

Frederick the Great of Prussia collected less permanent oddities for his Potsdam palace—tall soldiers! And before his time was the "mad" king of Bavaria who spent a fortune on hats of all ages and nations. Even the stern and militaristic Kaiser Wilhelm II. had a hobby, an assortment of ties and scarfs from all over the world, from the humblest cotton bows to the most costly silken cravats.

For eccentricity few can outdo the hobby of Lord Randolph Churchill, who gathered the personal effects of condemned criminals and was especially fond of teeth taken from hanged men.

OLD ROBY HOMESTEAD



A JUNIOR High school is to be erected on the site of the old Roby homestead, 108th street and Avenue H. For many years Mrs. Leila P. Roby, widow of the founder of Roby, Ind., kept the home as a museum for war relics and it was always open to the children. A movement has been started to call the new school Loyal Hall Junior High.

France Draws Lion's Share of Tourist Trade

Paris Popular in Spite of Living Costs.

PARIS.—(AP)—France drew the lion's share of the world's tourist business this summer despite higher living cost and new taxes. Steamship companies report a small decrease in the total volume of travel from the United States. The annual invasion was late in starting and the peak is already past. All indications point to an early ebb tide of homeward bound tourists, many of whom express a wish to be in the United States when the fur begins to fly during the presidential campaigns.

Busy Until November.

Passage west is hard to obtain during August and September whereas accomodations during October are comparatively plentiful. Last year and the year before the rush did not subside until November.

Tourist business in the provinces along the seacoasts and in the mountain districts is better than in 1927, though not so good as the boomtimes of 1926.

Paris to getting to be an old story to many trans-Atlantic visitors. The number of those who have been here before is proportionately greater each year. They stop for a few days of theater-going and shopping. The "sights" of the city are no longer necessary for them.

All Come to Paris.

But they all come to Paris, or mostly all of them. Perhaps only half of those who cross the Atlantic each summer see London.

The proportion who get to Berlin and Rome and further afield is even less. But most of them still see Paris, coming and going

The hotels and tourist agencies say they remain here fewer days now than they used to. And the merchants complain that they buy less.

LET GEORGIE DO IT.

Visitors were present.

"Daddy, may I have a dime?" asked little Georgie.

Dad obliged, with a smile.

"This time you won't make me give it back after the company's gone, will you, daddy?" was little Georgie's loud remark.—American Legion Monthly.

ONE OF THE CITIES WITHIN THE CITY

NOT so many years ago, this district, given over to a fine type of business houses and the center for many thousands of shoppers, was nothing but bare plains. It is one of the thriving forty-eight neighborhoods of Chicago. The picture was taken at 92nd street, looking north on Commercial avenue.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

FAMOUS HOMES

FOR sentimental reasons, the stables connected with the old William Gold Hibbard home at 1701 Prairie avenue were maintained long after automobiles came into popular use. Not until McCullough, the coachman, died, after thirty-eight years of service, did a limousine supplant the coupe and horses. From this home McCullough drove coaches to the marriages of six children of the Hibbard family, to the christening of sixteen grandchildren, and to the weddings of three granddaughters.

HALSTED STREET AT SIXTY-THIRD

CHANGE is taking place in this busy south side business district, as witness the covered sidewalk at the left. For a time pedestrians, as well as being safeguarded from hoisted material, will have their views shut off from the construction work going on. Suddenly the board awning will be removed and—presto, a new building! The picture was taken looking north on Halsted at 63rd street.

Al Unearths a New Language

Claims to Have Heard Twentieth Lingo Spoken in Our Midst

By Snowshoe Al.

THE author was recently informed by a gentleman of even less importance than himself that only nineteen foreign languages are spoken in these United States. Said author disagrees with other unimportant gentleman and submits the following mess of curious lingo to support his own personal belief that twenty foreign languages are spoken in our midst. He claims to have overheard this queer collection of words and sounds on a college campus, but you can believe that or not:

QUESTION: "So yuh grabbed yourself a new roommate, huh? Hoozee?"

ANSWER: "O, ain'tcha heard? It's Freddie, the Dormitory Nomad—I had a helluva time yankin' him loose from that Gypsy Camp, because he sure soaks up a flock o' comedy among them Cliff Dwellers—it took me t'ree hours tuh converse him into migratin' over tuh my landlady's wigwam an' mixin' his laundry wit' mine. Yuh know, he comes from my home town. Me an' him gits along swell!"

* *

Slings Merry Mucilage.

QUESTION: "Yeh? What breed o' Dodo is he?"

ANSWER: "Smoking Bow-wow, what a panic that bird hatched out to become! He's one o' them guys what wouldn't change their garters often even if they did wear 'em around their tonsils. Sa-a-y, that geezer's gonna be a winning number in the business world some day, accept it from me! He's got a brain like a domino—the double blank. I wouldn't fool yuh—yuh could blindfold him an' git the photographers ready an' stand by wit' an open checkbook—an' still he'd pick the wrong cigaret! Har, har! I wish he'd git over the idea that a hippodrome is a hippopotamus' feminine acquaintance. Even so, me an' him gits along swell."

QUESTION: "Izzee a good worker?"

ANSWER: "O, curious person, you convulse me! Freddie wouldn't stroll a block for a caravan! He allus evaporates right after supper an' doesn't float through our door again till the zero hour, an' he ain't been to no library, neither. When he returns he's so wobbly that he can hardly drop his anchor, an' he smells like a collision between a pair of beer trucks. Baby, what a whale of a difference just a few scents make! Sa-a-y, the hardest work that bimbo does is ride the Frosh. O, how that hombre loves tuh sink his spurs into the Green Caps! What a Campus Cossack he turned out to become! Still, me an' him gits along swell!"

QUESTION: "Duzzee go in heavy for Alcoholic Exercise?"

ANSWER: "O, duzzee! That youth can sling Merry Mucilage past his Adam's apple so fast that his tonsils never git a chance to dodge! Every bartender in America grinned when our hero was born. Every other baby in our town cried for the moon but this bozo cried for hip pockets in his rubber panties. Sa-a-y, he won't learn to play Bridge because the word reminds him of water!"

Crashed for the Blond.

QUESTION: "Izzee well supplied wit' bucks?"

ANSWER: "Yeh, I fear so—he's only two weeks behind wit' his share o' the room rent—I'm SIX. Yeh, he's fairly loose wit' his wampum."

QUESTION: "Duzzee gallop out much wit' the Sorority Inmates?"

ANSWER: "Naw, he steers clear o' them Minnehahas! He used tuh trade strangle-holds wit' one o' them Elves but she squeezed too hard one night an' rattled a bone in his neck. Har, har, an' tears of unrestrained mirth! 'Listen, Spider,' says him tuh her, 'crawl back into your web an' park there, because this fly ain't wrestlin' you no more until some o' your brute strength deserts yuh!' He meant it, too—he still passes The Elves' Dugouts on the dead gallop! But, if you're asking me—which would be unbelievable—I think he's skidded outa the frying utensil into the hot embers, because I hear he just crashed loudly for the wicked Blond which shuffles the crockery in Smith's Food Foundry downtown. Har, har!"

QUESTION: "Yeh? What's so funny about that?"

ANSWER: "O, me! O, my! O, us! You ain't heard somethin' yet! That Filly is just full of bright sayings! 'Aha,' she says tuh me, 'so you is a college student, huh? Well, why don'tcha git outa the rut?' 'I don't connect with your meaning,' says him tuh she. 'That's just one of your habits,' says her tuh him, 'you are allus fumbling good advice. However, yuh got the right idea by snugglin' up tuh me, because I'm a wow when it comes tuh guiding uncertain little footsteps towards Success. I'll make somethin' outa yuh yet!' Har, har! I'll say she will! He'll soon be using nothin' but bananas an' peanuts for stomach fuel. Yuh can expect tuh see him breezin' across the campus some mornin' wit' a cocoanut under each elbow. I allus kids him about her but he never gets real sore. Yeh, me an' him gits along swell!"

The Bunion Battle.

QUESTION: "Didja know that the Math prof bawled him out yesterday mornin' for coming late to class?"

ANSWER: "I ain't capable of registering Incredulity! He was only ahead of time once in his life. Har, har! He sure caused lots o' wear an' tear on the neighborhood calendars on that occasion! Aw, that Math prof! Sa-a-y, I'll sell yuh my share o' that simp for a dime an' I won't even question the coin's genuineness! Cheat me if yuh want—make me an offer!"

QUESTION: "You ain't slopping over wit' affection for him, huh?"

ANSWER: "O, superfluous conversation! O, wanton waste of words! O, hell! Believe it or not, but they got the idea for mechanical refrigeraprof's noble features. One of his early lectures inspired some inventor, an' it resulted in the Hot Blast Furnace. tion by just gazing upon the Math Anyhow, that's my narrative an' I'm glued to it."

QUESTION: "Yuh gonna be at the Bunion Battle tonight?"

ANSWER: "Well, I hope tuh inform yuh in the affirmative! I wouldn't miss hearing that orchestra on a bet. O, person, can't that outfit exhale Fahrenheit, though?"

* *

Hauling Edna.

QUESTION: "Yuh draggin' any extra feet wit' yuh?"

ANSWER: "I ain't saying 'no.' I'm hauling Edna. Yuh want the fourth Clinch wit' her? I've already signed up to fight the first t'ree rounds. Yeh? All right, I'll asker. Well, s'long."

QUESTION: "Where yuh goin' now?"

ANSWER: "Back tuh my igloo tuh chew the fabric wit' Freddie. He's probably gonna show up this P. M. wit' his Crockery Smasher. If he does I'll sling razz at him forever—he won't git sore—me an' him gits along swell! Adios!"

QUESTION: "Whoa! Cease motion! Don't be in such a haste to disappear beyond the horizon yet, because I wouldst ask thee a couple vital questions. Yea, two questions I wouldst fling at thee. Wouldst hear them?"

ANSWER: "Let it happen! Toss 'em one at a time—don't crowd my intellect. What's the first question?"

* *

Headed for Tepee.

QUESTION: "Lend me ten berries?"

ANSWER: "Me? You flatterer! Turn me upside down an' shake me, an' I'll give yuh 80 per cent of anything you find. If you find anything the first time, I'll pay yuh a salary to shake me from now on. The tailor what put pockets in this pair of pants was a humorist, doggone him! I'm as free from shekels as a butterfly is from teeth. I git money from home about as often as One-Eyed Connelly buys a ticket from the scalpers. That's that! Now, what's the other question?"

QUESTION: "Lend me five berries?"

ANSWER: "Listen, Dumber Than Necessary, are yuh sure yuh don't want tuh ask me three questions? No? Yes?"

QUESTION: "Gimme a buck, willya? Lend me a frogskin?"

ANSWER: "That's more like it! Here's 10 cents—I'll slip yuh the other 90 tonight."

QUESTION: "Well, see that yuh don't forget! I hate like hell tuh have anybody owe me money! Gimme a cigaret, willya?"

ANSWER: "Ain't got none. Don't forget tuh gimme back my dollar heap much pronto. S'long. I'm headed for my tepee. If I don't see yuh tonight I'll look for yuh in the Comic Section next Sunday."

HER BOWER OF ROSES

OUT at 4438 North Menard avenue Mrs. Arthur H. Janush has a rose bower reminiscent of the days before apartments and the rush for urban life almost blotted out the old-fashioned scenes of beauty. Her large pergola is almost entirely covered with the blooms—something rarely seen in the present-day city.

Turkish Women Ignore Orders to Remove Veil

CONSTANTINOPLE.—(AP)—Public antagonism has forced the Turkish government to abandon strict enforcement of the prohibition against veils for women and fezes for men.

The older generation will be left to follow the old customs and efforts henceforth will be centered in persuading the young people of Turkey to obey the regulations designed to westernize the country.

Stories are told of Turkish girls who leave their homes for school each morning demurely veiled. At a safe distance from their parents they produce a tam o' shanter or other western hat, remove their veils, and go on their way.

Palatial Air Liners Ready for Sea Trip

England Hopes to Be First to Cross Ocean.

LONDON.—(AP)—Great Britain has thrown her last reserves of science into the fight to wrest from Germany the honor of launching the first trans-Atlantic air liner.

Two giants of the air, the British R-100 now being built at Howden and the German LZ-127 nearing completion at Friedrichshafen, will make their first flights soon. The one finished first will be recorded in history as making the first commercial flight over the Atlantic.

The Germans are now in the lead. Their Zeppelin is expected to be in the air before the middle of August, whereas it will be toward the end of September before the British are ready to test the R-100. Construction difficulties, the failure of materials to arrive and other factors may alter this prospect.

* *

Cost Millions.

For many months in the giant sheds at Howden and Friedrichshafen hundreds of workmen have been climbing like spiders over the largest metal sausages in the world.

Each of the new dirigibles is bulkier than an ocean liner. The metal skeleton is covered with cotton fabric which has been treated with aluminum paint. Each has cost millions of dollars to construct. When completed, as they hope to be, within a month or two, the two airships, each on its own route, will inaugurate a line of commercial air travel across the Atlantic. The R-100 expects to make a direct crossing from Cardington, England, to New York, and the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen to the Azores and then to New York.

Imagine an airship comprising three decks, the two upper decks for the passengers, and the lower for the crew. Imagine a dining room capable of holding 50 persons, floor on which the entire passenger list can dance, promenade decks, comfortable cabins, all in an airship.

* *

World's Greatest On Way.

Each airship is capable of carrying a passenger list of 100 and a crew of 40, but the Germans plan to carry only 20 passengers and concentrate on mail and valuable cargo.

Meanwhile in the background looms up the tremendous shape of what will be the greatest airship in the world, the R-101, which is building at Cardington, England. It will not be ready until next year, and will then be placed in use on a route to India.

The R-101 embodies a number of new structural ideas, among them being the use of steel in the framework, instead of duralumin, steel being four times stronger. The R-101 will carry 25 tons of fuel.

English Writer Claims That Sun Does the Moving

LONDON.—(AP)—A book attempting to prove that the sun revolves around the earth has just been published in England.

It was written by William Edgell of Gloucestershire, and sums up his experiments extending over thirty years. For the last two years he has had a telescope trained on the pole star and night after night he has watched for some sign of motion.

Has the star budged? It has not. But the case of the sun is different. In the morning it was shining in Mr. Edgell's front garden and in the evening it was over the back garden. The argument is impregnable, but the book contains added proof in experiments with oranges, smoke, pendulums, eclipses, and tides.

On Political Fence.

DURHAM, S. C.—(AP)—A. H. Shearer, newest addition to the Shearer family of Oak Grove township, will bear the name of the next President of the United States. If the New York governor wins, the baby will be called Alfred H. Shearer. Should the Republican win, the parents will name the child A. Hoover Shearer.

UNDER HIS LEMON TREE

JOHN A. WOLNEWICZ, 2453 Montrose avenue, enjoys tropical vegetation without leaving Chicago. In his florist shop he has several lemon trees, one of which, as you will note, is tall enough for him to stand beneath. It appears that before long the crop will be ready for John to pick. He hasn't decided whether to turn the fruit into pie or lemonade.

Shoppers' Service Tales

Accommodating.

Several weeks ago I had occasion to use a special size pasteboard box and looked in vain for it until I went downtown to make a purchase. While in one of the large department stores I asked a floorwalker if there would be a chance of procuring the desired box. He at once called an attendant to whom I described the size and kind of box I wished, and directly he returned with precisely the kind I wished.

I offered to pay for it, but he declined to accept it, expressing his pleasure in accommodating a patron. The following week my husband wished to buy a summer suit and I suggested going to the store where I had been treated so kindly.

His purchase, and the treatment accorded him, has proven highly satisfactory, and I am glad for the privilege of saying a kind word for our Chicago stores.

C. M. M.

Honesty Plus Courtesy.

While shopping in the book department of a large downtown store, I was short changed $2.

Never looking, I put the money in my pocket. Half an hour later, passing the same department, I heard some one calling. Turning around I found the clerk extending my change.

That is my idea of the height of honesty and the store has won my everlasting patronage. J. H. S.

Store Made It Right.

My sister purchased an attractive sports coat of white chinchilla at one of the leading department stores of Chicago. Opening the box after returning home, she noticed a flaw in the front of the coat. Unable to return it herself, I gladly consented to take it back where, I might add, courtesy reigns, for the head of the coat department ushered me to a seat, whereupon he took the bill and coat and said he would see what he could do.

Inside of ten minutes he returned with over a three dollar reduction if I would keep the coat. I did not have to go to the adjusting bureau or to this head man or that for signatures. I had a comfortable seat and real service.

Would I trade there again? Always. E. H.

Girls in Japan Win Romance and Free Baths

Victory Comes to Workers in Textile Factory.

TOKIO.—(AP)—A strike of working girls in a large Japanese textile factory won a momentous victory including "freedom of marriage" and free baths every day.

The right of girl employes to marry has long been a bone of contention between workers and manufacturers. The strike came about when the owners of the Tokio Muslin company attempted to enforce to the letter their rule against romance.

The custom of enforcing the antimarriage rule has been in vogue for many years, the argument of the employers being that most of the girl workers are too young to marry and, if they do so, their value to factory work is greatly depreciated.

The girl employés of the muslin company, besides their insistence on freedom of marriage within the factory, also demanded freedom of leaving the factory premises for recreation after 11 p. m.; appointment of special physicians and surgeons for night shifts; adoption of a system of discharge allowances and bonuses for continuous service; better food at lower prices; free tickets for bath houses every day; special cooling facilities during the hot months; payment of half-day wages on national holidays.

Virtually all of these demands were granted.

High Cost of Brides Stirs Syrian Youths

DAMASCUS, Syria.—(AP)—The high price of brides is beginning to worry young and marriageable men in the east.

A massmeeting held here recently elected a committee to seek a modification of the custom requiring a man who would marry to pay over a handsome sum of money to the father of the girl of his choice. The western custom is more to the liking of the eastern swain.

The men working for the reform say that they are not impelled by selfish motives, but are interested in the welfare of the state; marriages they say are on the decrease owing to the greed of parents who have been raising prices in the marriage markets.

B. A.'s Turning A. B.'s Stir Ire of First Mates

But College Lads Do Like to Go to Sea.

But this friend knows the fifth vice president of the Blank Steamship company. It is all really very simple.

Coiling the Rope.

Then a B. A., clad possibly in a light gray herringbone of the latest cut and wearing a loudly banded panama twitched rakishly over one eye, a sea bag in one hand and a mandolin case in the other, trips blithely along the incredulous waterfront in search of "his" ship. Already influenced by the salty atmosphere, he swing up the gangplank with all the nautical slouch and roll of a deck hand on a municipal ferry boat.

The mate, having read the proffered letter, smiles bleakly, tells the B. A. that he is hired, and vows that the next time that nuisance in a swivel chair wants a case of champagne smuggled in he can buy it on West Houston street instead, and may he be right royally stung!

On leaving port a B. A.'s first job is to assist in coiling and stowing the many fathoms of wire rope that lie snarled up on deck. There is nothing in the world more perverse than wire rope. Catch it in the right mood and it coils itself; try to force it and it leaps eagerly up and puts out an eye, usually waiting to do this until you have eight fathoms or so neatly coiled, which is exasperating. Then, too, since it is always old and badly frayed, it cuts unaccumstomed hands until they literally drip blood.

Finds Sea Is Salty.

By the time it is stowed, the pilot has left, hatches are battened tight, and the mate, who is in a happier mood, orders that the decks be washed down. Since sea water is used and since the action of salt on open cuts is distinctly stimulating, this job impresses upon the B. A. the fact that in this latitude and longitude the sea is decidedly salty. When, a little later, he is put to washing paint work with strong lye water, he begins to wish, especially if a long voyage lies ahead, that he had signed on a Jersey Central boat instead for the trip from Liberty street to Atlantic highlands.

If he has made the mistake of saying "sir" to the faintly incredulous bosun, it is entirely possible that on the trip out the B. A. will devote himself exclusively to washing paint, and on the trip home to painting. If, on the other hand, he has had the good sense to go aboard unshaven, to look surly and to keep his mouth shut, he may fare better, perhaps even be put on watch.

Fine View of Moonrise.

On the north Atlantic in winter a night watch is not a desirable assignment in July or August, however, it is very pleasant. During the first two hours of a four hour watch his duties may be no more onerous than to stand on the navigating bridge where he rings the ship's bell on each hour and half hour and reports to the mate in charge. For the remaining two hours he may stand alone, far above the sea, on lookout in the crow's nest.

The faint occasional strains of music that reach him from the orchestra far aft accentuates his isolation, the magnificent loneliness of the night, and he sees moonrise at sea as no passenger lounging on the promenade deck has ever seen it.

Although this seems a most desirable assignment, it is sad to remember that an uneasy stomach can ruin one's appreciation of even the loveliest of tropic nights and that two inches of motion on deck may mean two feet or more in the nest.

May Choose Bed on Deck.

This ship was a sailor's paradise. There are others, however, far different and far more numerous. On many of them the bugs have been thriving and multiplying for thousands of bug generations. Having fared badly on the tough hides of thoroughly salted A. B.'s they flock joyously to the tender B. A. As a result, he sleeps in the fo'c'sle on his first night aboard, perhaps for only a part of it, and then transfers to the bare deck where he sleeps well save on those occasions when he is disturbed by rain or cold, or, perhaps, by a venturesome rat scampering over his face.

On a ship of this sort even a B. A. with a seaworthy stomach may starve in the midst of plenty, for that plenty may be of such nauseating quality that he prefers to heave it through a porthole before rather than after eating. The potatoes have gangrene, the rice pudding is sour, and the meat can be cut only if cut with the grain.

When the food is as bad as this everything else is usually in keeping. There will be only two watches, which means that a man is four hours on duty, four off, four on and four off for days on end. The disadvantages are obvious.

* *

Complain to Captain.

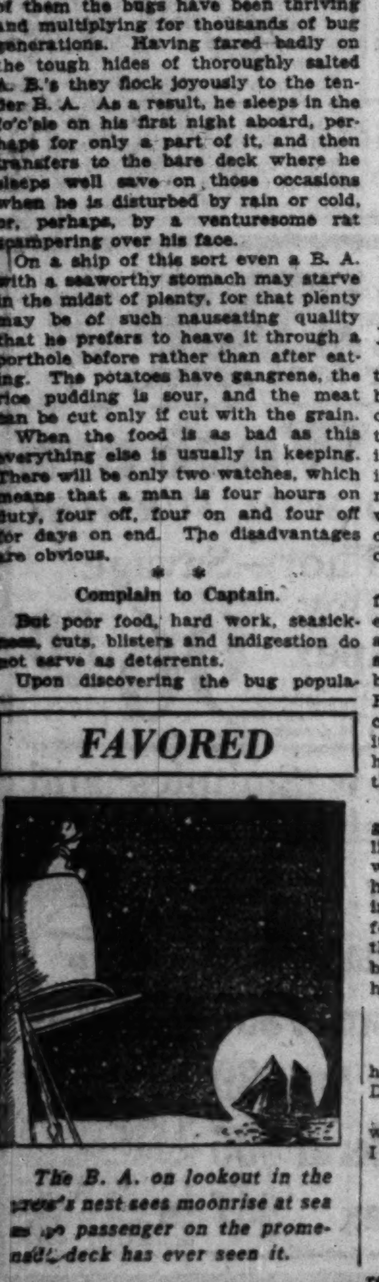
But poor food, hard work, seasickness, cuts, blisters and indigestion do not serve as deterrents.

Upon discovering the bug population of the fo'c'sle a group of college boys once took the matter up with the chief executive of the ship, the captain, who made the mistake of treating the complaint lightly. He smilingly assured them that they must be mistaken since he felt sure that there were no bugs on his ship, asked solicitously if they had been assigned deck chairs, and dismissed them.

They went immediately to the fo'c'sle, collected several dozen assorted bugs and returned with them to the astounded captain. Was the milk sour? They carried the pitcher to the bridge and asked that he smell it. He proclaimed the milk above suspicion, and they demanded that he taste it. Although he was a patient man, he gradually wearied of this sort of thing.

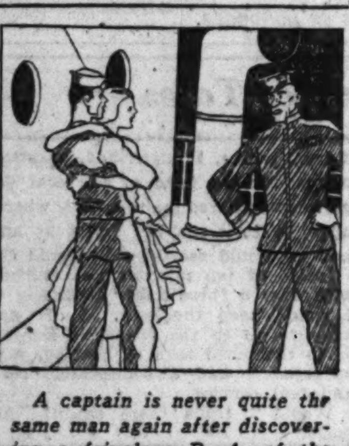
He suffered what was perhaps his greatest shock on a romantic moonlit night somewhere on the Caribbean, when, in the shadows of the boat deck, he discovered a handsome young B. A. in dirty blue dungarees tenderly enfolding a charming young lady from the first cabin. Since then he has not been the same man. Mutiny would have been a less heinous crime.

FAVORED



The B. A. on lookout in the crow's nest sees moonrise at sea as no passenger on the promenade deck has ever seen it.

SHOCKING



A captain is never quite the same man again after discovering a frivolous B. A. of the fo'c'sle tenderly enfolding a young lady from the first cabin.

CORRECT DIAGNOSIS.

"Mother," sighed little Johnny, "I had such an awful dream last night! Does it mean anything?"

"Yes. It means that I know now what became of that apple cake that I couldn't find last night."

DICTUM.

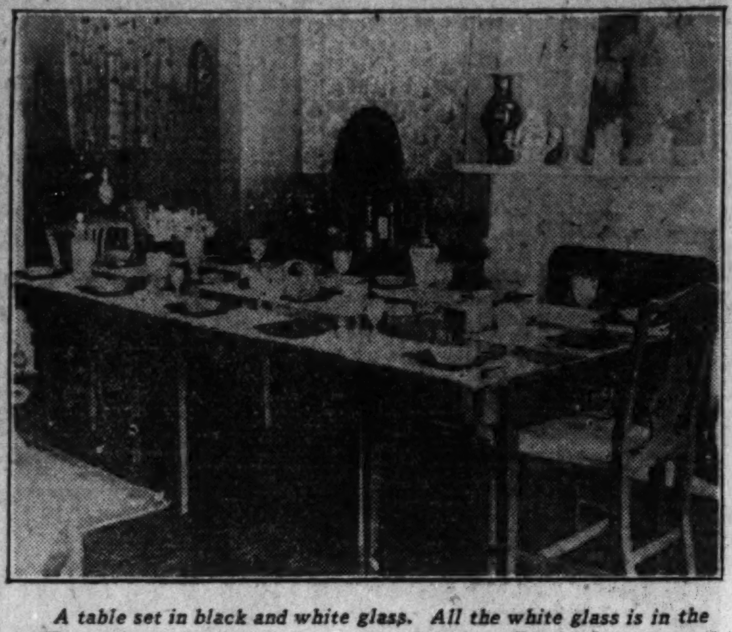
"Smoking affects the heart."

"Favorably?"

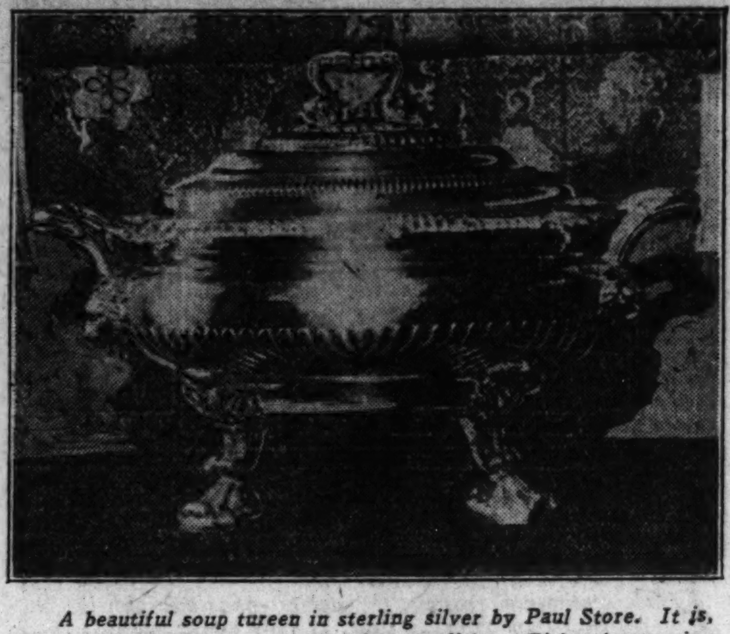
"No, you can't win a girl with cigarets."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DECORATIVE PIECES FOR THE HOME

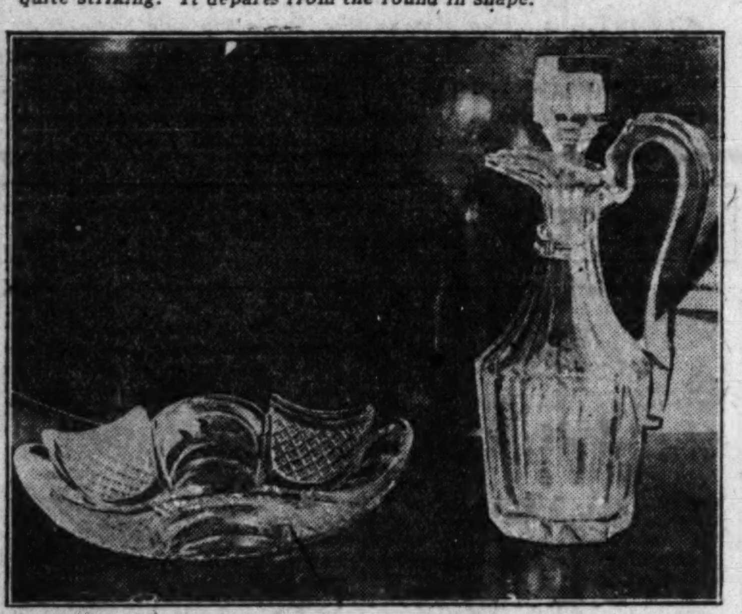
Interesting Offerings of Both Antique and Modernistic Design



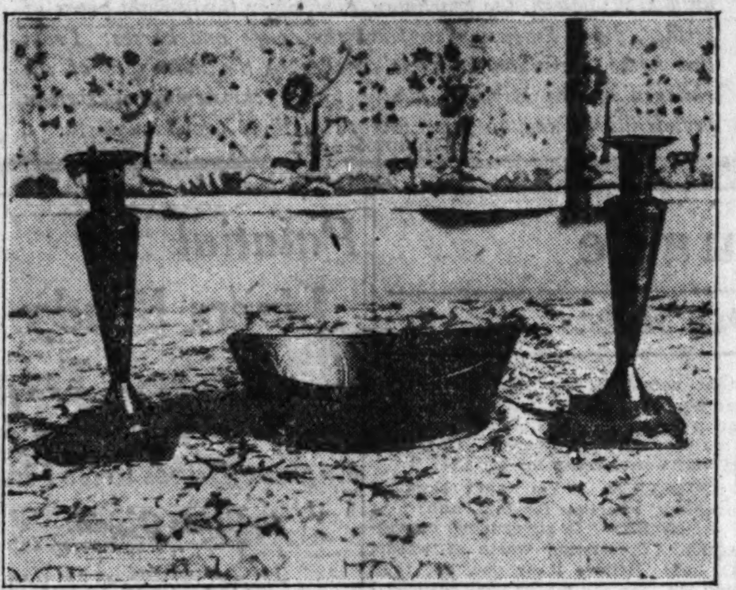
A table set in black and white glass. All the white glass is in the waffle pattern of pressed glass coveted by a collector for country house use. It is sturdy and honest and, combined with the black, is quite striking. It departs from the round in shape.



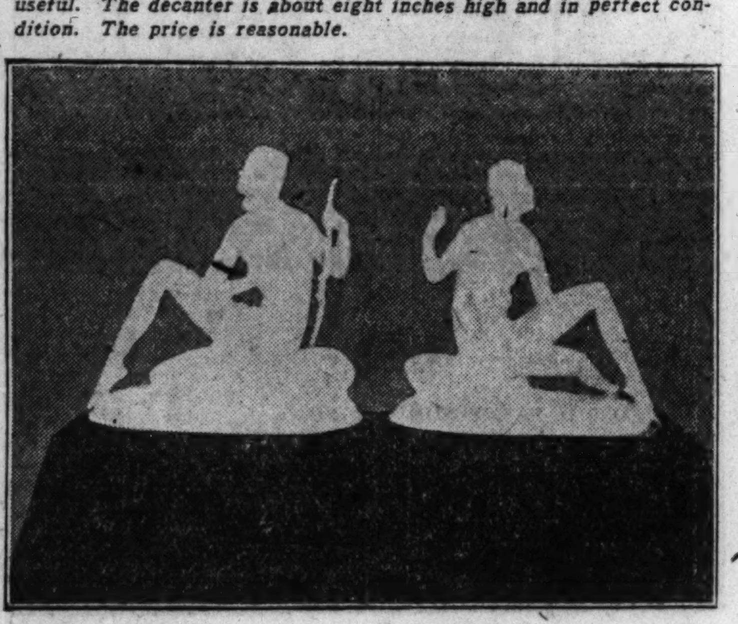
A beautiful soup tureen in sterling silver by Paul Store. It is, of course, a rare piece, and in perfect condition. Either for serving hot dishes or for a centerpiece, it is superb.



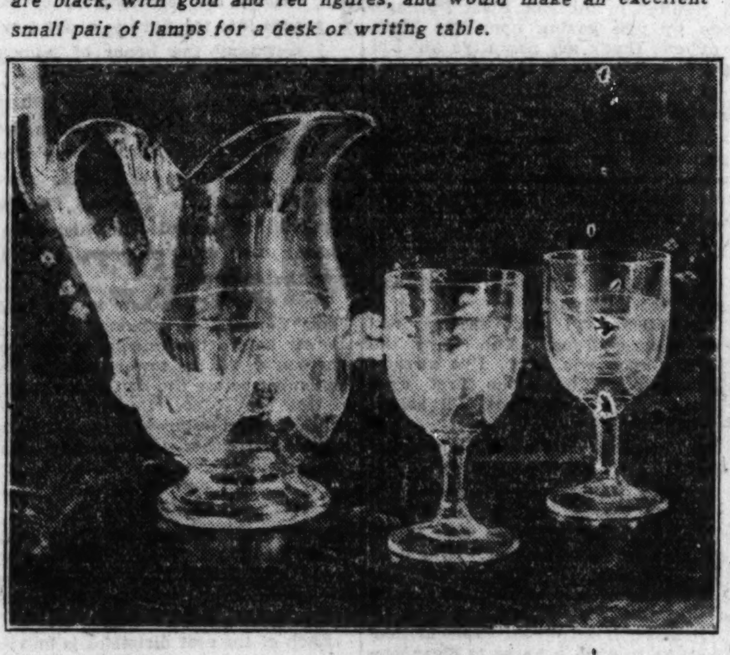
Two pieces of Irish glass. Both old, both beautiful, and both useful. The decanter is about eight inches high and in perfect condition. The price is reasonable.



A fine pair of tole candlesticks and a tole dish. The candlesticks are black, with gold and red figures, and would make an excellent small pair of lamps for a desk or writing table.



A pair of fine faience figures in all white. They are unusually graceful and lend themselves happily to the decoration of a mantelpiece. They would also be delightful among ferns on a dining table.



Some historic pressed glass made to commemorate the death of President Garfield. Note the Victorian garlands of mourning. It is all white and would make a delightful lemonade or ice tea set.

Finding a Treasure.

Speaking of bargains, I think I have had the best luck yet. One afternoon my father and I were out in the country driving. As we drove along, we suddenly experienced the sensation of a flat tire. Father stopped the car, and in order to get off the road pulled up into a rather hospitable looking farm yard, not far away.

As he started to change the tire, a nice little old woman came down to where we were and began to chat with us. Before long, she asked me if I wouldn't like to come into the house and rest. I accepted the invitation and as we entered I was delighted with what I saw. The place was veritably full of marvelous old furniture.

The woman, doubtless unaware of its value, tried to excuse its age and shabbiness. Among all the pieces, I was particularly taken with a gorgeous mahogany chest of drawers which was pushed back in a corner as though in the way. I finally ventured a question as to whether it would be possible for me to buy it.

The owner asked me what I ever could do with the old thing. I assured her I could use it all right, and she told me she thought that perhaps five dollars would be a lot for it.

I fairly shouted "sold," and dashed back to the car to get my father before something happened to shatter my good luck. J. L. T.

Fur for Ten Dollars.

One day as I happened to be walking through one of the department stores I noticed a beautiful fox fur neckpiece on a table.

I asked the saleslady how much it was and she said $10. Thinking it was quite cheap, I purchased it.

After a few years it needed to be cleaned, so I brought it to a furrier. He told me that that kind of fur was very rare and it was worth at least $100. C. O'C.

Money from Old Furniture.

While living in a small western town some years ago I bought two pieces of furniture from a neighbor who was moving away.

One was a neat looking white kitchen cabinet, in good condition, price one dollar. I gave it two coats of white enamel, which I had in the house, left from the bedroom woodwork. When I finished, the cabinet was a beauty. I used that cabinet five years and then sold all my household goods at a sale and it brought four and a half dollars.

The other piece of furniture was an old fashioned washstand. I paid twenty-five cents for it.

Having oak floor varnish on hand, I gave it a coat. I used it five years as a radio stand. At my sale it brought two dollars.

Fair enough! M. L. W.

Among Old Bottles.

I was called in by a housewife to buy and clear away a quantity of old bottles for which I paid a few cents. In sorting them I found a full bottle of pre-war whisky worth $6.

Evidently friend husband had been holding out on wifie. C. S. W.

Paris Curbs Craze for Street Statues

PARIS.—(AP)—The municipal council decreed that no more statues were to be erected in the Champ de Mars, the park around the Eiffel tower.

Attempts to curb the French passion for statuary began many years ago. In 1906 measures were taken to restrict their number and several well known quarters of the city are now under the ban.

Illusion Aids in Home Life of Magicians

Wives Claim Happiness Is Due to Mystery.

IS it possible that some sort of perpetual mystery in the home is the thing that will keep a lifelong bloom on the romance of marriage? Should a modern husband have some new and surprising daily magic up his sleeve in order to keep a few amusing paces ahead of his wife's perspicacity, and thus maintain his place as a wonderworker in her imagination? And is it advisable for the wife to have her own secret storehouse of mystery whose shelves are never empty?

Two New York women with many years of happy marriage in retrospect answer yes to all three questions. They are Mrs. Harry Houdini and Mrs. Howard Thurston, widow and wife of famous magicians. Mrs. Houdini believes that throughout the thirty-three years of her married life she was the happiest of women.

Mrs. Thurston considers herself the happiest wife in the world. Both these women think it is possible — and profitable—for two people to live together in the closest harmony for years and years and yet keep certain reserves from each other. It seems that magicians and their wives always live like that, and that nobody ever heard of an unhappy marriage in a magician's home.

Both Had Secrets.

It was Mrs. Houdini who recently turned the searchlight on a certain technique of successful wifehood by admitting that in their lifetime together there were things in her mind day after day of which her husband knew nothing at all. Chief among these secrets was her occasional inability to see through much of the magic he performed for the public. That confession came when a committee of magicians asked her to do an act at the recent annual dinner of the Society of American Magicians, of which her husband had been president eight times. They only wanted something simple — pulling rabbits out of a hat, a necktie trick, or showing the guests articles that would disappear astonishingly from her hands.

"But I can't do these tricks. I don't know how," Mrs. Houdini protested.

Never Asked to Explain.

The magicians couldn't believe it. Hadn't she seen Houdini do them hundreds of times? If she didn't know how, it was time she learned. They would teach her. And they did. Three days were spent in tutoring and rehearsing. Mrs. Houdini appeared on the dinner program and gave a successful and amusing performance.

It was all right to tell these acquaintances how little she knew. But there is a convention that magicians' wives must never admit to their husbands that they do not understand and never ask a husband to explain his mysteries.

The Thurston Home.

Does some strange fabric of illusion surround the spacious Long Island home of the Howard Thurstons? Many years ago it was the home of another pair of famous magicians who were very happy there—the late Alexander Herrmann and his wife Adelaide, who still lives in New York.

Mrs. Thurston fancies that sometimes in the evening she sees "the great Herrmann" walking about under the trees—wide spreading Japanese willows, beeches, Chinese maples, silver spruces, cherry trees—and she imagines that he exercises a beneficent influence on all the strange acts that are invented there.

There is a studio on the grounds where tricks are tried out. Would a wife, who is also costumer and designer of stage sets, demand a detailed analysis of the conjurer's art that goes on there? O dear, no! There are things that are never done, words that are never spoken in a magician's family. Take all the mystery out of any relation in life and what have you got left?

Kept Her Popeyed.

Mrs. Thurston never goes to the studio while her husband and his Hindu helpers are working there. She admitted that much of their magic is a mystery to her for weeks at a stretch, that her husband has kept her popeyed ever and anon since she was seventeen. Now their daughter, Jane, is seventeen—a beautiful girl, a singer and dancer and enough of a magician to be preparing for her debut in her father's company next season.

"The mechanical tricks no longer puzzle me," Mrs. Thurston said, "but the psychological magic does. Mr. Thurston's 'suspended animation' mystery I do not understand at all. I don't delve into it much. After watching my husband all these years I do not know how to perform magic. He seems to take it for granted that I know what he knows."

* *

Mystify the Magician.

Both Mrs. Houdini and Mrs. Thurston admit that while it is the magician's business to mystify an audience it is the wife's business to mystify the magician to the extent of convincing him that she understands his tricks whether she does or not.

They both believe that living loses nothing from being embellished by certain amusing byplay, and that any intelligent couple ought to be able to go on being interesting to each other if they will take half as much trouble about being mysterious after marriage as they did before.

Mrs. Houdini intimated that one might as well realize that one never knows what the other is hiding, and that perhaps it is as well not to know. She did not know until after her husband's death that several women, one a widow whom she considered a very dear friend, had been writing love letters to Houdini. She found them in a file, with carbon copies of her husband's replies. There was no word in these answers to make any wife less happy. Still, Mrs. Houdini wishes he hadn't kept that a secret from her. The letters were, of course, returned to the senders for safekeeping. But it could have been possible to have sent them back sooner!

Child Shipments from Hungary on the Increase

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—More than 15,000 destitute Hungarian children have been adopted by families in Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Switzerland and France.

The Hungarian government became sponsor for the movement to find homes abroad for offspring of the exhausted war generation after all public institutions had become overcrowded.

A national women's organization has taken active charge of this unusual "export" trade and is preparing to submit a plan to the United States government whereby Hungarian children could be adopted by American families in addition to the regular quota.

English Radio Fans Anxious for Dialogue

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A new use for dio was found here recently in con ection with motor races between Lon and Holyhead. Hamlet on the Air.

Shakespeare went on the radio in ndon recently when for the first e a more or less complete version Hamlet was broadcast. As only an ur and a half was available for performance, there were necessary but a reader linked up the breaks the play, and the main scenes were sented in their entirety. Whether ghost of Shakespeare listened in the spectral performance or not one has hazarded a guess, but if did the sounds of his famous char cter's words coming from empty air robably succeeded in making "each dividual hair to stand on end like uills upon the fretful porcupine."

The formation of a national chorus 250 voices primarily for broadcast g purposes has been begun by the British Broadcasting association. The organization will be made up strictly amateurs who are members of other oral societies of London and vicinity. is to be heard not only over the dio, but also at the B. B. Lessons in Auction Bridge

BY R. M. ROGERS.
ARTICLE XX.

R. M. ROGERS.

Hands at bridge are divided into three general classes: normal, about 70 per cent; abnormal, 22 per cent; and freaks the other 8 per cent.

In these articles we have given the bidding conventions of normal hands and the minimum number of tricks the bidder must hold in order to make a bid, the number of tricks his partner is assumed to hold in order that the partner may win the bid, and the assumption that if it is a suit bid the kind of trumps credited to the player at the left of the bidder. Subsequently, both the support of the partner and further advances by the original bidder tell the definite story of the number of tricks held in the two hands. This is what is known as scientific bidding and announces [in the language of the game] exactly the minimum number of tricks there are in the two hands under the assumptions. The only variance therefrom arises in the possibility that the left hand opponent does not hold the trump cards accredited to him. We have also given the method of handling two of the three kinds of abnormal hands. The method of handling the 3 suitor will come later.

In this article we will take up the method of bidding "freak hands"—namely: hands that contain seven or more cards of one suit, as freaks of two 6 card suits follow the plan laid down for two 5 card suits.

A partnership game is a misnomer unless partners coöperate; in other words, tell each other those things which are permissible both in the bidding and in the play.

No one can satisfactorily coöperate who has not learned the conventions of bidding generally recognized, and concerning which there is no practical dissension among experts, or those having a standing as authors on the game. Writing a book on it does not of itself give the author a standing, nor make the author an authority, as that requires the support of experts of experience. No one particular person as a writer on bridge who has yet reached recognition has "the standard authority."

The articles published in this paper outline only such conventions as are in perfect harmony with the views of recognized experts and about which there is no controversy in the Auction Bridge magazine, a publication interested in bringing to the attention of bridge players any and all questions that make for the improvement of the greatest of card games.

Original bids only are conventionally recognized as definitely informatory as to the number of quick tricks in the bidder's hands, and if a suit bid, positive location of one of them and the minimum number of tricks that the hand will win at the specified declaration.

A bid of one in a suit says to partner this hand contains 4 tricks, 2 of them quick and 1 in the suit bid. A bid of 2 says this hand has 6 cards in the suit named headed by ace, king, queen, or practically 6 tricks, and a side card of reëntry. Any other suit bid of 2 is what is known as an auction crime. A bid of 3 says to partner this hand has not the quick tricks required for a bid of 1 or 2, and is practically worthless, except at the trump named, and with that trump I can take 6 tricks in my own hand. When a higher bid is made it means an additional trick in the bidder's hands.

There are two kinds of freak hands, one of which should never be shown in the first round of the bidding, and the other should have two or more quick tricks and should be bid on the first round to go game, with the assumption that partner will hold two tricks in support of the bid. This means that a preëmptive or shut out bid should be four in the major suit and five in the minor suit, and that the bidder of a major suit shall have eight tricks in his own hand, and the bidder of the minor suit must have nine tricks in his own hand.

A preëmptive bid does not necessarily prevent a partner from bidding, but he would be expected to keep still unless he had as good a hand with four honors, and he would be expected to support the preëmptive bid the first round if there was an overbid by opponents to show that he held at least the number of tricks assumed by his partner to be in his hands.

A bid of less than five in a minor suit is not preëmptive nor good judgment. If a minor suit is not worth a bid of five, a bid of three rather than four would be better, or a bid of one, if it has the requisites that bid.

It is occasionally true that a hand has neither the requisites conventionally for a bid of one, or two, or four or five, and yet holds a probability of a game with a suit trump and that has a bar to bidding no trump, as for example, void of a suit or holding a singleton and such a hand will take a bid of three. For example:

Spades—K, J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2.
Hearts—K, 9.
Diamonds—8.
Clubs—A, K, 2.
Or
Spades—A, 5, 4.
Hearts—A, Q, 8, 7, 5, 3, 2.
Diamonds—5.
Clubs—J, 8.

The first example above has not the conventional requirement for a bid of 1. The second has the requirement for such a bid, but a bid of 3 should be made in either case, as both are lacking the conventional holding required for a bid of 1 no trump.

It must be understood that in all that has been said above in regard to bidding, whether preëmptive or not, is for an original bid by a first or second hand. Original bids whether preëmptive or not made after two passes or three passes require the additional tricks that are recognized as necessary after the partner has passed.

A preëmptive bid of a freak hand would be an exhibition of poor judgment if the strength of the hand was distributed and the holding would permit a bid of 1 as a gradual advance in the bid might bring a double that could be defeated and would be worth more, as a shutout bid will not be doubled unless the doubler is sure of defeating it without any assistance from his partner, and that rarely happens. Raising the bid from 1 to 4 or 5 over opponents gives a greater opportunity for one of them to believe that what might have been a preëmptive bid can safely be doubled because it was not preëmptive.

Some excellent players do not use the preëmptive bid at all, and if they have not the requisites for a bid of 1 or 2, or 3, they wait until the second round to show the strength of their hand.

A preëmptive bid should be the first and last bid of the player that makes it, and any further action must depend wholly upon the partner who, if he advances the bid, will indicate thereby a greater holding than the original bidder assumed him to have. Last but not least, it is generally advisable to pass on the first round when holding a freak hand whose strength lies wholly in the suit and the suit is not established.

Allen McQuhae to Be Heard in Tennyson Lyric

Allen McQuhae, tenor, and the Sittig trio will present the concert in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight, to be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The string trio will play two numbers, with seven well known songs by the Irish tenor.

The concert falling on the eve of Tennyson's birthday, Mr. McQuhae will feature in his program the poet's best known love lyric, "Come Into the Garden, Maud," considered by critics one of the great love songs of the English tongue.

The tragic poem, "Maud," of which the song is a part, appeared in 1855.

The lyric is the climax to the story as the lovers were discovered in the garden and Maud's brother killed in the duel that followed.

The lover fled to Brittany, where he became insane following the sudden death of the 17 year old heroine.

McQuhae's program includes "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," "The Next Market Day," "Little Boy Blue," "Where My Caravan Has Rested," "Twilight Shadows Are Falling," and "I Heard You Singing." The trio will play "Swanee River" and Beethoven's minuet in G.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN A. RYAN.

THE biggest show on earth! Admission only three pins! Radio entertainment is as free as rain water. All you need to buy is something to catch it in. The good folk hold out their bushel basket radio horns and collect the manna from the heavens.

The broadcasters are the butter-and-egg men by appointment to his majesty, the American fan. They put the finest talent of the world at the beck and call of the public and never pass the hat.

Yet they have their sordidly materialistic moments. About eight times a day they sit down and ask, "Who's going to pay for it?"

As in the case of the weather and Charlie Dawes' pipe, everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything.

Of course, after five years of broadcasting gratis, it's rather late to suggest that Santa Claus operate on a strictly cash basis. The broadcasters should have laid down a box office plan before they rushed pell-mell into their philanthropies.

MANY a pretty theory has been teed up for consideration, and by and large they have all been sliced into the rough. Some have popped the question of licensing radio listeners, the proceeds to go to the broadcasters. Former Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has said of this:

"This country would never stand for licensing or taxing radio listeners. That idea works only when one company has a monopoly and all the revenue so derived goes into one pool. And we don't like monopoly. And, then, how are you going to have a police force snooping around for illicit aerials and searching people's homes?"

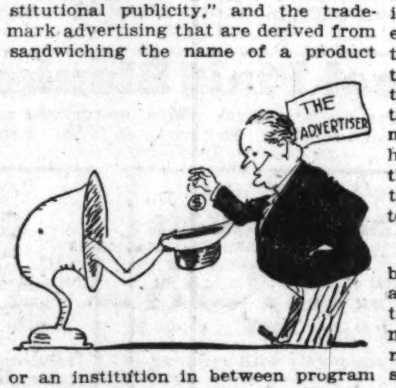
Of a proposed tax on radio equipment, Mr. Hoover stated:

"People go into the theaters and pay admission, and that solves the problem right there for the stage and concert hall; but it is obvious that there is no such way of getting the radio audience to pay for what it gets. So you've got to approach that some other way—leaving out the license tax scheme.

"I've heard only one very feasible suggestion. That is to fix a certain tax—say two per cent, for instance—on the sale of radio equipment. . . . You could provide enough that way to pay for daily programs of the best skill and talent throughout the year."

ONE STATION, WHB of Kansas City, inaugurated a plan of selling annual "box seats" to its "invisible theater," with printed programs and life size theater tickets being sent to all who contributed to the visible box office, entitling them to a specified seat. There were many voluntary contributions, but the stunt was abandoned after a while.

So, after all's said and little's done, we find the broadcasters reverting to the basic formula of program broadcasting—the brandishing of indirect advertising. The good will, the "institutional publicity," and the trademark advertising that are derived from sandwiching the name of a product or an institution in between program offerings warrant the broadcasting expenditures, they say.



The majority of the broadcasting stations advertise only one thing, the firm name of the organizations operating them, and this is construed not so much as advertising as it is an identification of the station the listener is hearing. Some stations maintain themselves as agencies for the advertising of others' trade names, selling time on the air as newspaper advertising space is sold. The advertisers may be charged from $75 to $1,000 an hour to present their entertainers on the air, the rates varying with the time of day and the extent of the territory the station covers.

A MOTLEY family is engaged in the business of broadcasting as an indirect advertising medium—radio manufacturers, theaters, newspapers, department stores, universities, state experimental stations, churches, fraternal socities, railroads, and hotels.

It's mild advertising and innocuous propaganda that are sustaining the radio stations and providing the biggest show on earth free of charge.

SUNDAY—AUGUST 5

"Heah Me Tawkin' to Yo!!!"

It's Fess Williams, and "heah him tawkin' to yo," tonight as he opens with an "e'spo'tulation" at 11 o'clock. He and Harry Gourfain have heaped hot note on top of blue note until they and their riot are ready to break out in the jazziest storm rhythm you ever heard. Just hear it and grin. Chuckle comfortably with Fess Williams, then just try to make your foot behave.

Fawn Post Trowbridge

ON Sunday afternoon in August it is certainly refreshing to hear the sweet soprano voice of Fawn Post Trowbridge. Her gay classics will certainly enliven you as she skips through difficult passages with remarkable ease. Her half hour begins at 2:10 this afternoon.

Tell Us Not in Mournful Numbers

W-G-N:

Sirs: Maybe you enjoy having your station sound like a funeral chapel, or maybe you just want no one to listen to it. At any rate, no matter which you are trying for, your station is a howling success.

We Keep Our Face Washed

W-G-N:

Gentlemen: Your program last evening was most enjoyable. I want to express my appreciation of Frank Smith. It is rarely one hears such clearness and beauty of tone.

May I add that your entertainment is always clean and wholesome and worth while at all times. Very truly yours,

D. H.

"YERROUT!"

THE Sox and the Yanks are going at it today out at the south side diamond at 2:55. It's going to be a good game and it's going to be broadcast to you from W-G-N. Make yourself some lemonade, set the loud-speaker out on the porch and see the Big Game through the eyes of the announcer from your favorite chair.

Salerno . . .

LAWRENCE SALERNO will entertain you, he will, too. You'll enjoy his expressive baritone voice as he sings those songs which come so naturally to him. He'll offer his melodious twenty-five minutes at 2:30 this afternoon.

Kazoo Turns Trick When Left on Table.

meal and chat with another waitress who, it seems, had a grudge against the bus boy for refusing to move a table for her.

My waitress took the blame on herself.

"I told him to put it there," she said; "that's what caused the misunderstanding."

I departed, leaving my table enriched only by the strategic kazoo. I was almost to the corner when I heard her running behind me.

"You forgot something," she cried breathlessly, and I turned to accept the instrument and her apologies for not seeing it sooner.

* *

The Start of the Pursuit.

In my earlier wanderings I had made a barber shop at 1165 East 53d street. I took a chair next to a woman who was having her iron gray hair "sculptured" into a boyish bob. The jolly little barber danced around her, snipping here and there, exclaiming over the beautiful lines in between snips.

"Ah," he gloated, "yesterday was a fine day, nice and hot. All the ladies that had been growing their hair for months came in and had it taken off. And shorter than before, mind you, too."

"Yeah," said one of the other chair occupants, "they take off their hair and their hose at the first sign of warm weather."

"Hose—stockings," wailed the little barber. "You don't mean to say it's the style to go without stockings now? Why, I get all the fashion magazines, and they never mentioned it. Well, I'll have to go home and tell my wife to take off her stockings. That's a style that might save me some money."

My barber was taciturn, attending to his business and nothing else, but the other one vindicated the good name of the profession, and kept up a chatter about this and that and even the other thing. The Heeney-Tunney fight was still on his mind.

"I don't care for Tunney," he said in his decidedly foreign tone. "But I'm glad an Englisher didn't beat an American."

I got my change and a card which told me I might have my hair bobbed at my residence by appointment, and went on down the street.

* *

The Parting of the Ways.

A telegraph office at 1459 East 53d street gave me a bright idea, and I walked in. I waited a while at the desk before a tall, cool blonde came to my assistance.

"I may want to send a telegram to Glenhaven, Mich.," I said. "How long will it take?"

"Half an hour," she said, just like that.

"O, but there isn't an office there," I countered.

"It will have to be routed through Traverse City and telephoned," she announced, after looking it up.

"They haven't got a telephone," I remarked, helpfully.

"It could be mailed," she suggested, "from Traverse City. You had better allow a day for it, then. Do you want to send it now?"

I didn't, and she turned away.

"Wouldn't it get there quicker," I persisted, "if it went by way of Empire?"

"I've already told you the only way it could go," she said firmly. So I went another way.

* *

The Neighborhood Nuisance.

At the I. C. station at 53d street I inquired about prices to the loop. I asked single, round trip, and ten ride rates, and received from the ticket agent brief but informative answers.

"Can you tell me how to get to the nearest public library?" I asked her then.

"There's one downtown," she said, proffering me a ticket.

I wanted one in the neighborhood.

"Well, I don't know where there's one, but she might," pointing to the collector.

I repeated my question to the collector.

"Sure," she said; "47th and Lake Park."

"How do you get there?"

"Take the street car right out here down to 47th, or maybe it's 48th," and, as I hesitated, she added: "You can't miss it; it's a large gray stone building."

* *

In Store and Restaurant.

But I didn't go to the library. Instead I went on down to a drug store at 5301 Hyde Park boulevard, bought a nickel's worth of Ju Ju beans, and gave the clerk the library test.

"Public library," she said, as though she had never heard of one. "No, I don't know of any around here."

So I asked how to get downtown.

"You can take the bus, the street car, or the I. C. from here," she said, and turned to the next customer.

A restaurant at 55th and Harper reminded me that I was hungry. My waitress was genial, but more interested in the men at the next table than in me.

She was angry for a moment when my salad had to be changed because of the dressing, but her good nature returned with the dessert.

"We have tapioca pudding and pie and ice cream," she offered. "The tapioca pudding is awfully nice."

I disagreed, and took the ice cream. She was swatting flies over in a corner when a fat youngster, reminiscent of Peck's bad boy, seized the swatter and began plying it on her. After a struggle she regained it and, rewarding him with a resounding swat, turned again to the less irritating flies.

Acquiring a Kazoo.

Down the street a ways I passed a music shop at 1173 East Fifty-fifth street. Intrigued by the toy saxophones in the window, I went in and priced them.

The girl showed me straight ones and curly ones and allowed me to demonstrate them myself. I was charmed, but the price, I declared, was too high. That brought the store manager to her aid.

"Show her the brass one, Marguerite," he said. Marguerite obeyed.

I admired the brass one, but not quite enough.

"See," he said, "the finish is beautiful and instruction books come with it. How old a boy did you want it for?"

"I wanted it for a joke, not a boy," I informed him.

He was a bit taken back. "Well, we have some kazoos made to look like saxophones. Marguerite, show her the kazoos. The single one and the double one and that long one there."

Marguerite obeyed, and I saw the kazoos and was given expert instruction in manipulating them. I sought the exit and finally gained it, not, however, without being accompanied by one of the kazoos.

A Riot of Boyhood.

A block or two down I ran into a baby riot. It looked as if all the boys in the world were congregated on that corner, swarming and pushing to get some place I couldn't quite see. I did a little pushing myself and made my way through to discover the cause —a sign outside the drug store at 901 East 55th street: "To Every Boy a Free Cone Between 2 and 3:30."

Inside, two clerks were filling and handing out cones as fast as they could work. One attendant stood at the doorway, trying to keep them in line and see that any one boy didn't get more than his share.

"It's a lot of fun for us," explained day, and we treated all the girls. We do it once every year."

I went out as a little two year old toddled in for his cone. He was folone of the clerks, "and the boys certainly appreciate it. You should have been here yesterday. It was ladies' lowed by a six footer who might have come under the classification of a boy, but who didn't look it.

The End of the Trail.

It was then that I went to the tea room and found my journey's end. When I went back the second time she was in the kitchen.

"Belle, O, Belle," they called, and she hurried out. I handed her the card, and she didn't know quite what to make of it.

"You've heard of the politeness award, haven't you?" I asked.

"Why, yes—why, no—I mean yes, of course!" Then she recovered herself and said prettily: "I consider it a great honor to be singled out for it. May I show it to the kitchen help?" And she rushed back to tell them the good news.

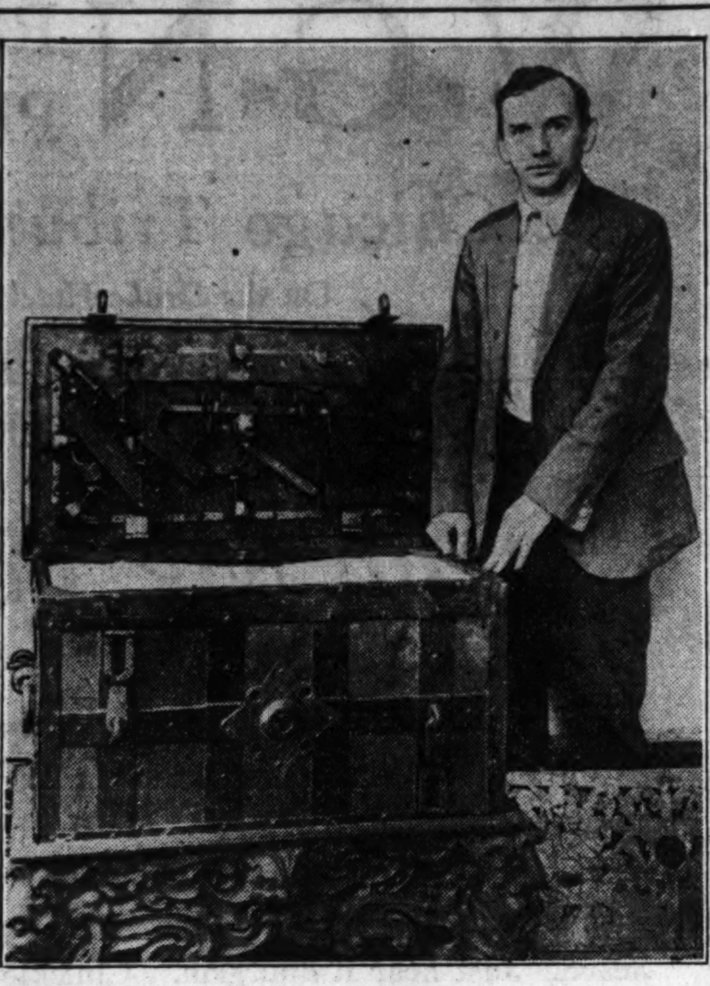
Her employer, Mrs. E. D. Griffiths, came out to tell me how glad she was that Belle had been given it.

"She's a 100 per cent dependable, Belle Taylor is," she said. "Everybody who comes here loves her."

Belle came back, flushed and eager. She is a widow, she told me, and lives at 5012 Harper avenue, and $50—well, she could do a lot with $50. Her father, down in Chalmers, Ind., would be pleased.

I went down the street, armed with Belle's blessings and thanks, and the ubiquitous kazoo.

CHEST MADE IN 1492



BACK in 1490 the King of Hanover ordered one Peter Gessner to make this chest. Peter put in two years at the task and died before his labors were finished. Eventually the chest fell into the hands of relatives of Alfred Eusepke. Mr. Eusepke, shown standing by the interesting antique, came to Chicago with his family a year ago, bringing the heirloom with him. Mr. Eusepke lives at 546 West 37th street. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

CHEERFUL

Mrs. Belle Taylor of 5012 Harper avenue offers politeness plus at a south side tea room, with the result that she is made even more cheerful than before.

Imperial Salon May Reopen in German Capital

BERLIN. — (AP) — The "Empress Hermine," wife of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, is reported to be preparing to open an imperial salon in Berlin during the coming winter season.

A well known firm which specialized in uniforms and elaborate liveries of the pre-war period has just received a large order for equipment. Other signs point to an organized attempt to revive some of the glittering pomp that marked social affairs before the war.

The former emperor's consort is said to plan a series of receptions, to which those of the old nobility who have remained faithful to the house of Hohenzollern are to be invited. These social affairs are to take place in the so-called Netherland palace, Unter den Linden, near the former imperial palace. The Netherlands palace has remained the property of the Hohenzollern family.

An attempt to give tea parties a year or two ago failed because the former courtiers could not accustom themselves to the thought of seeing some one in the place of the late Empress Auguste Victoria, whose memory is sacred to all monarchists. Princess Hermine, however, now apparently believes that enough time has elapsed and that a second attempt to open an imperial salon will be crowned with success.

MATERIAL FOR A DEBATE.

He (anxiously)—I say, Joy, what do your parents think of me?

She (lightly)—I really don't know; father hasn't said and mother is waiting for his opinion so that she can disagree with him.—Passing Show.

INSTRUCTION.

CONVERSATION—THAT'S THE SECRET OF MASTERING LANGUAGES.

And that's what has made the Berlitz School famous and foremost for the last half century. Through the utilization of sound basic psychological principles, and after years of tests and experiments, the now universally known Berlitz Conversational Method starts you talking a language your first lesson. You talk and listen every lesson with never a word of English spoken. You converse immediately—and know what you're talking about. You listen and understand. With never a dull moment you talk your way to mastery in a few months of fascinating, happy lessons. A free demonstration lesson in French, Spanish, German, Italian, etc., will show you how it's done. Call, write, or phone Harrison 0392 for an appointment.

Sound Permanent Successes.
We have the most Wonderful specialty in America.
A sensational
new Invention.

Many men go on year after year earning $40 to $50 a week, when others with no better education are making $100 a week.

Are you hanging on to a small paying job, with no future, without even enough immediate money so that you are able to accumulate a savings? Many men grow old and die at $40 to $50 a week jobs, without ever experiencing the thrill of making $100 a week and more.

Men from 25 to 45 years who are willing to work can be put into the $100 a week class in 4 to 6 weeks by our efficient method of training.

Hundreds of men have become successful in this business, not by accident but because they have a high grade, well guaranteed specialty, and a good selling plan and compensation, and last but not least have the determination and willingness to work.

We have men in our organization who have been in specialty selling for the last 5 years and who earn $5,000 to $12,000 per year.

You and I and every one else like to meet successful men and are proud to call them our friends. Any man of average ability can attain success in our business if he will pay the price to succeed. There are no secrets. Our successful men are happy to help new men.

Last week our business increased 64 per cent over any previous week. Our business is growing by leaps and bounds. If you are ambitious here is your opportunity.

Answering this ad may be the turning point of your life and an opportunity you have looked for to give your family more of the pleasures of life and your children a better education, or buy a home or an automobile or something you have longed to have.

We have helped many men to buy homes, apt. bldgs. and automobiles, and will help you and work as hard for your success and be as joyful of it as you yourself will.

We have nothing to sell you, neither do we ask you to buy anything or invest one cent of your money in samples or deposits.

If you mean business, are willing to work, clean cut, ambitious, ready to pay the price of success, you will not be wasting your time investigating this proposition.

HERE'S ELECTRIC NEWS FOR R. E. MEN AND WOMEN. THE BIGGEST SINCE THE ARMISTICE.

Advance notice of pre-opening of the most beautiful $3,000,000 development in CHICAGO [at 6600 North] and due west of the Great DEVON-WESTERN DISTRICT.

YOUR SHIP COMES IN.

Here is the rainbow of hope for real estate men and women—the means of ending all your troubles and FINANCIAL WORRIES. Here is the kind of a deal you have hoped for—wished for—yes, even prayed for, during the last two years. If you want money—need money—will work for money—THEN READ ON.

BACK TO CHICAGO.

My development represents a brand new field of operation in the choicest boom spot in America—C-H-I-C-A-G-O—backed up with millions of dollars and overripe for quick and very easy selling.

YOU NEED A BOOM SPOT.

You need a boom spot now for subdivision selling, and CHICAGO is that boom spot. I have money, and I am known as a man who spends big money to do big things. I have one of the largest and best equipped real estate offices in the Loop. I am going to take in some good men and women with me and make them rich, as I have made others who associated with me during the past ten years. FIRST COME FIRST SERVED—with the best I have to offer.

YOUR SUCCESS.

YOUR success DEPENDS on excellent close-in CHICAGO property at low prices and terms. THINK IT OVER—thousands of good salesmen fail on poor property while others, perhaps less competent, SUCCEED BIG on excellent close-in CHICAGO property.

I will take on 100 ambitious ladies and gentlemen to join a NEW SALES FORCE I am organizing, to sell out during the next six months my new 175 acre $3,000,000—CHICAGO—development, right in the great 41st WARD. My new gigantic development incorporates approximately four miles of wide parkways fronting on 80 ft. and 100 ft. boulevards, one mile of business frontage on paved full section line.

PERMANENT BEAUTY.

Over 1,000 BEAUTIFUL TREES and 10,000 SHRUBS to be planted immediately, and every square foot of the entire 175 acre development to be landscaped and seeded with LAWN GRASS [no unsightly weeds]. Property to be maintained and cared for for FIVE YEARS. I don't forget my salesmen's customers.

$250,000 Opening Sales.

The first unit IS SOLD OUT. The second unit of this gigantic development opens August 15, but already A LARGE AMOUNT OF RESERVATIONS have been made. Sounds like old times, eh? Well, a fortunate purchase for cash enables me to sell this property at LOW PRICES and terms that assure a quick sell-out. Imagine apartment lots at $995 overlooking a 960 ACRE PUBLIC PARK [AS LARGE AS LINCOLN PARK] AND 18 HOLE PUBLIC GOLF COURSE. No objectionable developments to kill your sales. EVERY SALE MULTIPLIES ITSELF. Listen? Practically all of my salesmen will be closing deals tonight and EVERY NIGHT.

10% Down—Comm. Paid.

Apt. lots $995.00—$99 cash. Business lots at $1,995—$199 cash. Don't stand in the way of your own success. Only cowards say: "I had no opportunity." Break loose from the tough, hard selling, FAR OUT, too high priced subdivisions, at half cash and 15c to 25c fare to Loop, as hard as nails to sell, and you know it.

Here Salesman Is King.

For your convenience I have built a LARGE $5,000 administration building on the property with private closing rooms. Motion pictures of this distinguished development is just another aid for you to close deals. BIG DISPLAY ads, plenty of LEADS, automobiles FREE, LUNCH for yourself and clients are yours; in fact, I stand back of you with thousands of dollars of co-operation.

I AM READY FOR YOU.

Come and see me sure Monday or Tuesday evening, August 6 or 7, at 8 p. m. sharp AND GET ALL THE FACTS. Be on time. Come with the expectation of hearing THE BIGGEST NEWS SINCE THE ARMISTICE. The men and women who will join with me at once will make BIG MONEY IMMEDIATELY. They will represent the highest paid sales people in CHICAGO. Monday or Tuesday I will show you how to earn a year's salary within the next 90 days. You will not take $1,000 FOR MY PLAN OF QUICK AND EASY SELLING.

8 P. M. Sharp, Aug. 6 or 7.

OPPORTUNITY.
BRANCH MANAGER.

One of the country's largest and longest established manufacturers of warm air furnaces and heating equipment desires the services of one or two wide awake men to take charge of direct factory branches in southern Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky cities. Chicago is not included. The proposition will be a substantial salary, and profit-sharing arrangement in addition. The merchandise is well and favorably known to the public.

Unusual co-operation will be given, intending that the man dominate the heating business in the town in which they locate him. The man chosen must be that rare combination—executive, salesman and collector. He will be given full charge of the entire branch. He will be able to present a very complete service to the home owner or home builder, for a complete heating plant direct from the factory.

This is an exceptional opportunity for a reliable and energetic man. Heating experience is not absolutely necessary, although applicants with warm air experience or knowledge will naturally be given preference, other things being equal. This would also warrant attention from one now engaged in the heating business with limited capital or an unsatisfactory line, who feels he could do bigger things with the proper backing. Probably you know such a man. If so, refer him to this advertisement, also.

No attention will be given your reply unless you set forth clearly the following information: 1st, age; 2d, married; 3d, have you car or truck, if so, what kind? 4th, a definite record of what you have been doing for the past ten years, together with earning power; 5th, what you are doing now; 6th, why you wish to change; 7th, when you can leave; 8th, what your living expenses are at present; 9th, what salary you would wish to start with; 10th, in what town you prefer to operate; 11th, tell us in your own language what you think you can do with the proper line and proper working capital.

All replies will be strictly confidential.

UNUSUAL SALES OPPORTUNITY.

The expansion policy of a nationally known well rated educational institution with offices in all principal cities has created desirable openings on its local sales staff and also exclusive territories at other points. This is an exceptional opportunity for high grade men of real selling ability to make a permanent and profitable connection.

Experience in educational selling will be helpful but not essential. Successful applicants will be thoroughly trained in result producing methods by home office executives. Reply giving sufficient personal information and details of experience to justify an interview. Address B J 409, Tribune.

WE NEED MEN TO HANDLE OUR FAST GROWING BUSINESS. MEN WITH US ARE NOW MAKING THE LARGEST EARNINGS THEY EVER ENJOYED.

Our July business showed an increase of 22% over June. That's a remarkable accomplishment. This increase was handled with 10% less men than we had in June because of vacations. This means the average earnings per man for July was approximately one-third higher than in June. In other words, our men received a 33 1-3% increase in pay in July—a very welcome action.

The August demand for our product is double the July demand. August starts the parade of big months in our business. September is always bigger than August and October always shows an increase over September. We have to get ready to handle this increase. We must enlarge our sales force to take care of this natural increase in sales opportunity.

We are a part of an international organization—a man successful with us in Chicago can be transferred to any other city, anywhere that we may desire to go. This Branch won first place in July and its men stand out prominently in the national organization; there is considerable prestige attached to a connection with this office.

Men answering this "ad" will be paid more money than they ever earned before. Our men are earning more for every eight hour day of intelligent effort than is being paid anywhere else in the country.

Mr. B., a sawmill salesman, made $115 the first three days of last week.

Mr. T., a native Chinaman preparing to represent us in China, made $184 the last eight days of July.

Mr. W. formerly sold pies and other bakery products. He made $750 in salary and commission with us during the month of July.

Mr. S., a musician, member of a well known orchestra and without previous sales experience, joined us the middle of July and has averaged $92 per week right from the start.

Mr. W., a former ball player, made $322 exclusive of $100 in prize money from the 23d to the 31st of July. He never made that much any month of his life before joining this organization.

Mr. DeP., a former railway machinist, made $230 in the same period. This is his first sales experience.

Mr. R., a former washing machine salesman, made $628 during July. He has been with us five months, and each month has shown an increase. He should receive over $10,000 in the next twelve months.

These records were made in Chicago during the month of July.

These men are instances selected at random and the figures are taken direct from our records. Many of these men were persuaded to investigate our offer because their wives read the "ad" and urged their husbands to look into it. It's the wife and family that suffer most when the pay envelope is small. We have made many a happy, contented, prosperous home where hard times had become almost a habit.

The man who comes with us can make a permanent connection. He need not be a salesman because we can make one out of him. He has no investment to make. He connects with an old established firm, rated in the millions. He does dignified work—represents a nationally advertised product, starts to earn right away and sets his own limit, both on earnings and on his future.

Many men who started with us—just as the men who reply to this will start, have within a period of three or four years through a series of promotions, risen to positions paying from $5,000 to $50,000 per year. That opportunity still exists.

So that actually it's up to any man between 25 and 45, honestly desiring to improve himself, and add to the comforts of his family, to investigate this offer. What others are doing, he can do and we will show him how. And as an investigation carries no obligation, the family that needs more money has a right to criticize the husband and father if he does not find out what it's all about.

Now is the time to get in and reap the rewards of the big increase in business that we always get in the fall. So see Mr. Gallagher, Monday, between 9 and 11 or 2 and 5. If an evening appointment is desired telephone him at Wabash 8180 and arrange for an evening interview.

THE INEVITABLE

Higher Rents Are Coming.

With the steady increase in population, the World's Fair, and practically no building sites available near the lake front, you have but one alternative—Pay the rent asked or move back into a less desirable locality.

Don't Be Caught Again.

As you were in 1920.

Buy a Co-Operative Apt.

We have 4, 5 and 6 rm. apts. between Sheridan-rd. and Broadway in 3 story bldg. We are the only firm who have these inexpensive apts. in a walk-up bldg. in the Lincoln Park district. When these are gone, you will be compelled to pay the price of tall construction together with the high upkeep of the elevator bldgs. with no better arrangement of nice sized rooms and in no better location that the apts. we now offer. Compare the location, the apt., the upkeep and the price.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

It is easy to figure the exact amount which you will be charged on a second mortgage loan made through the agency of the Chicago Morris Plan Bank. Our rate is 6% interest plus a commission of:

3½% for 1 year.
6½% for 2 years.
9% for 3 years.

Suppose you desire $2,000 for two years, the commission will be $130—no more and no less.

That is the beauty of the one-price system which is used throughout the Morris Plan. The goods are marked with a readable tag, there is no variation, or exception, no dickering, bickering, or any other element of trading.

Come in—you will like us and the way we make second mortgages.

LINCOLN

Factory Policy Favors Reconditioned Car Buyers

The long established Lincoln policy of producing no radically changed yearly models works out to the especial benefit of the reconditioned Lincoln buyer. Regardless of its age, the car he selects is not "dated" by extreme or eccentric appearance. In fact, many of the most admired automobiles on the boulevards today are Lincolns that have seen several years of service. Designed according to true standards of beauty and good taste, they remain "young" where cars offered to please a whim of the moment grow old in a season or two.

Reconditioned Lincolns sell for $1,500 to $3,500. At these prices they rank among the greatest values on the automobile market today. Their handsome appearance is matched only by their splendid mechanical condition, both of these qualities being results of scientific reconditioning by the AUTHORIZED DEALERS. These dealers' familiarity with Lincoln construction and Lincoln standards of excellence enables them to restore the cars to something closely approaching their original beauty and serviceability.

Talk to the AUTHORIZED LINCOLN DEALER near you about reconditioned Lincolns. He is an expert on fine cars and a business man of unquestioned standing in the community, therefore the information he gives you may be accepted as fact. It will convince you that reconditioned Lincolns offer the most value per dollar of any car you can select.
